Talks At Prison Recessed

ATTICA, N.Y. (UPI)—A citizens' group met with rebellious convicts holding 30 hostages at the Attica State Correction facility today, but the talks were recessed pending the arrival of Black Panther leaders Bobby Seale and Huey Newton as mediators in the three-day revolt.

The hasitly composed citizens' committee which included the publisher of a black newspaper met with the prisoners for more than 4-1-2 hours in what was called aprenegotiating session. It had been scheduled to last only 45 minutes.

The talks were recessed to await the arrival of Seale and Newton whose presence was demanded by the inmates. A spokesman for the Black Panther party in Oakland, Calif., said Seale would arrive by nightfall. There was no indication whether Newton would appear.

A spokesman for the delegation said the commissioner of the state department of corrections would be asked to sit in on the talks.

The purpose of the prenegotiations was to formalize the conditions and demands of later talks with prison officials.

The list of demands rose to 30, including a call for the resignation or dismissal of Vincent R. Mancusi as prison superintendent. Earlier demands voiced by some inmates included a call for transportation out of the country, payment of minimum wages for prison work and true religious freedom.

During the overnight meeting —held out of doors in a courtyard near cellblock D— inmates saw what they believed to be armed National Guard personnel on a nearby rooftop. The talks were halted for an hour and a half until the prisoners were certain there would be no trouble.

The delegation of nearly two dozen mediators included a noted criminal lawyer, a black newspaper publisher, state legislators and a congressman of Puerto Rican descent. They made a 3-1-2 hour tour of the rebel-held cellblock accompanied by newsmen Friday night, then returned to the same area without reporters.

The Rev. Raymond Bradley, an Episcopal minister, emerged from the prison to tell newsmen the delegation hoped to iron out a final set of inmate demands, then present the list -along with its own recommendations to prison officials, who would then re-enter the negotiations.

The rioting broke out Thursday night when more than half of the institution's 2,200 inmates took over a section of the prison. One guard was seriously injured when he was thrown from a second story window.

A spokesman for the State Department of Corrections placed the number of men not under the prison's control at 1,281, based on a headcount of inmates held in secure areas. Fifty-five per cent of the institution's 2,200 inmates are non-white, while an estimated 65 per cent of the rebels were believed to be non-white, the spokesman said.

The citizens' group was pressed into service as a means of communication after direct talks between leaders of the revolt and state authorities broke down in shouting.

The prisoners, who issued a list of 15 demands within hours of the outbreak, added more demands, including a call for free passage to a "nonimperialistic country" for those who so desired.

Dismissal Of Zink Is Upheld

The Sausalito City Council voted unanimously last night to uphold the May 1970 dismissal of Sausalito police Sgt. Thomas H. Zink.

The 33-year-old officer, who said the council's decision was "a miserable excuse for justice" but "not unexpected," promised to continue in the courts his 16-month fight to regain his job.

By its action, the council rejected the conclusion of a state hearing officer who had recommended in January that Zink be reinstated but demoted to patrolman.

Mayor Alexander R. Imlay told the Independent-Journal the council had arrived at its decision because it believed "Zink did not measure up to the high standards set for Sausalito police officers or to the requirements of a professional."

The police sergeant was fired from the department after 11 years on the force. At that time, his superior officers charged him with a variety of offenses including, "arriving for work late, out of uniform, and with the odor of alcohol on his breath."

He was also accused of "negligent use of a firearm," "emotional instability" and "inability to maintain a satisfactory relationship with subordinate officers."

Hearing Officer Paul A. Winton later ruled there was insufficient evidence to support many of the charges.

In March the council, after failing to reach a decision in

Abernathy Sneaks Talk With Angela

Rev. Ralph Abernathy, successor to Martin Luther King, sneaked a five-minute conversation yesterday with Angela Davis while Marin County Jail officials tried to tell him he couldn't talk to her.

The head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference told Miss Davis she was looking well and added, "We're with you all the way. We're doing everything we can."

Their conversation on a jail visiting telephone took place while a harried British television crew was attempting to interview Miss Davis, who is awaiting trial on charges stemming from the August 1970 shoot-out at the Civic Center.

While Abernathy argued with jail officials at one end of the jail lobby, Miss Davis sat behind a glass partition at the other end, waiting while the television crew tried to get their lights working.

After being told he could not see the former college instructor, Abernathy demanded to talk to Stinson. While a jailer went to get Stinson, Abernathy crossed the lobby, picked up an intercom telephone and talked with Miss Davis.

After Stinson broke up the conversation, Abernathy continued to protest, saying "I've been in jail about 30 times myself and I've never been in a jail that doesn't allow ministers.

Stinson told him Rev. Cecil Williams of San Francisco had been named by Miss Davis as her spiritual adviser.

Abernathy responded by telling Stinson, "I'll be praying for you."

He said later he would further protest his exclusion from the jail.

"I don't think it's fair," he said. "It's a racist system."

Abernathy, was in the Bay Area to address a Baptist convention in San Francisco.

Thieu Says His Future Will Depend On Electorate

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam said today he will quit if the vote of confidence he has requested in the one-man Oct. 3 presidential election is "less than half of the number of the electors who go to vote."

Thieu, speaking on nationwide television, laid down the ground rules for the election. He had announced Sept. 2 that he would ask the people for a vote of confidence after his two opponents, Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky and Gen. Duong Van (Big) Minh, dropped out of the race alleging that Thieu was rigging the election.

There are 7,085,943 registered voters. There were no estimates on how many would go to the polls, although the National Assembly election in August produced a near-record 78.3 per cent of the vote.

Thieu said he would need 50 per cent of the turnout to consider his remaining in office a mandate from the people.

Meanwhile South Vietnamese Rangers engaged Communist forces today in the first significant fighting of the nearly week-long Saigon government offensive to disrupt Communist supply lines along the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

The Rangers fought a small North Vietnamese force two hours after American helicopters had airlifted South Vietnamese Black Panther troops in an attempt to draw the Communists out into battle.

In a brief exchange of small arms and grenade fire the Rangers killed three North Vietnamese. Ten minutes later a mile to the southeast the Rangers killed two more Communists in a similar skirmish.

UPI Correspondent Stewart Kellerman reported from the U.S. combat base at Quang Tri that the Rangers suffered no casualties of their own in either clash. The Black Panthers were fanning out a mile away in an effort to make further contact with the Communists.

Six miles south of Khe Sanh and three miles northeast of the Laotian border, a South Vietnamese infantry battalion today discovered a newly built dirt road leading from Laos toward Khe Sanh.

Khrushchev Dies In Moscow At 77

Charted Russia's Course After Stalin

MOSCOW (UPI) — Former Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, the coarse by cunning peasant who loosened the chains of Stalinism and was ousted in 1964 by the present ruling troika, died today. He was 77.

In death he remained an "unperson" officially denied recognition as a hero of the Soviet Union he served, rawly and often bluntly, as a co-leader from Stalin's death in 1953 until 1958 and then as supreme ruler until his dismissal.

Family friends said Khrushchev suffered a massive heart attack at his country home 25 miles west of Moscow. He was taken to the Kremlin hospital and died there before noon.

Khrushchev will be buried, probably Monday, in Moscow's Novodevichy Cemetery, family friends said. It is a political graveyard that ranks second in prestige to the Kremlin Wall, the pantheon of Soviet heroes.

He was earthy and direct, even at the apex of power. He loved jokes, savored the limelight. Friends said the punishment of utter political silence after 1964 hurt him most.

As his earthy manners suggested, Khrushchev was born a peasant. The heights of power to which he ascended never robbed him of the blunt good humor he acquired as a boy in the village of Kalinovka, 130 miles south of Moscow where he was born on April 17, 1894.

Many of his contemporaries, especially sophisticated city dwellers, resented such earthiness in a national leader. They regarded him as a buffoon and they were relieved when he fell from power in 1964.

But others respected Khrushchev's honesty even as they winced at some of his jokes, and they trusted him in every crisis.

Khrushchev's life was a chronicle of crises, from his struggle to survive in the miserable conditions of a prerevolutionary coal mine to his losing battle with old age and death.

The hardships of the mines and the resentment they caused made Khrushchev a Bolshevik in 1918. He was on the ground floor of the new system, and he rose quickly within it. He became coal mine manager and local party leader and soon he was in Moscow where he caught the eye of Stalin's closest lieutenants.

Khrushchev survived Stalin's purges, rising quickly through the ranks of the Central Committee of the party to become Stalin's chief assistant in the Ukraine. After World War II, in which he served as a political general, he worked on restoration of the ravaged Ukraine and then returned to Moscow.

He never was among those considered likely to succeed Stalin, a fact that stood him in good stead when the dictator died in 1953.

In the vicious power struggle that followed, Stalin's heirs apparent made Khrushchev party chief because they thought him a harmless outsider. They found out how wrong they were during the five years it took Khrushchev to gather to himself all the threads of power.

Even before then, Khrushchev was changing the Soviet

Antibusing Forces To Nation's Courts

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Antibusing forces carried their fight against school integration plans to the nation's courts and streets Friday while in San Francisco officials conducted a dress rehearsal for the court-ordered busing plan which will carry half the city's grade school pupils to new schools Monday.

An ordinance extending indefinitely a sundown to sunrise curfew imposed the night before has been passed by the Lubbock, Tex. City Council following racial troubles over the slaying of a black teen-ager at an integrated high school.

on police from rooftops. One policeman was wounded in the neck and two others were hospitalized with injuries, one after he was struck by a car.

Fires broke out in Lubbock's Negro and Mexican-American neighborhoods and windows were smashed in about 25 business establishments before police were able to restore order.

Authorities said the violence erupted as a group of blacks were heading home from a march on City Hall. The group demanded action against a white youth charged with the shooting death of William Collier, 16, at Dunbar high school.

In Detroit six men linked by federal authorities to the Michigan Ku Klux Klan were arraigned before a U.S. magistrate on charges of conspiring to bomb 10 school buses at Pontiac a week before a court-ordered school busing desegregation program was to have begun.

Nine women, arrested earlier this week in turbulent antibusing demonstrations in Pontiac, pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct charges and chose to spend 15 days in jail rather than pay $100 fines. Five of them had chained themselves to bus depot gates to prevent the vehicles from leaving. Yesterday, however, buses moved out on schedule and without incident for the first time since school opened Tuesday.

In Jacksonville, Fla., school bus drivers were instructed to check their vehicles thoroughly after a brown paper sack containing a homemade dynamite bomb was discovered underneath one of the buses. Investigators said if the bomb had exploded it would have destroyed the bus and damaged surrounding buildings. The device, consisting of 14 sticks of dynamite and a timer, had been placed under the gas tank sometime during the night.

The attempted bombing was the first incident reported as Duval County completed the first week of the new school term under a court-ordered busing desegregation program.

Parents of children in the 85,000-pupil Pinellas County school system appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court Friday to stay an expanded school busing program for the St. Petersburg, Fla. area.

In another Supreme Court action Justice William O. Douglas refused to halt a new high school integration plan for San Mateo County, Calif., saying that it was too late and further delay might "imperil the new school year."

Israeli Troops Down Cairo Jet

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The Israeli government said its troops today shot down an Egyptian jet as it flew over the northern end of the Suez Canal, and the Israeli armed forces chief of staff said the possibility of another Middle East war "definitely exists."

Two Sukho 17 fighter-bombers were fired on by Israelis as they reportedly buzzed positions on the West Bank and one was seen going down on the East Bank of the Canal, Israelis said. It was the most serious incident in 13 months of the Middle East cease fire.

Earlier in the day, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Haim Bar-Lev told a radio interviewer the possibility of another war exists but that Israel is prepared and will not be taken by a surprise Egyptian attack.

Israel in war, he said, will attempt to safeguard its security without involving the Soviet troops in Egypt. But a situation may arise that "may oblige the Soviets in Egypt — the Russian troops —to take steps undesirable to us," he said.

The number of Soviet advisers in Egypt is estimated to number between 15,000 and 20,000.

Bar-Lev said Israeli strategy in a new war will be to sit tight except for some behind-the-lines raids and hold on to the territory it now occupies rather than attempt to take more Arab land. He said he was confident Israeli warplanes could destroy Egypt's network of Soviet-built antiaircraft missiles on the western bank of the Suez Canal.

"In my view, there is a possibility that Egypt will renew the fighting," Bar-Lev said. "Such a possibility definitely exists...I believe we are adequately assured and that we shall not be confronted by surprises" from Egypt.

In Egypt, President Anwar Sadat led more than eight mil-

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Luna 18 Lost

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union lost its Luna 18 unmanned moon probe today in an "unlucky" landing attempt in a rugged stretch of lunar mountains, the news agency Tass said.

The agency said the ship fired its landing rockets after 54 orbits around the moon and began a descent into a "mountainous terrain which is of great scientific interest.

"Measurements show that the moon landing of the station in these difficult topographical conditions was unlucky," Tass said. "Communications with the station stopped at 10:48 Moscow time (3:48 a.m. EDT)."

Abortion Study

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court agreed Friday to decide the constitutionality of the state's therapeutic abortion law.

The high court agreed to accept the case after two districts of the state court of appeal handed down opposing verdicts—one upholding the law and the other saying it unconstitutionally limited abortions.

General Cleared

SAIGON (UPI)—Lt. Gen. Ngo Dzu, a top South Vietnamese field commander, has been cleared of charges by a U.S. congressman that he ran a narcotics ring providing heroin to American soldiers, Vietnamese military sources said today.

Dzu was exonerated of any involvement in drug running by a South Vietnamese Defense Department investigating team which presented its report to President Nguyen Van Thieu a week ago, the sources said.

Two-Hour Battle

BELFAST, NORTHERN IRELAND (UPI)—British soldiers fought a two-hour gun battle with snipers early today and wounded two men believed by the army to be members of the Irish Republican Army (IRA), an army spokesman said.

The spokesman said the shooting broke out in the Roman Catholic Ardoyne area and that two men were wounded in Fairfield Street. One man was seen being carried into a nearby school and another was being treated for a back wound in a local hospital, the spokesman said.

'Dream Come True'

BART Readying Valentine Gift

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The public may get its first chance to ride on the new Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) district trains on next Valentine's day, and a trip won't cost a dime.

BART General Manager B.R. Stockes told the district board of directors Thursday that service would begin in March. He said progress on the vast network was proceeding on schedule.

Stones said the Valentine's day free rides on Feb. 14 would provide "an opportunity for our own people to become accustomed to serving the public."

Storm Watchers Keeping Close Check On Movements Of Edith

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tropical storms Edith, Fern and Ginger menaced residents of the Texas coast, the sparsely settled Yucatan Peninsula and the Atlantic resort island of Bermuda today. But none was considered especially dangerous.

The National Hurricane Center in Miami said, however, that Edith could regenerate into a dangerous hurricane after it crossed the Yucatan Peninsula and emerged into the Gulf of Mexico this evening.

Tropical storm Fern, meanwhile, continued its slow, southwestward drift along the central Texas coast after battering the Corpus Christi area most of the night with gale winds and up to six inches of rain.

In the Atlantic Ocean some 300 miles south of Bermuda, tropical storm Ginger built winds of 70 miles an hour as it moved northeastward. Although Ginger was not expected to intensify into a major storm, forecasters said it would probably become a "minimal" hurricane later today.

Edith was packing 170 miles an hour winds early Friday when it screamed out of the Caribbean sea into the tiny Honduran village of Puerto Limpara, howled across the 8,500-foot high Honduran mountains and emerged into the Gulf of Honduras south of Belize, the capital of British Honduras.

Red Cross teams began making their way toward the small fishing villages along the Honduran coast that were hit.

Japan Is Reported Against U.S. Wish Of Revaluing Yen Upward

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Japanese emissaries say Japan will refuse to adopt U. S. proposals to revalue the yen upward and to recognize two Chinas in the United Nations.

The emissaries met with President Nixon and State Department officials Friday to discuss the proposals.

The only progress made during two days of talks on the U. S. trade deficit of $2.8 billion a year with Japan was an announced agreement that new discussions would be scheduled.

The United States insisted on revaluation of the yen. The Japanese delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda, declined to respond to the request, but urged again removal of the 10 per cent surcharge on foreign imports that Nixon imposed Aug. 15.

"Japan is willing to render cooperation in many ways, but the upward revaluation of the yen is not one of them," said Japanese Finance Minister Mikio Mizuta.

Mizuta said the United States is similar to a "sick but still very strong person ... (and) because it is still a very strong person it refuses to take the medicine which everybody else knows is good for it."

Before a 40-minute meeting with Nixon, Fukuda told a news conference the United States "adequately understands why Japan cannot become a cosponsor" of a U.S. resolution to seat both mainland and nationalist Chinas in the United Nations.

Fukuda and Nixon exchanged cordial toasts at a black-tie dinner at the White House Friday night, but it was clear the breach still existed.

"I'm confident our relations are as firm today as they ever have been before," Fukuda toasted. "However, it is also true there has been some friction in our economic relations."

The Japanese delegation also said that present monetary problems, sparked largely by the dollar situation, will not be solved during the conference of the Group of 10 industrialized nations set to begin Wednesday in London.

The crux of the problem is that inexpensive Japanese-made goods have flooded the U.S. market while comparatively more costly American products have had a hard time competing in Japan. As a result, the United States imports $2.8 billion more worth of Japanese goods each year than it sells U.S. goods to Japan.

Opera Matches First Nighters

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco's 49th opera season got off to its traditional glittering start Friday night, but for a change, the opera matched the audience in splendor.

Superstar soprano Beverly Sills opened the 1971 season with Massenet's "Manon," in what critics agreed was a rarity, a major opening night hit.

New Attempt To Exhume Judge's Body

The court-appointed attorney for San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee yesterday filed in Marin Superior Court two new affidavits which he hopes will help convince a judge to order that Judge Harold J. Haley's body be exhumed.

Attorney Ernest L. Graves is seeking a new autopsy in an attempt to show that the shot which killed the judge in the Aug. 7, 1970 shoot-out at the Civic Center was not fired by Magee.

Dr. John Manwaring, the pathologist who performed the autopsy, has said that he was not sure whether a shotgun blast to the head or a bullet wound in the chest killed the judge.

Yesterday Graves filed affidavits in which Dr. Manwaring said that he had changed his mind last month about the fatal wounds suffered by two other persons who died in the shootout.

The pathologist said that after consultation with ballistic experts and examination of the clothing worn by Jonathan Jackson and San Quentin inmate William Christmas he had reversed his earlier conclusions.

In both instances the doctor said that what he had said were exit wounds were actually entrance wounds.

Graves apparently hopes that the doctor's admission of his mistakes will point up what he considers the need for a new autopsy on the judge.

Judge Richard E. Arnason of Contra Costa County has set a hearing for Sept. 22 on the exhumation request and has set that time for Judge Haley's widow to come forward if she wishes to protest.

Federal Aid Sought For Marin Jobs

Marin County officials yesterday submitted an application for $252,100 in federal funds to provide about 27 jobs for unemployed persons in the county.

County Personnel Director Maren Rinne said the Federal Emergency Employment Act of 1971 provided for the $252,100 if the county matches that with $28,011 in local funds.

Cities within the county will have a chance to apply for some of those funds. Mrs. Rinne said the exact allocation of funds and jobs to various cities and to the county is still to be determined.

The Federal Manpower Administration must approve the county's application, and this approval is not expected for at least a month.

When and if the jobs are created, the Emergency Employment Act of 1971 provides that Vietnam veterans must be given preference for the positions.

Source Of Botulism In Soup—A Mystery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spokesmen for the Food and Drug Administration and the Campbell Soup Co. still do not know exactly what caused the botulism that contaminated chicken vegetable soup canned by Campbell's in Paris, Tex.

FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards told a House Commerce subcommittee Friday that the plant was found to be clean and modern and that scientists have theories but that tests to pinpoint the exact cause are not completed.

Last month, Campbell's recalled thousands of cans of the soup after tests indicated botulism, a deadly poison, in some cans. The firm later recalled cans of vegetarian vegetable soup after bacteria spores were found in samples of the soup.

Edwards told the subcommittee he will complete within the next two weeks a series of proposals for improving FDA inspection methods including a recommendation that the 60,000 food manufacturing plants be federally licensed.

Edwards said that through licensing "we could see to it that they had certain types of technical help we feel are necessary in a modern food plant and also compile a complete list of manufacturers.

He said that a doubling ofthe FDA's $100 million annual budget would be needed to improve inspection techniques with the bulk of the increase going to expansion of the FDA's present force of 250 field and port inspectors.

The extra effort required for the Campbell's recall and the Bon Vivant case in which one man died from eating botulism contaminated soup plus the mercury-in-tuna investigation caused cancellation of thousands of scheduled plant inspections, Edwards said.

E. M. Nuckols Jr., a senior vice president of Campbell Soup Co., testified his company had produced 100 billion cans of food over 102 years without a recall due to botulism toxin.

"Until several hypotheses can be checked by inoculated and incubated test packs —which will require several weeks —it is too early to make any statements concerning the cause," Nuckols said.

However, he said from what is known now "several most unusual circumstances" could have ocurred simultaneously and combined to impede effective heat penetration into the center of a few cans.

Heat penetration is affected by a number of circumstances including density of the product, moisture content and temperature of the soup in the cans when they enter the cooker — all factors Nuckols said are carefully monitored by inspectors.

Judge Sentences Three For San Rafael Sit-In

Three persons were sentenced yesterday and a warrant issued for a fourth on charges stemming from a May 5 sit-in at the San Rafael office of the U.S. Selective Service.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court set bail at $100 on the warrant for Richard Alan Raznikov, 24, of San Rafael, who failed to appear for sentencing yesterday.

Raznikov, a law student and former unsuccessful candidate for mayor of San Rafael, pleaded guilty in June to a charge of failing to disperse.

Three others who also earlier pleaded guilty to the failing to disperse charge were sentenced yesterday.

Driver Hurt In Accident

A San Rafael man was reported in poor condition at Marin General Hospital with a possible head injury and cut chin following an automobile accident early today in Nicasio.

The man, William J. McCarter, 32, of 79 Woodland Avenue, was a passenger in a car driven by Clifton R. Bauer, 51, of 108 Central Avenue, Woodacre, California Highway Patrol officers said.

Bauer was driving north on San Geronimo-Nicasio Road about 185 feet south of Lucas Valley Road at 1:15 a.m. when he told officers he saw lights in front of him and his vehicle started skidding.

Further details about the accident were not available.

Educator: College Humor Nearly Dead

NEW YORK (UPI) —College humor is nearly dead, according to Dario Politella, associate professor of English at the University of Massachusetts and author of "The Illustrated Anatomy of Campus Humor."

He cites student' preoccupation with the state of world affairs as the reason.

Actress Pier Angeli Is Found Dead

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI)—Pier Angeli, the copper-haired, Italian-born actress who carried on an international child custody fight with former husband Vic Damone, was found dead Friday. She was 39.

An autopsy was scheduled today to determine the cause of death.

The actress' body was found in the apartment of a friend, Helena Sorell, Miss Angeli's first acting coach when she arrived in the United States in the early 1950s.

Miss Sorell said the actress, who had just finished filming a science fiction picture in Hollywood last month, had been in "good spirits" the day before her death but had been under a physician's care for a stomach disorder.

The petite, green-eyed actress, born Anna Maria Pierangeli, was under contract with MGM during the 1950s and appeared in a series of romance and historical films, starring with Paul Newman in "Somebody Up There Likes Me" and "The Silver Chalice."

Miss Sorell said late Friday the actress' family had been notified in Italy and in France, where her sister, actress Marisa Pavan, resides. Family members were expected to fly in today to make funeral arrangements.

Miss Angeli, who pronounced her first name "Peer," married singer Damone in a 700-guest ceremony in 1954. The marriage ended after four years with their international domestic difficulties, chiefly a child custody fight, waged in headlines.

A bitter custody fight over their son, Perry, was resolved in 1965, but not before Damone and his "hot Italian temper" filed a bench warrant for his wife for "spiriting against a court order. Damone has custody of Perry, now 16.

Miss Angeli made few films in the late 1960s, preferring to live in seclusion in Beverly Hills.

Khruschev Dies In Moscow At 77

Union's attitude toward the world, and toward itself. He made "peaceful coexistence—a recurrent phrase in the record of Russian Communism—the cornerstone of Soviet foreign policy.

At home, he began to ease the rigid political controls imposed by Stalin, and in 1956 he stunned his countrymen and the world by directly attacking the dictator's memory. His speech at the 20th party congress that year denounced Stalin as a tyrant, a murderer, a liar and military bungler.

His apparent liberalism led to unrest in the oppressed Soviet bloc countries and political pressure from orthodox Communists — until Khrushchev crushed the Hungarian revolt with tanks in 1956, and he smashed opposition at home a year later.

His opponents misjudged Khrushchev's political acumen and lost a dramatic Central Committee showdown in 1957. When the dust settled, a half dozen former top Kremlin leaders were out of power and Khrushchev's authority was unchallenged.

With his power secure, Khrushchev set about using it. He traveled extensively and met scores of foreign leaders. He impressed some, like Britain's Harold Macmillan, and quarreled with others, including then Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Later he met, and was impressed by, President John F. Kennedy, but he cared less for his fellow Communist, Mao Tse-tung, and he presided over the explosive breakdown in relations between China and the Soviet Union.

Khrushchev traveled extensively through the United States in 1959 and it looked for a time as if America and the Soviet Union would come to terms. But then came the U2 incident, and in his rage Khrushchev scuttled the 1961 Paris summit conference.

There ensued a time of troubles in East-West relations — first Berlin, then Khrushchev's heckling of a speech by a Philippine U.N. delegate by banging a shoe on his desk in the General Assembly chamber of the United Nations.

The greatest crisis came in 1962 when a frightened world watched the Cuban missile crisis unfold. Khrushchev backed down, and in defeat earned the respect of many who were his enemies.

It did his reputation no good at home, however. Though nobody outside the Kremlin knew it, Khrushchev was under attack because of agricultural problems and his enemies were at work against him. To the surprise of the world, Khrushchev "retired" in October, 1964.

He got the same treatment he had given his own opponents: not death, but obscurity. Khrushchev became an "unperson," never mentioned in public and seldom seen outside the country house where he spent his final years puttering, painting and gardening.

He was allowed but one brief respite from the "prison of silence." In response to publication of his alleged memoirs ir the west, Khrushchev issued a statement expressing "indignation" and declaring the memoirs a fabrication.

Growth Pattern Of San Mateo County Dwindles

REDWOOD CITY (UPI)—The population of San Mateo County, one of California's fastest growing urban areas in recent years, has come to a virtual standstill.

The reasons, county officials said, were a diminishing supply of buildable land, high costs, depressed economic conditions and a growing national disenchantment with California living."

Only 500 persons were added to the county's population of 556,234 last year. It was the smallest annual growth in San Mateo County since the early 1900s.

Use Of Buses, Ferries To Seashore Is Proposed

Use of Golden Gate Bridge District buses and ferries to relieve automobile traffic pressure on Point Reyes National Seashore was proposed yesterday by San Francisco Supervisor Ronald Pelosi.

With most of the 970,000 persons who visited the seashore last year coming by car, he said, the traffic "tended to congest the very park facilities they were coming to visit."

Pelosi, also a director of the bridge district, raised his proposal before a meeting of the full board. It was referred to the transportation committee, which set a meeting at 9:30 a.m. next Friday in toll plaza offices to consider the proposal.

Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum, chairman of the committee, called the early meeting so the district can present its intentions at public hearings later this month on the master plan for the seashore. The National Park Service will hold the hearings Sept. 22 and 23 in the Civic Center, both starting at 9 a.m.

Pelosi, echoing fears raised by conservationists, said "it is imperative that steps be taken now so as to avoid the fate that almost overcame Yosemite."

As a minimum, Pelosi said, the district should provide service from San Francisco to the seashore using ferries to Sausalito and Larkspur which would link with district buses to the seashore.

He noted that the district's planned ferries will be able to go out the Golden Gate and take tourists directly to the seashore. The Coast Guard certificate for the district's current Sausalito ferry does not allow service outside the Golden Gate.

Pelosi stressed the desirability of direct weekend ferry service to the seashore. The National Park Service's master plan also envisions direct ferry service.

The San Francisco supervisor also suggested that bicycle paths link the bridge and the seashore.

Marin City Firehouse Bids High

A new firehouse and sheriff's substation in Marin City will cost considerably more than the $77,000 estimated architects Gerson-Overstreet of Oakland.

Six bids, opened yesterday at the Marin Civic Center, ranged from $92,082 to $107,777.

Michael A. Chrystal, senior administrative analyst who presided at the bid opening, said the bids will be reviewed and presented to the Marin County Board of Supervisors, probably on Sept. 21.

The apparent low bidder was API Specialty Construction Co. of 110 San Carlos Avenue, San Rafael, which offered to do the job for $92,082.

Two other competitive bids were $94,248 by Al Allen and Son of 25 Buckelew Street, Marin City and $95,160 by M. Worden Builder of 133 Pearlta Avenue, Mill Valley.

Span Board Orders Negotiations For Site To Store Bus Fleet

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, faced with the coming rainy season and the simultaneous arrival of a fleet of 152 buses, yesterday reluctantly authorized the district's attorney to negotiate a lease for a temporary site to store and maintain the fleet.

The district's site on Highway 17 east of the San Rafael Post Office will not be ready for use when the bus system begins operation in December. It may not even be ready for a year, Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring cautioned.

He argued strongly for a temporary lease on the adjacent Ghilotti Brothers property at 517 Jacoby Street, but several directors objected loudly to the asking price — almost $6,200 a month. They suggested other sites be sought.

Luehring insisted, however, that "it's the only one" meeting the district's immediate need. Director Daniel F. Del Carlo of San Francisco agreed, saying the Ghilotti site "is made to order for us."

Director Edwin M. Fraser of Del Norte County, declaring the cost of the lease was "just too damn much," said the district's own site should have been made useable instead.

Luehring noted that the district lost three months waiting for the federal government to approve the 10-acre site for possible inclusion in the district's pending application for a federal grant.

The Ghilotti lease would include two and a half acres and 10,000 feet in the company's warehouse on the site.

The final motion authorizing negotiation for a lease on the Ghilotti site stressed that all available sites also will be considered.

Directors also authorized the staff to investigate the feasibility of a permanent satellite bus transit site of about seven acres near Gnoss Field in Novato. No additional information on this parcel was disclosed.

Staff negotiation for two other sites also was authorized, one in Santa Rosa and one in San Francisco. The Santa Rosa site, about five acres at Coddingtown Airport, also would be a bus transit satellite facility as in Novato.

These two facilities would save the cost of returning all buses to San Rafael at the ends of their runs.

The fourth site was proposed in San Francisco for midday storage of buses at Third and Perry streets. The property is owned by the state, and leased by Jackson Square Garage Inc.

Golden Gate Bridge District Board Also:

FINGER — Denied a $30,000 injury claim by Clayton Carter of Sausalito for a finger he said was damaged when a door on the Sausalito ferry closed on it.

UNIONS —Recognized the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific and the Marine Engineers Benevolent Association as representing ferry crews, and agreed to requests by the unions to leave the crews in union pension benefit systems instead of transferring them to the district's state system, which would cost the men their accumulated union benefits.

SALARIES — Approved a salary schedule totaling about $3.7 million for the bus transit system, which will have 293 employees.

SMART — Authorized a second $25,000 for Richard Smart of San Francisco, the district's special counsel working on its applications for federal funds.

FERRY — Received report from Luehring that a new monthly record of 148,339 was set in August aboard the Sausalito ferry.

FURNITURE — Authorized purchase of office furniture and equipment for the new bus system through the state.

TOLLS — Accepted the proposal of Traffic Classifying Counters of American to furnish a treadle relay logic system for $4,515 to replace the original toll equipment.

TICKETS — Bought 93,300 commute books for the first six months of next year from International Business Machines Corp. for $15,581.

KAISER — Accepted a staff recommendation that Kaiser Engineers' environmental control division be hired for $5,000 to prepare an environmentla impact report on the district's planned ferryboat system.

Land Sale To Be Considered

The Mill Valley School District board will consider at a meeting Monday selling a five-acre site to the Tamalpais Valley Community Services District.

The school board will meet at 8 p.m. at the Park School, 360 East Blithedale Avenue.

Supt. James A. Collins said the Tamalpais Valley property which was bought by the school district a few years ago for a school site is no longer needed for a school and money from the sale could be used for Middle School.

Astronomer To Speak To Club

Dr. Joseph S. Miller, astronomer from Lick Observatory, will speak to the Star Observers of Marin at 8 p.m. Sept. 30 in the supervisors chambers at the Marin Civic Center.

Dr. Miller will discuss: "New Instruments to Study Old Subjects; the Electronic Revolution in Astronomy."

He will use slides to illustrate his talk.

A SEWING machine is handy with seven children and a husband to be kept neat. Vernice Cage and her husband John have opened their Berkeley home to six mentally retarded children as foster parents. The children are on leave from Sonoma State Hospital and spend all their time at the Cage home. The couple also have a 17-year-old daughter who lives at home.

THEIR HOME OVERFLOWS

Foster Parents To Handicapped

By THOMAS C. MILLER.

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)— Sometimes when Vernice Cage takes her six children to the park she is asked, "Are you their nurse?"

"When I don't feel like explaining," Mrs. Cage said in an interview, "I just answer, 'No, they're mine' — which they are really."

MRS. CAGE and her husband John, a postal worker, are foster parents for the six children. The children are on leave from a state hospital in Sonoma but spend all their time at the Cage home. They refer to her as "Mrs. Cage, the lady who takes care of us."

The Cages have three daughters of their own. Two are married. The youngest, 17, still lives at home. The story of how the Cages became foster parents began seven years ago after one of their daughters, then 15, visited the state hospital on a Red Cross field trip.

"We had planned to take county children —orphans — when our daughters were grown and away from home," Mrs. Cage said, "but when daughter came back she was so upset. She said, 'Mother, we must do something to help them.' "

The Cages became certified as foster parents through the Alameda County Department of Social Welfare and asked for two small mentally retarded children.

THEY WERE brought a 12-year-old boy who couldn't talk, wasn't toilet trained, suffered epileptic seizures and appeared to be crippled.

"In two weeks, we found the boy was not crippled," Mrs. Cage said. "It was his improper shoes. We got medication to control his seizures, then we started working on talking and toilet training."

Shortly afterward, an emergency arose at the hospital and 10-year-old twin boys were brought to stay temporarily with the Cages. The twins, now 17, are still there.

Later, the Cages accepted a four-year-old boy, now 10, then a 23-year-old mentally retarded woman and finally a 14-year-old girl, the sister of the youngest boy.

The 23-year-old woman stayed with the Cages almost two years, met another mentally retarded man and married. The couple now lives in nearby Oakland.

"They're doing real well," Mrs. Cage said. "She calls almost once a day and comes to see us every week."

BEFORE THEY decided to become foster parents, the Cages had added two small bedrooms to their modest white stucco house. When the children arrived one bedroom was divided with a wall so that two children could sleep in each room.

"With so many beds around here, the rule in this house is everyone makes up his own bed," Mrs. Cage said as she displayed the rooms. And from the looks of things, the rule is followed.

The children attend special education classes in the public schools, which has allowed Mrs. Cage to become active in community and county projects to aid the mentally retarded.

One of the twins has learned to read and rides a bus to a special workshop for the mentally retarded where they learn crafts and skills.

"WE HAD to teach him to read before he could ride the bus," Mrs. Cage said. "You know if you can read you can find your way around in this world."

Teaching the boy to read was a major accomplishment for the Cages, since he was unable to talk when he came to their home. Mrs. Cage said some of "the professionals" —social workers and hospital officials —had said it would be unlikely for the children to learn to talk and impossible for them to learn to read.

"He wanted to communicate, he just didn't know how," Mrs. Cage said. "I'm not a professional. I can't tell anybody how we did it. We just did it. I think it's the family touch. You know, there's just something about belonging to someone."

MOTHERS' PLIGHT

Family Day Care Centers Overflowing

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — "It is safe to say that the single biggest problem of the working mother — at all economic levels — is adequate care of her children while she is on the job," states the 1969 report of the state Commission on the Status of Women.

The commission reports there are 2,760,000 working women in California. It is estimated 1,035,000 have children under 18 years of age and 388,125 with children under 6.

Licensed family day care homes, private profit-making nurseries, private non-profit centers, state children's centers and Head Start day care, care for 116,943 children of these women. The rest of these women must find in-home care or recruit relatives or friends to care for their children while they work.

REFERRING TO state supported children's centers, William N. Roberts, coordinator for Children's Centers, Bureau of Preschool Educational Programs, said, "There is a great need for expansion of this program. There are now some 400 Children's Centers in California, providing service for some 23,000 children aged two to 14 years."

Roberts explained the program is financed by matching of three federal dollars to every state dollar. He said Assembly bill 2554, a followup to last year's AB 750, will provide several technical changes in the program.

AB 2554, introduced by Assemblyman Jerry Lewis, R-San Bernardino, would give the state authority to establish and maintain preschool children's centers, and group day care programs and administration of all federal programs through the Departments of Social Welfare and Education. It clarifies the basis on which a family should or should not pay fees, clarifies costs, and revises priorities for attendance at children's centers. The measure is before the senate Committee on Education; it passed the Assembly July 30.

TWO OTHER bills would also help alleviate the burden of finding adequate — at reasonable cost — child care.

A bill by Assemblywoman Yvonne W. Brathwaite, D-Los Angeles, would authorize community colleges, state colleges and the University of California to operate children's centers. The bill has passed the Assembly and is currently in the senate committee on finance.

Bill 2050, by Assemblyman Leon D. Ralph, D-Los Angeles, would establish standards to qualify children's centers as laboratories of instruction so that employees and volunteers working in the centers can gain college credits, thus providing more qualified persons to operate centers.

All three of these bills, if passed, will be enhanced by the Welfare Reform Act of 1971, which provides funding for child care.

After Beach Day

When washing beach togs after a day in the water and sun, don't forget yourself. A swim is not a bath. That same salt, chlorine, sun lotion, and perspiration that collects on your suit will clog the pores of your skin, produce blemishes and dull your hair if they're not washed away.

Calls Herself Utah's Only Waterboy

By BRUCE COOK

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Former school teacher Sandy Duncan, 22, calls herself the waterboy of the Utah State University campus.

She's the only female ever hired as a USU groundskeeper and one of her duties is to get the sprinkler system going at 6 a.m. daily.

"I took the job on a dare," says Miss Duncan, who hails from Cheyenne, Wyo.

"I worked in a corner grocery just off campus and some of the men on the grounds crew started kidding me about applying for a job with them."

They never thought she'd do it, but in the spring of 1970 she applied for and got the job and walked into the campus greenhouse where the rest of the crew had gathared before the day's work.

"The minute I crossed the threshhold all heads turned and the silence fell so thick you could have cut it," she said.

"The silent treatment lasted for two or three weeks, then a few men started being friendly privately, but as a group they weren't too accepting."

Gradually, she broke the ice with the rest of them and became a full-fledged member of the watering crew —"an irrigation engineer," as she puts it.

Miss Duncan, a dimpled, smiling graduate of Northern Colorado University at Greeley and a former French teacher in the Cheyenne school system, says students at Utah State frequently ask her if she's a member of the women's liberation movement.

"Hell, no," is her reply.

"I figure they aren't necessarily being rude when they stare at me as I run about campus on my scooter turning water on and off.

"WHEN A person puts himself in a position of being different, he must be ready to have others be astonished; for example, when a guy grows his hair long he has to expect to have people stare."

She also left the grounds crew for a while and took a job with the Weber County Welfare Office at Ogden, Utah, but it didn't last long.

"I couldn't work there any more under the pretense of helping people. It is frightening to see the welfare workers manipulate and rule these welfare clients —making them so humble that they lose all dignity."

Now under a one-year contract at the university, Miss Duncan is undecided about her future but has been thinking about the concept of teaching awareness through films.

"We'd take everyday happenings and put them all together for meaning. The students make their own films," she explained. "This is what I want to do eventually," she said.

Shirley chose Mrs. Cheryl Herndon of San Rafael as her matron of honor and Shirley's twin sister, Mrs. Sharon Zucker of Albany was a bridesmaid. The other bridal attendant was the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Janna Schumacher of San Ramon.

Mark Herdon of San Rafael served as best man. The guests were seated by Darryl Berry of San Ramon and Kensel Schumacher, also of San Ramon.

Mrs. Martin Long Is AFS Chapter President

New president of the American Field Service's Tamalpais Chapter is Mrs. Martin H. Long of Mill Valley, who has been active in the AFS program since 1968, when she and her family were hosts to an Argentine exchange student.

MRS. MARTIN H. LONG
AFS chapter president

Sixty countries participate in the American Field Service program, which exists to promote better understanding throughout the world by means of student exchange. Local chapters, such as Tamalpais, supervise the general well being of foreign students in the community, help select families to act as hosts to these students during the school year and coordinate the selection of local high school students to compete nationally for placement abroad under the program.

Mrs. Long is preparing for the first of the Tamalpais Chapter's fund-raising events this year, the annual flea market to be held Sept. 18 and 19 at the Tamalpais High School gymnasium. The group also has a Christmas candy wreath sale and sponsors the Peacock Gap Antiques Show and Sale in January to raise funds for the program.

The wife of a Mill Valley physician, Alice Gurley Long has been aware of the importance of international understanding since her childhood as an "Army brat" living in various parts of the Western Hemisphere. After high school in Panama, she attended Madison College in Harrisonburg, Va.

The Longs, who have lived in Mill Valley 22 years, are the parents of two daughters, Linda, 20, a sophomore at Chico State College, and Ann, 17, who will attend College of Marin this fall. There are also two horses, four dogs and assorted turtles and fish in the Long household.

Alice Long was a Girl Scout and Camp Fire Girl leader and active in the Parent-Teacher Association. She was made an honorary member of the P-TA for her work as library chairman of Alto School. For the past two years she has been on the Tamalpais High School P-TA board and is past president of the Southern Marin Horseman's Association.

The Longs began taking scuba diving lessons after a trip to Hawaii last winter and have been spending weekends diving on the Monterey Peninsula and in Mendocino County.

Serving with Mrs. Long as officers of the Tamalpais AFS Chapter are Archer Forsythe, vice president; Mrs. William Pemberton, secretary; Irvin Sutley, treasurer, and Mrs. Warren Staiger, membership chairman.

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Better To Ignore Than Fight Back When Someone Bugs You

Several times, when kids have written in about gross teachers they don't get along with, you've implied it's better to quietly earn your grade than fight what you can't change and risk getting failed.

Well, what do you say about a teacher who never misses a chance to poke fun at minority races? When a pregnant white girl quit school to marry her Puerto Rican boy friend, he called it "heir pollution" and some of the class even laughed!

Being Jewish, I get my share of his dirty cuts and I'm not about to sit and take it! I figure an "A" from this creep would be a disgrace, though I could make one if I'd act humble. He'll probably flunk me.

Maybe you don't agree with me, Helen, but I'll bet your daughter Sue does. — FIGHTER

P.S. He never does anything "open" enough to complain to the principal about, so I take revenge by driving him bananas. With his stupidity, it's easy.

DEAR FIGHTER:

And you win — an F, plus a year of make-up work. And this waspish teacher will end up more firmly locked into his prejudices, because you've "proved what he always said about those people." So all fighting gets you is the doubtful satisfaction of skewering a stupid little man who isn't worth your effort.

Maybe I'm just too practical: if you can change things, I say fight; if not, ignore. — HELEN

Okay, Sue, your turn:

SUE'S VIEWS:

DEAR FIGHTER:

Mom has a neat trick: To someone like your teacher, she'd mentally say, "Zap, you don't exist," and then get on with the course. His cuts couldn't hurt because she'd smile and look right through him.

It works for her, but I'm more of a head-on fighter, because there's always the outside chance you can change things. Like for instance I drew two "Fs" in citizenship (and stern words from home) before this teacher and I finally got to understanding each other. This year — big surprise — we're good friends.

Why couldn't you do your work, draw a decent grade, and still smack down st upid prejudices, Fighter? Otherwise, as Mom says, you're only hurting yourself. — SUE

DEAR SUE,

Back in the eighth grade I went with a certain boy and I've always liked him a lot.

We're still friends three years later, but just friends, nothing else. I've learned to accept this.

The problem is I recently heard that someone is spreading the rumor around that he is a fag. I can't believe it and won't! Or can I?

How can I stop this? Should I go to the boy and ask him straight out? — STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED:

If you asked a guy about a rumor like this, you wouldn't gain anything and you might lose his friendship.

Just stand by and keep on being his friend, no matter what — someone he can really talk to.

And don't get so shook. It's kind of a fad to whisper about "who's queer" these days. People don't take it all that seriously. — SUE

HELEN'S CORNER:

DEAR STUMPED:

. . . And at 16, no boy is locked into homosexuality, even though he may have had an experience or two that brought on the whispers. — H.

Choose Colorful Winter Coat Fabrics

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I'll be one of the gals who will certainly need a new coat this fall as you predicted. I'd love to use a beautiful wool but don't know how to choose one that will go with everything and still fit into my budget. Wool seems so expensive.

MRS. J.C.

DEAR MRS. J.C.:

First, remember that a coat is a separate covering and doesn't have to go with everything or anything. It can simply carry itself. Choose a coat pattern that buttons up to the neckline. Use a beautiful colorful fabric that will make everyone who sees you feel good.

Once you have removed your coat, the rest of your apparel is a separate story. The only time you will want to coordinate them is when you plan a definite coat and dress ensemble. These usually have an open neckline and part of the dress shows and coordinates with the coat.

Choose a glorious tweed, plaid, or color that will not only be a joy to wear, a joy for others to see, but also a joy to make. Black, brown, and beige are not practical if they are not becoming to you. You'll find today that red, blue, green, and purple are just as practical. They're also morale boosters as well.

As to the cost of the fabrics — too many women place overemphasis on the price per-yard cost of fabric. They forget the relationship between the cost of the completed garment compared to the cost of a coat you could afford if you bought it ready-made. As an example: if you felt you could spend $75 on a good coat, then proportionately, you could easily afford $15 to $20 a yard for fabric. The lining, buttons and notions would make up the difference.

The real difference is in the finished product. If this coat is well done, it is worth more than $75, and you will now have the luxurious feeling of owning a coat that would have cost $200 or more. What an ego-builder!

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Jack Tschetter, Killarney, Manitoba, Canada is this week's tailor trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"Just wanted to share with your readers another use for my invisible zipper foot. When I tried to put cording around the edges of slipcovers, I found my regular zipper foot simply didn't stitch close enough to the cording. I tried the invisible foot, and it worked like a charm. The cording was basted in place first, then the cording simply slides along in the groove where the zipper normally slides. The needle sews very close to the cording with no guesswork."

DEAR EUICE,

Whenever I use one of the softer knits, the seams always roll and curl up on the inside causing extra bulk. What is your solution?

MRS. K.M.

DEAR MRS. K.M.:

Possibly, you are referring to the soft sweater knits that are so popular today. I would suggest machine stitching the seams with a straight stitch on the seam allowance. (Be sure to check the lengthwise stretch.) After the seam has been stitched, bring the two seam allowances together and zig-zag close to your seam allowance. Cut away the excess beyond this zig-zag stitching, you will have a finished sweater type seam for your garment

Unfortunately, some sewing machines have tension problems that cause the seams to draw up when zig-zagged which can distort the shape of your garment. With the wide variety of knit stitches and the combination of fibers, it's best to pretest any stitching you are intending to use just to see how it works on the particular fabric you are currently working with.

ENDANGERED SPECIES

The Bald Eagle Becoming A Rarity

By DARRYL STEWART
Toronto Telegram Syndicate
(Fifth of 12 articles)

The continued existence of the bald eagle as a species is seriously threatened. At one time, it bred extensively over North America — but now it is regarded as one of our rarest birds.

In earlier time, every lake or bay must have had its pairs of bald eagles. But today many Americans have never seen their national bird. The overall census of bald eagles conducted by the National Audubon Society in 1963 was given as 3,547 — and their numbers have been steadily dwindling since that date. Only in the northern parts of Canadian provinces are they now to be found in any numbers at all.

The decline in the bald eagle population was originally brought about by indiscriminate slaughter. The eagle was not only shot by marksmen for sport without the benefit of protective laws, but was also relentlessly pursued by egg-collectors.

Extensive logging has been another contributing factor in its elimination. Unlike the golden eagle which is a bird of our western mountain regions, the bald eagle prefers to build its nest near the top of very tall trees near water. With the clearing of forest trees, the bald eagle began to disappear.

Except for the almost-extinct California condor, the bald eagle is the largest and most magnificent of all our birds of prey. The female, usually three or four inches larger than her mate, may attain a length of 30 inches and sport a 7½ foot wingspan. The adult bird is quite unmistakable by virtue of its majestic size and white head and tail.

Bald Eagle

However, it is not until the bird has attained its fourth year that it acquires the adult plumage. Until that time, it is a sombre dark-brown and is then not easily distinguishable at a distance from the golden eagle.

The bald eagle was adopted as the national emblem of the United States by act of the Second Continental Congress of 1782 (much to the protests of Benjamin Franklin). However, this magnificent bird was not afforded protection by Federal law until 1940. Its provisions at the time did not apply to Alaska.

In 1917, the Legislature of Alaska started a campaign against the American eagle by paying a bounty of fifty cents a bird. These bounties were sponsored by the territorial government itself in retaliation against the bird which was accused of robbing the country of its fish supply. From that date until the present time, the number of bald eagles killed for bounty in Alaska is believed to be no less than 100,000. They now are seldom seen in vast areas in this territory where they once abounded.

It was only after its population had been drastically reduced that investigation proved that the bald eagle is too lazy to catch live fish when it can pick up dead ones.

Also, it is a poor fisherman. Any live fish that it can manage to capture are usually spawned-out salmon which require no real fishing at all. At long last in 1952, the bald eagle was granted full protection in Alaska. Anyone today found harming an eagle or its nest is subject to fines up to $500. This protection, however, may have come too late.

On the occasions when the bald eagle does have a taste for fresh fish, it will harass the far more skillful fish-catching osprey, forcing it to drop its catch. As the fish falls from the clutches of the osprey, the eagle swoops down under it and retrieves it before it hits the water. It was this trait of piracy in the bird's makeup that caused Benjamin Franklin to oppose the choice of the bald eagle for the national emblem.

Eagles have always been regarded as emblems of power and majesty, so our national bird may still be admired by those who are not too familiar with its habits. In flight, with its pure-white head and tail glistening in the sunlight, it makes an inspiring sight and adds grandeur to any scene.

The bald eagle is a harmless species, its principal food being dead fish. When fish are scarce, the bald eagle may supplement its diet with crabs. It will occasionally feed upon mice, rats, other small mammals, waterfowl, and (very seldom) its impressive size, the bird itself weighs no more than 13 pounds and is virtually incapable of lifting any weight in excess of eight or 10 lbs. Experiments have demonstrated this conclusively.

Whenever a bald eagle is nesting in a particular area, it is always apparent due to the immense size of its next. These nests (used year after year by the same couple) are refurnished each year with new layers of branches. As a result, the nests often reach astounding proportions.

One nest which was used for 20 or 30 years near St. Petersburg, Fla., is reported to have reached a height of 20 feet and a width of almost 10 feet. But the size of this well-established nest is not really so surprising, since the eagles mate for life and are often long-lived. Some even attain the amazing age of 100 years.

Today, the greatest peril facing the bald eagle is the pollution of rivers, streams and coastal bays which kills off the fish. Bald eagles, being largely scavengers, consume large quantities of these poisoned dead fish that are thrown up onto river banks and coastlines. The fish are contaminated with DDT and other chlorinated hydrocarbons.

These pesticides, originally sprayed on nearby trees and shrubs, are blown by the wind or travel with falling leaves along coastlines. They are then absorbed by the plankton, algae and other minute animal organisms in the waterways. They are in turn eaten by the fish on which the bald eagle feeds. This accumulation of poisons consumed by the bald eagle results in a sterilizing effect on its eggs, eventually leading to the death of the adult bird itself.

One recent survey conducted in the States of Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, and Delaware, revealed 16 nests known to be active. Of these 16 nests, only three eaglets were produced.

Another incident involves an adult eagle on Jamestown Island, Virginia, where the bird was picked up under its nest. It was suffering from tremors, a condition typical of pesticide poisoning.

By virtue of being a scavenger, the bald eagle plays a most important role in the balance of nature. Scavengers are nature's garbage collectors. Without them, the earth would become a breeding place for disease, and plague would certainly run rampant. As the bald eagle is also a predator, it is doubly useful (it frequently preys on small rodents). It would be sad indeed if we were ever to lose such a bird.

However, unless the use of pesticide poisons is more strongly controlled in the future, the emblem of the United States could well become the emblem of extinction.

Target Board Sets Fund Raising Talks

Board composition and fund raising events will be among topics discussed at a special meeting of the Southern Marin Target Area board of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the area office at Manzanita Center.

According to secretary Shirley Roberts, the board will also elect a new chairman at the meeting.

Abernathy Claims United States 'Sick'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Ralph D. Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, yesterday termed the United States a "sick" nation and charged President Nixon had created "a climate of opposition" to busing of school children.

Abernathy, who succeeded Dr. Martin Luther King in leadership of the group he heads, held a brief news conference before addressing the 91st convention of the Baptists of America.

"Today's issues are so confused," he said, "and America is so sick. The Nixon administration is so opposed to our ideals that the national administration no longer walks with us and no longer are our supporters."

Abernathy said the current convention of the black branch of the Baptist Church was currently the "best support of our moral cause." He said the organization he represented was in "a grave financial crisis" and if the group was to live "then black people must support it."

Questioned on the current school busing problem, Abernathy was critical of the administration's stand.

"The President has created the climate for the opposition to busing," he said. "Those who follow his views have been given moral support to protest. Mr. Nixon very seldom says anything right, and seldom does he do anything that's right."

Abernathy welcomed the move of the Black Panthers' headquarters from Oakland to Atlanta.

"We certainly will welcome the Black Panthers," he said. "We would be delighted to have our black brothers come to Atlanta, an all-American city... It is possible that our group will be taken over and solve our financial difficulties."

Abernathy said the country certainly could not have quality education for all unless the busing program was fulfilled, but "because of housing, we still have black ghettos and only white students will be bused while black students will still be walking."

He was asked about a black man's chance of becoming a vice president and replied "in this sick nation a black man does not have a chance."

Guilty Pleas To Reduced Counts

Barbara Sanford, 21, and Daniel Ross Wood, 24, both of Sausalito, have pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to reduced misdemeanor charges of possessing marijuana.

They are to be sentenced Oct. 22.

The pair was arrested Aug. 10 in a raid by drug abuse agents on their houseboat, Prospero, anchored off Gate 5, Sausalito.

Agents said they seized about $7,800 worth of hashish, a small amount of dexadrine and one marijuana plant in the raid.

They were originally charged with felony counts of possessing and cultivating pot and possessing dangerous drugs, but the charges were reduced by the district attorney's office which reported a witness needed for prosecution of the case had disappeared.

Evangelist Services Slated Next Month

The fall evangelist services of the First Baptist Church of San Rafael will be held from Oct. 15 to Oct. 24 on the theme of "Christ, the One Way."

Rev. Danny Coker, pastor of San Francisco's 19th Avenue Baptist Church, will be guest evangelist. Services will be held nightly at 7:30.

TWO RELIGIOUS GROUPS

Feud Over Mideast Policies

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Two of America's most distinguished religious organizations are feuding publicly over U. S. policy in the Middle East.

Involved are the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC), a Quaker organization long noted for its objective view toward current political problems and the American Jewish Committee, equally distinguished and considered one of the most eloquent spokesmen for the organized Jewish community in the United States.

Touching off the feud was a study done for the AFSC and published as "Search For Peace in the Middle East."

Although the Friends' study was undertaken in 1968 –"with the urging of both Jews and Arabs," according to the AFSC —it was not published until last year and only recently raised any eyebrows.

Now the AJC, in cooperation with the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, has published a lengthy critique of the Quaker study sharply questioning the Friends' objectivity and accusing the study of being filled with "blatant bias."

The two religious organizations, both generally liberal on political policy questions, historically have frequently collaborated with each other.

But the AJC report said the Friends study "is harmful to the cause of a just and lasting peace" and "endangers the previous good relationship between Jews and the Quaker community ..."

The Friends working party which prepared the study, headed by Landrum R. Bolling, president of Earlham college in Richmond, Ind., seemed to be acutely aware of the emotional quicksand involved in any attempt to assess the Middle East situation.

"We wish to make clear to all, particularly to our countrymen of Jewish and Arab backgrounds, that our position is one of concern for both peoples and is based on the conviction that the rights and interests of both must be recognized and reconciled on some just and peaceful basis," the Friends said.

The study added: "Many on each side will denounce any comment which does not support their position, on the grounds that 'if you are not for us, you are against us.'"

But the Jewish critique emphasized that it felt the Friends—concerned about what they considered pro-Israeli distortions in the West and particularly in the United States was blatantly pro-Arab.

"Repeated references in the Quaker report uncritically accept the Arab argument that Israel was imposed on the area by Western states guilty of anti-semitism to solve, at Arab expense, a problem Arabs never created," the Jewish study said.

It added that this argument was a false "propaganda claim" and in accepting that version of the origin of Israel, "The Quaker report furthers the Arab line."

The Jewish analysis charges the Quakers with a "strategy of distortion" in which they seek to "portray the Arab countries as innocent victims of Western guilt and the existence of Israel as an injustice against the Arabs."

These differences on the background of the Middle East conflict result in sharply differing views of how a peaceful settlement might be reached for the area.

For example, the Quakers suggest that the Israeli government "must give forthright assurances on eventual withdrawal from occupied territories as part of an overall peace settlement and should attempt to refute accusations of further expansionist aims."

Tied to this suggestion is one that the Arab governments "must declare their acceptance of the fact of Israel's existence as a sovereign state and must make clear their willingness to live in a condition of true peace with Israel."

The Jews see in these two points an anti-Israeli position. They said that since Israel has claimed in the past it does not seek territorial expansion, the first argument amounts to a "w h e n-d i d-y ou-stop-beating-your-wife?" syndrome.

As for the second Quaker proposal, the AJC study said: "In contrast to the specific demand made on Israel for giving up territory and abandoning its goal of secure and defensible borders, the Arab government are not required to make any substantive commitment whatever."

The Jewish team that prepared the critique was most sharply critical of the Quaker proposal—generally being followed by the United States in its peace initiative—that the Big Four powers play a major role in guaranteeing peace in the area.

"There is no reason to expect that the Big Four could or would guarantee a true peace in the Middle East," the study said. It pointed to the Soviet Union's obvious pro-Arab leanings and said France and England were primarily concerned with "shoring up what is left of their influence among the Arab states ..."

In general, the Jewish critique seemed to conclude the Quaker search for peace was less a search for peace than for American friends for the Arab world.

For the Quakers, the Jewish critique seemed to underline their judgment that "the emotionally overcharged atmosphere in the Middle East must be cleared" if peace is to be achieved.

If, as seems certain, neither of the studies will quickly resolve the Middle East situation, they do suggest a great deal more dialogue will be needed before any religious consensus emerges on the Middle East crisis.

OF MAN AND GOD

Schweitzer's Look Into Deeper Spiritual Life

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The most shocking thing Jesus ever said —from the viewpoint of conventional wisdom — is that it's a blessing to suffer.

Many thoughtful men, from the time of the Greek Stoics until now, have looked upon pain and bereavement as inevitable aspects of human existence to be borne with patience and courage.

But Jesus went much farther than that. He did not teach mere resignation to life's hurts. He said: "Happy are those who mourn ... How blest are the sorrowful."

Jesus was not a masochist who took pleasure in pain. It is clear from the gospels that he avoided hardship whenever he could do so without shirking his duty or compromising his principles. He also tried whenever possible to ameliorate the suffering of others.

So, when he said it is blessed to suffer, he did NOT mean that we should go out of our way to incur miseries. He was simply saying that when trouble comes upon us anyway, desite all our efforts to avoid it, we may find in it a hidden benediction.

The late Dr. Albert Schweitzer, one of the greatest Christians of this or any other century, regarded this teaching as "the lodestar of Jesus' life."

Before he went to Africa to serve as a medical missionary, Schweitzer was pastor of the Church of St. Nicolai in Strasbourg. He frequently preached sermons on the creative aspect of suffering. Some of these previously unpublished sermons have been collected in a book called "Reverence for Life" (Harper & Row) which I commend to everyone who seeks to deepen his spiritual life.

Schweitzer reminds us that the gospel offers no encouragement to the popular belief that a person can purchase Divine protection against suffering by being "good." Quite the contrary. "The Savior suffered more than anyone" and if we truly follow his way, he will "draw us with him into his suffering." Misfortune is "part of what it means to be a Christian."

Why?

"Because suffering is exaltation. Just as Jesus was exalted on the cross, so we too must suffer in order to be exalted above the world.

"In pain we discover the existence of something higher than earthly happinesss and physical contentment. Then we can gradually detach ourselves from those things which hold our senses captive ... we set our eyes on the eternal."

But Jesus was not speaking only of "pie in the sky" when he said that those who suffer will be comforted. The blessing to be found in pain is a right-there, right-now blessing, which takes place in the very midst of suffering.

And what is its nature? Schweitzer suggests that the answer can be found by looking back at the times in your life in which you were calm and contented and everything seemed to be going right for you.

"If the whole of your life had been a succession of hours like those, do you know what would have become of you? You would become selfish, hard-hearted, lonely, without regard for higher things, for the pure, for God — and you would never have felt blessedness.

"When did it first dawn on you that we men don't live unto ourselves? When did the blessedness of compassion bring comfort to you? In suffering.

"Where did your heart come close to those who were so distant and cold to you? In suffering.

"Where did you catch a glimpse of the higher destiny of your life? In suffering.

"Where did you feel God was near to you? In suffering."

Schweitzer concludes with this advice:

"Don't vex your mind by trying to explain the suffering you have to endure in this life. Don't think that God is punishing you or disciplining you or that He has rejected you. Even in the midst of your suffering you are in His kingdom. You are always His child, and He has His protecting arm around you...

"Does a child understand everything his father does? No —but he can confidently nestle in his father's arms and feel perfect happiness, even while tears glisten in his eyes, because he is his father's child."

HISTORIC EVENT

Kol Shofar To Rededicate Torah From Czechoslovakia

Part of the Jewish heritage of Czechoslovakia will become intertwined into the history of Congregation Kol Shofar of Marin next Friday.

At that time the congregation will rededicate a Sifre Torah (Book of Scrolls) at 8:30 p.m. services which was once used by a Czechoslovakian synagogue destroyed by the German army more than 30 years ago.

This Torah was once part of a collection, assembled by the Nazis, and later taken over by Prague Museum. In 1964 1,564 of these high religious scrolls arrived at the Westminister Synagogue in London. Last summer the task of recording each scroll was completed and stored in specially constructed racks.

Through the efforts of Sam Margoliash of San Anselmo, a member of the congregation, who visited the London synagogue, the Torah was obtained for Kol Shofar.

Officiating at the rededication service will be Cantor Robert Scherr.

Polish Church Having Emigration Worries

BERLIN, East Germany (LWF) — Immense difficulties are being created for the Evangelical Church of Augsburg Confession in Poland as emigration continues from Poland to West Germany, according to the bishop of the 80,000-member church, Rt. Rev. Andrzej Wantula of Warsaw.

The emigration is a result of agreements reached last year between the Polish and West German governments which permit German families still living in Poland to reunite with their families in West Germany.

Writing in "Evangelisches Pfarrerblatt" — a monthly bulletin for East German Protestant clergymen — the 65-year-old prelate noted that due to emigration of Lutherans from Poland, church administrative units must be constantly restructured while the existence of other units is threatened. The church reported a loss of one-fifth of its membership this year over 1970.

In a situation report for the clergy periodical, Bishop Wantula also described his church's tense relationship with the dominant Roman Catholic Church of the country.

Following World War II, he said, the Catholic Church seized Lutheran property in the former German territories which had been ceded to Poland.

The seizure was accomplished by the Catholic Church under the pretext that the properties were goods left behind by the defeated Germans, Bishop Wantula revealed.

Subsequently, in order to regain much-needed church buildings, the Lutheran chancery in Warsaw initiated a series of "laborious court proceedings" against the Catholic Church, for which in many cases no verdict has yet been delivered, the Polish Lutheran leader said.

The current dwindling membership within Poland's Lutheran church also presents "obstacles of a material nature," Bishop Wantula wrote.

Relations between the two denominations have been so strongly influenced by the touchy legal proceedings in the courts that no notable rapprochement has come about between the Catholic and Lutheran churches in Poland.

Bishop Wantula said that his church "represents a conservative and orthodox position within Lutheranism" and that "the devoutness of the faithful people and their religiosity have been influenced by a pietistic spirit."

In a statistical profile of the Polish Lutheran church, the prelate reports that there are presently 123 parishes and 229 preaching places.

Rodef Sholom High School Series Set

Congregation Rodef Sholom will inaugurate an evening high school program, beginning Oct. 5.

Meeting each Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. at the temple, 170 North San Pedro Road, five special calsses will be offered, according to Aaron Lor, education director.

"The Jewish Scene Today," will be offered to tenth graders from 7 to 8 p.m., directed by Hal Friedman. The course will trace the history of the Holocaust, its later repercussions and the American Jewish involvement in and with Israel.

Also at the same time a one-hour course in Hebrew reading, writing and conservation will be taught by Lor for students in the upper three grades of high school.

Rabbi David Davis will lead a course of junior and seniors (7 to 8 p.m.) on Jewish religious ideas. An hour later Davis will offer tenth graders a course dealing with Jewish values and ethics while Friedman will give instruction to juniors and seniors on the philosophy of Judaism. Works of Martin Buber, Mordecai Kaplan and Arbraham Heschel will be among those explored.

Responsible Pupils

NEW YORK (UPI)—Making student responsibility and self-discipline a part of the educational process can increase the operating capacities of school facilities while raising the morale and productivity of teachers and students, reports Educational Facilities Laboratories (EFL).

Gallinas CSD Forms Youth Commission

Gallinas Village Community Services District board has established a youth commission and will open a youth center at the Gallinas Village Shopping Center later this month.

The board Thursday night voted to establish a 10-member youth commission to act as an advisory board. Members will include two directors from the service district, two from the Gallinas Village Improvement Association and six teen-agers to be selected by Teen-Agers in Action, a new youth group in the area.

According to board secretary Marguerite F. Clark, the board has leased a former restaurant at the shopping center on Adrian Way for the teens to use as a drop-in center.

The room measures 20 by 40 and will be furnished and decorated by the teen group. Teen-Agers in Action already have helped the board clean up the new center, Mrs. Clark said, and earned $180 last week by holding rummage sale. The money will be put toward stereo equipment.

The service board, with an annual budget of approximately $30,000, has allotted $3,300 to pay for the rent for the center and a part-time coordinator, Mrs. Clark reported.

Reception Set To Welcome Home Marin Troupe

The College of Marin theatrical troupe, which was the hit of the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival will be welcomed home Monday at a gala reception at the Oakland International Airport.

The company is due to arrive from England at 7 p.m. The reception will be held in the terminal's second floor lobby, featuring Prince Charles Bagpipe Band.

All friends of the college's drama department are invited to attend, it was announced.

Seashore Discussion Set Monday

Marin County Planning and the Parks and Recreation commission will meet jointly Monday morning to thrash out a policy statement on the master plan for Point Reyes Seashore.

The meeting will start at 9 a.m. on the third floor of the Civic Center.

The parks and recreation commissioners are already on record as favoring redesignating the seashore as a national park. The planning commissioners will add their recommendations, and the joint statement will go to the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

When the seashore discussion is completed, the parks and recreation commissioners will leave, and the planning commissioners will continue with their regular Monday agenda.

Bike Accident Injures Boy

A 10-year-old San Rafael boy was injured Thursday in a bike-auto accident on Fourth Street, police reported yesterday.

According to police, Michael Dean Stephenson of 58 Arquello Circle, going east on his bicycle, turned in front of a car driven by Sam Bert Suhrke, 71, of 8½ Garden Avenue, causing the accident.

Stephenson was thrown from his bike by the impact of the collision. He was treated at Marin General Hospital for cuts and bruises.

A Project For Learning About Laws

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — Working with schools from kindergarten through high school, the State Bar and the University of California are laying the foundation for a six-year project to increase respect for law.

The project: "Law in a Free Society."

First cooperating schools are in areas around San Diego, Los Angeles, Fresno, San Francisco Bay cities, and Sacramento.

Working with them will be citizens' advisory groups, local bar associations, school systems, and educational specialists.

Finances for the first year — $70,000 — have been supplied by the California Council on Criminal Justice, the State Bar of California, and the San Diego County Bar Association.

Project director Charles N. Quigley of the UCLA Extension Committee on Civic Education will work with citizens groups and the law schools of the University to gather, select, and test out curriculum materials and techniques.

After a thorough evaluation and revision, they will be offered to all schools.

Only One Bid On Four Houses

Only one bid of $51.03 was received for all four houses which are to be removed from Point Reyes National Seashore, according to the San Francisco office of the General Services Administration.

Edward Beck, realty officer, said the bid was made by a B. Sellick of South San Francisco. Sellick would have to pay to have the house removed.

Because the bid was so low, Beck said there is a possibility the bid may be rejected. He said a decision will be made Wednesday.

The houses range in size from 825 square feet to 1,812 square feet and are located on seashore property, Beck said.

Flying In Private Planes More Risky

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—It is 45 times more dangerous to fly in a private plane in Denmark than by commercial airliner, says the Danish Air Authority.

In 1970, five persons were killed and 45 planes wrecked in private plane accidents while commercial airlines and charter services combined had one plane wrecked with no deaths or injuries.

Momentum And Magic—Dodgers Have It, Giants Don't

By STEVE WILSTEIN
UPI Sports Writer

Momentum? Lucky Breaks? Magic? Whatever it is, the Los Angeles Dodgers have it and the San Francisco Giants don't.

The Giants still hold first place in the National League's Western Division by 3 1-2 games, though the way things have been going that may be little more than consolation on a rainy day.

With the bases full in the top of the ninth inning Maury Wills rolled a single into short left field to drive in Wes Parker, breaking a 2-2 tie and setting off a four-run explosion that gave the Dodgers their fifth straight victory, 6-2, over the San Diego Padres Friday night.

With two on in the bottom of the 11th, after a 2:19 rain delay and six hours after the game began, Hank Aaron rocked the Giants' hopes with a blast into the right field stands, his 40th of the year.

It was the 10th triumph for the Dodgers in their last 12 games. It was the sixth loss in a row for the Giants. The two teams will meet each other for a two-game set next Monday and Tuesday in San Francisco, their last encounter this year.

In the ninth inning the Dodgers sent eight men to the plate and the Padres used four pitchers in an effort to halt the four-run rally.

The game in Atlanta was even more maddening. San Francisco took a 5-4 lead in the top of the 11th when Ken Henderson scored from third on a balk by Jim Nash. The game had gone into extra innings with the score tied at 3-3 but both teams pushed runs across in the 10th.

However, the Braves quickly put two runners on in the bottom of the 11th when pinch-hitter Jim Breazeale singled and Felix Millan walked. The umpires then called time and play did not resume until almost 2:00 a.m. (EDT).

Ralph Garr struck out but Aaron connected on a 2-0 pitch from Jerry Johnson and sliced it over the fence for his 632nd career homer. Aaron also set a National record of seven seasons hitting 40-or-more homers. The previous record was held by Willie Mays.

In other National League games, Montreal edged Pittsburgh 3-2 in 11 innings, St. Louis nipped Chicago 8-7 in 12innings, New York beat Philadelphia 4-3 and Houston blanked Cincinnati 1-0.

Bob Bailey singled home Rusty Staub, who had singled and gone to third on a base hit by Bobby Wine, in the 11th inning to hand John Strohmayer the victory after pitching only one inning of relief for the Expos.

Joe Torre and Ted Simmons hit run-scoring hits with two out in the 12th inning to lead the Cards over Chicago to their fifth victory in the last six games.

Matty Alou started the Cardinals' rally when he singled with two out and stole second. Torre followed, singled to score Alou and Simmons doubled to score Torre.

Jerry Koosman and Danny Frisella combined on a nine-hitter as the Mets moved into third place in the Eastern Division race. Koosman's victory, his sixth against nine losses, nudged the Mets a half game ahead of the Cubs.

Jack Billingham pitched a two-hitter for the Astros and picked up his third shutout of the season in Houston's victory over the Reds.

A's Bullpen Reaches Peak; Magic Number Down To 6

Best Relief Job Of Year For Oakland

OAKLAND (UPI)—It was without a doubt one of the best performances by a bullpen crew this season.

The crew, made up of Darold Knowles, Jim Grant, Rollie Fingers and Bob Locker, held the Minnesota Twins to four hits over nine innings after John Odom was bombed without getting a man out Friday night to give the runaway Oakland A's a 5-4 victory.

"This was a satisfying performance all the way around," said manager Dick Williams. "These guys have been doing it all season long but this had to be the icing on the cake. I can't remember a better performance by any bullpen this year."

A single by pinch-hitter Angel Mangual and a sacrifice fly by Bert Campaneris drove in two ninth inning runs to pull it off and as a result reduced the A's division title-clinching magic number to six.

Singles by Cesar Tovar, Rod Carew and Tony Oliva and Harmon Killebrew's 23rd homer rocked Odom for four runs before he could retire a batter but Knowles came on to give up another hit to Leo Cardenas and then hung on three scoreless innings before turning the ball over to Jim Grant.

Grant, Fingers and Locker added two scoreless innings each with Locker gaining credit for the victory, his fifth in six decisions.

Gene Tenace started the A's ninth inning rally off reliever Hal Haydel with a double. Dick Green bunted toward first and when Killebrew elected to head off Tenace at third both runners were safe. Mangual singled sharply off second baseman Carew's glove as Tenace scored and Green raced to third. Campaneris' fly to medium center then scored Green with the winner.

A single by Reggie Jackson and a two-base boot of the blow by Steve Brye plus Sal Bando's sacrifice fly netted the A's their first run in the fourth and a single by Jackson and Mike Epstein's 7th homer in the sixth closed the gap to 4-3.

Bert Blyleven was the Minnesota starter but left in the sixth after Rick Monday singled following Epstein's homer. Haydel held the A's off without incident until Tenace got his big double leading off the ninth.

To show the depth of the Oakland relief staff Fingers now hasn't given up a run in five of his last six outings covering 8 2-3 innings; Knowles has not been scored on in his last six outings over 7 2-3 innings, Locker has given up just one run over the last 16 1-3 innings he has worked.

Cinderella Back To School; King, Casals In U.S. Final

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — A demure Chris Evert, Cinderella of the tennis world, licked her wounds today enroute home to school after Mrs. Billie Jean King ended the 16-year-old's 46 match victory streak with a 6-3, 6-2 trouncing in the semi-finals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships yesterday.

"She just overpowered me. Nothing could go wrong for her," Miss Evert smiled. "I'm sorry it all had to end. It was just wonderful. I have to go back to school now."

Meanwhile, Mrs. King walked into the finals with San Francisco's Rosie Casals, a 6-4, 6-3 winner over Kerry Melville yesterday. Mrs. King commented on her own victory: "I stayed back and beat her. I didn't want to give her any angles to play."

Asked if she felt like a villain before a pro-Evert, near-capacity throng, Mrs. King replied, "The crowd was just wonderful. I almost fainted when, in the first set, they applauded both of us."

Jim Evert held another view, regarding his daughter's play against Mrs. King. "She played as good as she could today, and Billie Jean was simply great. I think Chris learned a great deal from the match."

Miss Evert agreed and added, "In a way it was good for me to lose. It'll help me buckle down the next time."

Miss Casals observed that she didn't care who her final opponent would be. If it had been Miss Evert, Miss Casals quipped, "We'll just have to turn her back into a pumpkin and send her away."

She didn't have to; Mrs. King did. With the woman's semis aside, attention was focused on the Sunday King-Casals clash. Mrs. King is favored in that go, on the strength of her 9-1 mark won-lost against Miss Casals this year.

The men had a brief moment on stage, when second seeded Smith completed the quarter finals by putting down Marxy Riessen, 7-6, 6-2, 7-6. Smith, in his first real test of the tournament, dominated play despite the two tie break sets. He won the first set by coming from 2-4 to win on his own three final serves, clinched the match by winning the third set tie break, five points to one.

Should Ashe and Okker survive today's matches, it would set up a replay of the 1968 championships, in which Ashe won in five sets, but Okker walked off with the first prize money of $14,000. Ashe was an amateur then.

Basketball Merger

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., says he has decided to co-sponsor legislation that would permit the National Basketball Association and American Basketball Association to merge.

Giants Give Manager Fox $10,000 Anti-Freeze Hike

ATLANTA (UPI)—The San Francisco Giants, saying they were waiting until President Nixon declared an end to the wage-price freeze, have settled rumors about the future of Charlie Fox by re-hiring the manager for 1972 for "a substantial increase in salary."

Jerry Donovan, assistant to Giants president Horace Stoneham, made the announcement Friday at a downtown hotel. Donovan said agreement with Fox had been reached in June and the players were informed of the situation two or three weeks ago.

"Mr. Stoneham showed that he thought of Fox back in June," Donovan said. "He would have made the agreement public earlier but he wanted to wait until President Nixon declared an end to the wage-price freeze."

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed, but it was reported that Fox jumped from $25,000 to $35,000.

Fox, who took over for Clyde King in May of 1970, said he was happy with his new contract and already is looking forward to next year, although he added "there are a few things we have to take care of right now."

Sausalito Skippers 1-2 In Bay Regatta

Two Sausalito residents, Knud Wibroe and Al Blair, were running one-two going into today's final races of the Knarr Class International Regatta on San Francisco Bay.

Wibroe, San Francisco Yacht Club representative who stayed in contention throughout the week, finally eased into the lead by nipping Belvedere's Richard Griffith of the SFYC by one second over a 12-mile course in yesterday's action. Despite a hefty 10-25 knot wind battering the sails, Wibroe steered to a comfortable 10.7 point lead over erstwhile pacesetter Blair of Tiburon's Corinthian Y.C. At the midway mark, Blair had a commanding six-point lead. He dropped five markers Thursday and surrendered the lead yesterday, no thanks to a dismal 11th place finish.

Consistent Terry Anderlini of San Mateo, a SFYC member, remained in the battle, 15 points behind in the fourth slot, while defending champion Niels Johansen of Denmark was a distant ninth, 31.7 digits behind.

VULNERABLE KICKOFF COVERAGE

49er Coach Cracks Whip

Vowing to improve their vulnerable kickoff coverage, the San Francisco 49ers began preparing in earnest for next Sunday's National Football League opener in Atlanta against the Falcons.

Coach Dick Nolan, admittedly piqued over the 103-yard, game-deciding runback by the Los Angeles Ram cornerback Gene Howard Thursday night, promised, "We're going to drill every day on kick-off return coverage."

The four-year veteran's shocker boosted the host Rams to an insurmountable 23-6 lead and an eventual 23-20 triumph.

Yesterday, Nolan was still brooding over that play. However, he can ill afford to ponder the pre-season finale, particularly in view of the upcoming contest against the pesky Falcons.

As is Atlanta Coach Norm Van Brocklin's wont, he had his club "up" for last fall's 49er invasion which resulted in a 21-20 Falcon upset. Prospector kicker Bruce Gossett remembers the game well, for it was his missed field goal in the last 19 seconds which enabled the hosts to claim the surprise victory.

Gossett and his group want revenge, and they will attempt to get it with a healthy 40-man group next Sunday. No major injuries were reported in the exhibition-ending encounter which dropped the 49er "no-count" won-lost-tied log to 3-2-1. However, rookie running back Joe Orduna of Nebraska sprained his left knee. Before acquiring his wound, Orduna made the most of his first real chance to carry the ball by churning out 33 yards in four carries.

Cedrick "Nasty" Hardman, the second-year defensive end, was held out of the Ram row to facilitate a hamstring muscle pull recovery. "He could have played, but there was no need to jeopardize him for Atlanta," explained Paul Wiggin, defensive line coach.

He added that the 49ers were "tired, mentally and physically" following the Los Angeles Coliseum clash; but today the former Cleveland Brown defensive end greeted back ends Carter Campbell, Bill Belk, Tommy Hart and Hardman, plus tackles Stan Hindman, Charley Krueger, Earl Edwards and Sam Silas.

This eight-strong brigade is counted on to blunt the powerful Falcon running game, featuring Bill "Cannonball" Butler. In the third game of 1970, he led a ground assault which pierced the highly regarded San Francisco defensive line enough to fashion the 21-20 cliffhanger.

Hoping to prevent any reoccurence of that type of performance, Wiggin intently drilled his troups today to contain Butler and scrambling quarterback Bob Berry, while Nolan feverishly worked over a shell-shocked kickoff coverage conglomerate.

The coaches know that if the 49ers are to retain the hard-earned Western Division, National Football Conference, title, San Francisco must whip immediate rivals Atlanta, the Rams and New Orleans.

A newly-organized semi-professional baseball team to be known as the Marin A's will hold its first tryout session tomorrow, 10:30 a.m., at Albert Park in San Rafael, it was announced today by sponsor-manager Peter Maggi Jr.

"We'll play a winter schedule of night games in San Rafael," said Maggi, announcing that tryouts are open to Marin County athletes aged 17 and older.

NO FAIR CATCH — St. Louis Cardinal cornerback Roger Wherli (22) and the Cleveland Browns' Charles Hall were entangled while a fumble bounded away in the second quarter of the host Cards' 27-13 win last night. The Cardinals, who bobbled the ball on a fair catch signal off a Browns' punt, recovered.

Raiders Out To Snap Colt Jinx

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) —The Oakland Raiders would like to add a little icing to their pre-season cake tonight when they close out their most successful exhibition season against the Baltimore Colts.

Despite a glittering 4-1 exhibition record, the Raiders have a double incentive to whip the Colts. Baltimore beat Oakland in the AFC championship game in January and went on to nudge Dallas in the Super Bowl.

In addition, the Raiders have never beaten the Colts in four meetings.

Coach John Madden of the Raiders will throw running backs Marv Hubbard, Pete Banaszak, Don Highsmith and rookie Clarence Davis at the Colts who own a 3-3 pre-season mark.

Madden will probably give veteran quarterback Daryle Lamonica his longest playing time of the season. That's because Madden wants Lamonica to round into shape for the league opener against New England next week and the Raiders may need an experienced signal-caller to outsmart the Colts intricate zone defense.

"They're noted as a zone coverage team," said Madden. "But it's not just a zone, it's a number of zones."

Ken Stabler has been doing most of the quarterbacking so far for Oakland and has performed admirably.

Bob Brown, the Raiders' 290-pound offensive tackle, has been trying to shake off a knee injury and may see limited action against Bubba Smith.

Colt quarterback Earl Morrall also has a quartet of nifty running backs behind him. They include veterans Tom Matte and Norm Bulaich and rookies Don McCauley of North Carolina and Don Nottingham of Kent State.

Wide receiver Eddie Hinton, who has caught 14 passes for 245 yards, will put a lot of pressure on Oakland's defensive secondary.

Favorite targets of Lamonica and Stabler will be Raymond Chester, Fred Biletnikoff and Rod Sherman.

Warriors High On Draftee; Oregon's Casanova Retires

NEW YORK — The Golden State Warriors have selected Cyril Baptiste, a 6-9, 240-pound Creighton University forward, in the National Basketball Association's hardship draft of players with college eligibility remaining.

"Had we been available in the spring draft of seniors when our turn came up," Warrior general manager Bob Feerick said Thursday after the draft, "we would have picked him no. 1 ahead of Darnell Hillman."

Hillman, the center from San Jose State and the U.S. Army, signed with the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association. The Warriors may still have to contest the ABA for Baptiste, a junior.

Football

Eugene, Ore. — Leonard J. (Len) Casanova, associate director of university relations and former head football coach and athletic director at the University of Oregon, will retire next Feb. 1.

In announcing his retirement plans Friday, Casanova said he will go into business as an associate in a local pizza restaurant in the capacity of promotion, advertising, public relations and coordinating youth activities.

Casanova was head football coach at Oregon from 1951 to 1967 when he became athletic director. A former head coach at Santa Clara and Pittsburgh, he currently serves on the NCAA Football Rules Committee.

He is survived by his wife, Beverly, and five children.

Golf

Salt Lake City — California pro Mike Evans goes into the third round of the Utah Open today with a four-stroke lead.

Evans, of Hillsborough, shot a 70 Friday to finish a 135, Forrest Fezler, San Jose, who was tied after the first round with Evans, fell back to a 74 in the second round to hold down second place at 139.

In third place were three professionals — Steve Wilson, Los Angeles; Chick Evans, former assistant pro at host Salt Lake Country Club; and Jon Fister, Ogden, Utah, all at 140.

Houston — Joe Lazaro of Waltham, Mass., was named winner Friday of the 26th annual Blind Golfers Tournament with an opening round score of 89.

Hockey

Montreal — J.C. Tremblay, the all-star defenseman of the Stanley Cup Champion Montreal Canadiens, has signed his contract for the 1971-72 National Hockey League season.

It will be the 12th season with Montreal for the 32-year-old Tremblay.

Sailing

Belvedere's Evan Daley and 47 others started competition today in the 1971 World Star Class Sailing championships in Seattle.

The 19-year-old Marin County skipper qualified for the five-race series concluding next Saturday on Shilshole Bay by winning the Labor Day weekend battle in British Columbia Monday.

PRO GRID ROUNDUP

Jets, Cards and Packers Win; 'Brain Bowl' Tonight

By JOE CARNICELLI
UPI Sports Writer

It's "Brain Bowl" time.

Hank Stram of the Kansas City Chiefs and Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys, probably the two most inventive coaches in pro football, match wits tonight in a pre-season battle of unbeatens.

Stram, who coined the phrase "Offense of the 70s" after the Chiefs won the Super Bowl in 1970, takes these exhibition games seriously. He hasn't lost one in two years but had his record smeared slightly last week when held to a 17-17 tie by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dallas, unbeaten in five pre-season games, also features one of pro football's most intricate offenses. The Cowboys, despite a rash of injuries, have been awesome in exhibition play and Landry will have this final game to decide on a starting quarterback. Roger Staubach takes his turn as a starter tonight with Craig Morton scheduled for relief.

In Friday night play, the New York Jets trounced the New England Patriots 38-9, St. Louis beat Cleveland 27-13 and Green Bay downed Buffalo 20-14.

John Riggins ran 53 yards for a touchdown in the first half and reserve quarterback Bob Davis engineered a 24-point second half to lead the Jets over New England. Riggins' run and Emerson Boozer's one-yard plunge gave the Jets a 14-6 halftime lead and Davis marched the Jets to three second half scores, a 15-yard run by Clifford McClain, a two-yard burst by Steve Harkey and a 21-yard pass to John Dockery.

New England rookie Jim Plunkett, the former Heisman Trophy winner from Stanford, completed 13 of 32 passes for 200 yards. He had two intercepted.

Miller Farr raced 94 yards with an intercepted pass in the last quarter to boost the Cardinals past Cleveland. Farr intercepted Bill Nelsen's pass at the six and used a block by Jim Hargrove to go all the way. Cid Edwards and MacArthur Lane also scored for the Cards while Fair Hooker accounted for the Browns' only TD on a five-yard pass from Nelsen.

Dave Hampton's second TD of the night, a four-yard run early in the fourth period, lifted Green Bay over Buffalo. Rookie Scott Hunter set up the TD with a 31-yard pass to Carroll Dale at the Bills' 31. Hampton scored five plays later and Dave Conway added an insurance field goal late in the game.

Buffalo led 14-3 at the half on Dennis Shaw's 12-yard pass to Haven Moses and an 88-yard punt return by rookie Tim Beamer.

Spitz Heads Fantastic U.S. Streak

MOSCOW (UPI)—The United States, boasting a fantastic victory string in the first 20 events, goes after a sweep of the final nine events today in a triangular swimming meet with Russia and Great Britain.

Mark Spitz established one world record and helped the U.S. set another Friday as the Yanks ran their victory total to 18 in 20 events and piled up a 232-point total to 139 for the Soviet squad and 99 for Britain.

Spitz broke his own 200-meter freestyle mark by seven-tenths of a second when he touched at one minute, 53.5 seconds in the opening leg of the 800-meter freestyle. The U.S. established a world mark of 7:43.33 for the event as Jerry Heidenreich, Fred Tyler and Tom McBreen joined Spitz in the recordbreaking spree.

The U.S. equalled a world record as Ellie Daniel matched her old mark of 2:18.4 in the 200-meter women's butterfly and Ann Simmons tied an American standard in the 400-meter freestyle with a 4:22.8 clocking.

Galina Stepanova gave Russia its only victory of the day as she equalled her European 200-meter breaststroke record of 2:40.1 to beat Claudia Clevenger of the U.S. by seven seconds.

THE 'HARDSHIP' DRAFT

Bullets Pick Cal Cager

NEW YORK (UPI)—Nate Williams was the first of five "hardship cases" chosen by National Basketball Association teams Friday in a supplementary draft.

Williams, a 6-foot-5 swingman from Utah State, was picked by the Cincinnati Royals after being passed up by Cleveland, Buffalo and Portland.

The Atlantic Hawks made 7-foot-2 Thomas Payne the second selection. Payne, who would be entering his junior year at the University of Kentucky, was the first black to play for that school.

Cyrile Baptiste, a 6-foot-9 center-forward from Creighton, was the pick of the Golden State Warriors. The fourth and final player to be picked on the first round was 6-foot-4 guard Phil Chenier, from the University of California at Berkeley. Chenier was chosen by the Baltimore Bullets.

Joe Hammond, a 6-foot-4 guard who did not attend college, was selected by the Los Angeles Lakers on the fourth round. Hammond, rated by many observers as the best player to come out of the Harlem playgrounds, had been extended an invitation to work out by coach Lou Carnesecca of the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association.

Jack Dolph, the commissioner of the ABA announced that 11 undergraduates had been named to the loop's hardship list. In addition to Payne, Baptiste, Chenier, and Williams those named were Mickey Davis of Duquesne University, Ed Leftwich of North Carolina State, Michael Meade of Hartford University, Curtis Pritchett of St. Augustine and Joby Wright of Indiana. Allen Raphael and Anthony Reed were added to the list with no college designated.

NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy, who conducted the draft by telephone, ended the selections after the 20th round with only 6-foot-9 Ed Owens of Weber State left unchosen among those eligible. The selecting took about 30 minutes.

The ABA has made "hardship case" selections previously. Spencer Haywood and, later, Ralph Simpson were signed by the Denver Rockets. This is the first year the NBA has allowed hardship cases.

Players whose financial and family situations either cause them to drop out of school or prevent them from attending one are considered for hardship eligibility.

Champs To Vie In Fairfax Walking Race

The Fairfax Festival walking race tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in the city's Redwood Park will have a definite San Rafael High School influence.

Three Bulldog faculty members plus a student will compete in this seven-mile race. The teaching trio includes 1968 Olympic Games veterans Goetz Klopfer, the 1971 Pan American Games 20-kilometer walk winner in Columbia, and his runnerup Tom Dooley. Bill Ranney, America's 15-mile and 25-kilometer record holder, is the third participating instructor.

They will vie with the nation's top prep walker, San Rafael's Jerry Lansing. The Bulldog senior has been selected to train on the Olympic Development Program in Colorado the past two summers.

Larkspur's Steve Lund, the 30-kilometer Championship Walk victor at the 1969 Junior Nationals, will also compete, along with his 1971 successor Wayne Glusker, a San Jose State graduate student.

USC IS UPSET, 17-10

Alabama's Sweet Revenge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant is a proud man and for a year he had been awaiting the chance to avenge the 42-21 defeat inflicted on his Alabama team by the University of Southern California in the opening game of the 1970 season.

The Crimson Tide did the job to Bryant's satisfaction Friday night as they outplayed the Trojans for a 17-10 victory that looms large to their coach because it was the 200th win of his college career.

"This was one of my most satisfying victories for an opener," Bryant said. "I've been with better teams before, but I've never been associated with a prouder team."

Asked about his plan for the game, Bryant said it simply was to keep the ball the way Alabama used to do when it won the national championship.

Bryant lavished his praise on all his players but had the most for his senior running back, Johnny Musso, who scored both of Alabama's touchdowns and was voted back of the game. Defensive end Robin Parkhouse was named lineman of the game while Steve Higginbotham turned in a spectacular pass interception and fumble recovery in the second half to keep the Trojans in check.

Coach John McKay said he didn't want to take anything away from Alabama and his longtime friend, coach Bryant, but he was not satisfied with his team's defenses.

"We played defense like some Chinese firemen," he said. "They did an excellent job of controlling the ball against us, even though they didn't score as many points as they did last year."

McKay thought a turning point came in the fourth period when the Trojans were moving but a penalty against tackle John Vella for throwing a forearm nullified a first down and Alabama was able to turn back the threat.

"I thought we should have had it at the end," McKay said. "I don't want to take anything away from Alabama. Their backs ran awfully, awfully hard and our defense went for the quarterback instead of waiting for the pitch."

Southern Cal did all its scoring in the second period. The Trojans culminated a 73 yard march with a seven-yard pass from Jones to Charles Young in the end zone. And Mike Rae in the final two seconds of the half booted a 37 yard field goal after Jones' passing put the Trojans in scoring position. Lou Harris of the Trojans gained 116 yards to 85 for Musso but the Alabama star got the touchdowns.

'ANYONE CAN WIN'

Miller Uneasy Leader In Southern Tourney

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI)— John Miller knows what he's talking about.

Right after he posted a 67 Friday to go with his leading 65 of Thursday for an eight-under-par 132 in the $100,000 Southern Invitational Tournament here, he warned:

"I'm not excited about having the lead. There are about 20 guys out here who can win this."

One of them is Gay Brewer. Down by three shots at the start of Friday's round, the veteran from Dallas, Tex., reeled off a sizzling 30-34—64, two off the Green Island Country Club course record.

When the grass settled, the 39-year-old Brewer, who hasn't won a tournament in three years, had matched Miller's two-day total of 132.

But it's strictly a two-man show for the $20,000 first prize money in the second annual event.

Posing the most serious threat is Harry Toscano of New Castle, Pa., who is four back with a 69-67—136.

Five shots behind the co-leaders were Bert Yancey, Cesar Sanudo, Larry Ziegler and Jim Colbert. Ziegler rebounded from an opening 73 with a red-hot 64.

Included in the 138 group was Hugh Royer Jr., who is trying to win in his hometown. He's had identical 69s.

Bob Murphy, with considerable help from a hole-in-one on No. 2, finished with a 65 and is in a five-way tie at 139.

Brewer went on a birdie tear on the back nine with four in a row. A 70-foot putt on No. 14 accounted for one of them.

Miller ran into his first bogies in the Southern open. He strayed over par on Nos. 2 and 15, both direct results of three putts.

Today is Saturday, Sept. 11, the 254th day of 1971.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Virgo.

On this day in history:

In 1777 troops of George Washington were badly defeated by the British in the battle of Brandywine.

In 1841 all members of President John Tyler's cabinet resigned except Secretary of State Daniel Webster. They were protesting the veto of a banking bill.

In 1940 in the early days of World War II, Buckingham Palace in London was damaged by German bombers.

In 1963 all 81 persons aboard an Indian airlines Viscount died when the plane crashed near New Delhi.

A thought for today: U. S. poet Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy."

Hawaii Can Have Its Bad Weather

HONOLULU (UPI)—Hawaii is noted for its pleasant weather, but it is not always that way.

The islands have had tidal waves, floods and vicious wind and surf storms. At Haleakala, Maui, early this year, there was rain, thunder and lightning, sleet, hail, snow and 50-mile-an-hour winds—all in a space of five hours.

The Standard Trump Play Assures Six-Spade Victory

You should be able to make certain plays in your sleep. The correct play of the trump suit in today's hand is included in this category. If you're not familiar with it, just look at the hand carefully and remember it the next time you run into it in actual play.

WHAT THEN?

You take the first trick with dummy's ace of clubs and lead a low trump to the ace. Then:

If you're greedy, you try to make one extra trick, worth 30 points — and lose a small slam worth 50 times as much. If you hungrily lead the king of spades in the hope of capturing the queen, West will get two trump tricks. Down one.

CORRECT PLAY

The correct play is to continue the trumps by leading a low trump toward dummy's jack. This protects you against any possible trump break.

As the cards lie, West must step up with the queen of spades to prevent dummy's jack from winning. East's discard tells you about the bad trump break.

You win any return, lead a trump to the jack, get back to your hand and draw the last trump with the king. The rest if easy.

OTHER BREAKS

The standard play works even if East has the four trumps. West discards when you lead the second trump, and dummy's jack forces out the queen. You get to dummy later and return a trump to finesse through East's ten.

The same sort of play is correct even if your ace and king of trumps are in separate hands. For xample, with K-J-6 opposite A-9-7-3-2, take the first trump with the king. Get to your hand and lead a low trump toward the jack. The situation is then the same as in today's hands. For example, with K-J-6 opposite A-9-7-3-2, take the first trump with the king. Get to your hand and lead a low trump toward the jack. The situation is then the same as in today's hand.

FOUR TRUMPS?

What if neither opponent has four trumps? You lose the second round of trumps, regain the lead and then draw the last trump. You are quite willing to give up one trump trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - 4
♥ - 9 8 4 3 2
♦ - 8 7 4
♣ - K 5 4 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts.

Despite the trump length and side singleton, the hand is too weak for a jump to four hearts. (Some experts would bid four hearts with this hand, but they are in the minority.)

San Juan Bautista Still 'Old California'

There are few places left in California where one can still experience what must have been the "feel" of the Spanish-Mexican era.

The heart of the little town is its ancient plaza, one of the few remaining much as it was in Spanish times. In the days of the dons, it was the scene of many bullfights.

Bordering the north side of the plaza is historic Mission San Juan Bautista, founded in 1797 as the 18th in the chain of California missions. It was designed as the largest of all 21 of the Alta California chain and was built by Indians under the direction of the Franciscan padres. It was completed in 1812, five years before our own Mission San Rafael was founded. On its interior walls you can still see the faded decorations done by Indians long ago.

ALSO FACING THE PLAZA are half a dozen other structures more than a century old, now embraced in a state historic park. These include Plaza Hall, Plaza Stables, Plaza Hotel, Castro Adobe, an ancient log cabin and the town's jail. In Spanish times, the hall was the setting for many a fandango. The hotel was built originally to house Spanish soldiers. The Castro adobe was built to house officials of early California's Mexican government. Later, it was the home of the Patrick Breen family, survivors of the ill-fated Donner party.

Altogheter, within a quarter of a mile of the mission there remain two dozen buildings more than 100 years old, representing various architectures of early California.

Many of these buildings are not mere museum pieces on display for tourists. They actually are still in use as private residences or business buildings. Although streets are paved and sidewalks mostly concrete, much of the atmosphere of Hispanic California is still present.

THE SLEEPY LITTLE town sits on a flat overlooking beautiful, fertile San Juan Valley. If you sit in the shade of the grape arbor at Cadematori's restaurant, overlooking the broad fields of the valley below, it is easy to imagine Indians working in those fields and Spanish vaqueros of yesteryear tending their cattle.

One edge of the plaza overlooks the valley. If you stroll along that edge toward the mission, you can see the outline of what was the stage coach road which marked the original El Camino Real, which began at the trail trudged by the Franciscan padres back and forth between the missions, over the length of California. The ancient cemetery there contains the bones of 5,000 Indians Christianized by the Franciscans.

California missions were secularized by the Mexican government in 1835, but the expropriation order was never effected at San Juan Bautista. Already it was somewhat remote and off the beaten path. It is the only one of California's chain of missions which remained in the hands of the church continuously and uninterruptedly. It has been served by priests in unbroken succession.

IF ALL THIS is not enough to produce the feel of the Spanish-Mexican era, you can still hear Spanish spoken in the streets, in some stores and some beer joints.

Mexican field workers and their families — some undoubtedly descended from the original Spanish and Mexican settlers of San Juan Bautista — are always in evidence on the streets and in the stores.

They usually speak English to storekeepers but among themselves still speak Spanish.

The town's theater offers both indoor and outdoor performances before a shaded patio dotted with tables where playgoers can sip refreshing drinks. Spanish language as well as English language productions are presented.

The main business street of the town today is dotted with antique shops, galleries displaying works of local artists and craftsmen as well as those from other parts of the state, and various restaurants, some featuring early California specialities.

HOW HAS SAN JUAN BAUTISTA escaped "progress?"

When the state built the Coast Highway (which we know now as 101), it followed a shorter, faster route from Salinas to San Jose than the old route of the padres and stagecoaches. The San Juan Valley was bypassed and thereafter isolated from the main stream.

Today, San Juan Bautista's inhabitants number scarcely 1,200. Only recently has it begun to be discovered by visitors.

A visit to San Juan Bautista, plus a bit of imagination, will give you a good idea of what San Rafael was like 100 years ago when Spanish-Mexican influence was still widely in evidence.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to a lot of people — teachers, janitors, school administrators, parents — who have been working hard to get Marin public schools ready for opening. And we hope the schools have a year free enough from conflict so that major energies can be devoted to the job of education.

BRICKBAT to California Development Co. for continuing to add new demands in negotiations for return to the Marin County Redevelopment Agency of land the company failed to redevelop in Marin City. The latest proposal that density restrictions on ridgeland held by Cal Development be eliminated puts the company in a particularly bad light.

BOUQUET to the Belvedere City Council for rebelling against Tiburon's idea of putting a bridle path beside a bicycle path — a ridiculous idea; and a BRICKBAT to the Tiburon City Council for approving such nonsense.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

'National Parks Aren't Made For People'

In view of your recent articles on our Point Reyes National Seashore I would like to point out to the public the true meaning of a national park. You see our national parks aren't made for people. In the interest of people yes but not for them to use directly. Tthe national parks are for the birds and the trees and for every kind of life and non-life that inhabits them.

John Muir in his time had concern that 1,500 people in Yosemite per year would damage it. Last month on week ends there were close to 3,000 people camped in the Tuolomne Meadows area of Yosemite alone. Anyone who has spent more time than the time it takes to drive through Yosemite can tell that John Muir was right. Ecological balance in Yosemite is damaged.

Do we want this to happen to the national park whose future is mostly in our hands?

In conclusion I would like to say that the best way to preserve the park for the natural things that are there is to keep people away or at least have people in small dosages. And the way to do this? Keep the park the way it is. No development besides maintenance. After all, it has been operated that way for at least as long as I've known about it. For nature's sake, save our park.

Director Disavows 'Full Mind' Article

I am writing to correct an impression left by the feature article in the Marin Magazine of Sept. 4, entitled "The Mobilization of the Full Mind."

Because of interest in brain-wave phenomena and related states of mind, such as meditation and ESP, I decided to take a course given under a money-back guarantee, by the men who now direct Motivation Research Center. At that time, they were giving the course under the aegis of another company. Although initially skeptical, I did have an ESP experience on the final day of that course, which I was later able to verify to my complete satisfaction. . .

It was precisely, however, because of what I felt was exaggerated language, and misleading and inappropriate use of words, conveying the impression of an irresponsible attitude, that I encouraged these men to break away from this image to a more responsible one. The possibilities for enlargement of the human potential appear to be multiplying at such a rate today that I feel it important for psychiatrists and allied professionals to encourage and guide the development of this potential, and to aid its transmission to humanity at large . . .

After the above-described successful induction of an ESP experience, I was therefore happy to join an organization headed by people who appeared to me to have the desirable attitudes described above, and this is how I became a member of the board of directors.

However, in the relatively brief time since its organization, it has unfortunately not been true, as implied in your article, that the board gives approval to all material before it is distributed. In fact, it is for this very reason that I have recently told the organization's president that I am on the point of resigning, since I cannot be responsible for the wording of any of the material presented, either orally or in print . . .

Although I believe endeavors such as Motivation Research could really have a very great deal to offer the public, I must disclaim responsibility for what is presented by them unless there is great deal more authority, control, and communication between the board members, the executive, and the instructors on the one hand, than is now the case so far as I am concerned.

Conservationists Score Victory In Atomic Power Plant Order

WASHINGTON — It is not hard to put down the conservationists and environmentalists and fuzzy-minded idealists. But to their credit an important victory must be chalked up.

The Atomic Energy Commission has just ruled that all 96 nuclear power plants, 91 under construction, must show that in operation they will not pollute the environment. This means not alone the threat of a nuclear accident, which the AEC has stoutly maintained is virtually impossible under safety regulations stipulated by the commission, but pollution of the waters —thermal pollution —used in the cooling process.

That has been the outcry of the environmentalists, who maintain that raising the temperature of the water in bays and estuaries by a degree or even a fraction of a degree will destroy marine life. This will, in turn, upset the whole ecological balance in coastal waters, endangering species already on the fringe of extinction.

THE AEC ORDER followed an opinion by Judge Skelly Wright of the United States Court of Appeals holding that the commission had not complied with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. It was not enough, the far-reaching Wright decision held, to rely on certification by the states that thermal and other kinds of pollution would not occur. The commission wisely decided against carrying an appeal to the supreme court.

Each nuclear plant is now given 40 days to prove to the AEC that it will not be a polluter in any form. As construction proceeds the responses will be evaluated.

The conservationists may exaggerate the dangers. The fact is, however, that ever since that first atom bomb explosion in the New Mexican desert, man has been dealing with forces hitherto unknown on this planet. They are forces that give fallible, blundering mankind a reach in power never before dreamed of.

When he was informed of the success of the secret experiment in New Mexico that wisest of wise men, Albert Einstein, said, "Now everything is changed." Everything, he added, except the pictures in men's minds of what their world is like. That is reason enough for caution. In managing these new forces — after all, only 26 years in being —an irretrievable step could put the future in grave jeopardy. A significant body of scientists challenge the AEC's safety regulations and 96 plants mean a multiplication of the risks.

THE AEC IS THE TARGET for an even more concentrated attack by conservationists along with anti-war protesters. This is over the AEC's five-megaton — equivalent to five million tons of TNT, 250 times greater than the bomb that demolished Hiroshima — underground test on the Aleutian island of Amchitka. If it comes off, it will be America's biggest underground nuclear bang.

With protests coming from many sources, a provision by Congress puts the responsibility for going through with the Amchitka blast up to President Nixon. The cost is $160 million, with the AEC claiming that at a depth of 5,875 feet the danger of leakage of radioactivity into the earth's atmosphere is negligible.

But Amchitka is in the heart of an earthquake zone and Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska and many seismologists contend that an explosion of that magnitude could trigger a major quake. Alaskans have painful memories of what happened on Good Friday in 1964. A large part of the state was devastated by an earthquake that began with a shock of 6.5 on the Richter scale and triggered itself to a peak of 8.4, only slightly less than the estimated force of the quake of 1906 that destroyed much of San Francisco.

FROM ALL AROUND the Pacific rim have come protests against the Amchitka explosion, with Canada and Japan the most vehement. On the conservation side, the threat is to seepage of radioactivity into the Bering Sea. The Aleutians are the crossroads for the spawning migrations of Pacific salmon. Contamination of the salmon would be a devastating blow to one of Alaska's principal industries.

Emperor Hirohito of Japan is meeting President Nixon in Alaska on Sept. 25. The guess is that Mr. Nixon will use that occasion to cancel the Amchitka explosion. It would be taken through the Pacific basin as an act of great good will.

Outlook In Israel Gives Little Cheer To Golda Meir

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

For Israeli Premier Mrs. Golda Meir the summer is ending as it began. And it hasn't been easy.

More than a year of ceasefire has brought to the surface manifestations of unrest otherwise suppressed for the common good in time of war emergency.

IN EARLY JUNE, striking hospital maintenance workers virtually closed down government medical services, threatening for a couple of days to leave women in childbirth and accident victims no place to turn in an emergency in those areas not served by private facilities.

Also on strike were electric repairman, dock guards and customs men.

The government invoked emergency regulations and forced them back to work.

A wildcat strike at Tel Aviv's international airport stranded thousands of travelers. The workers were protesting government delays in granting wage increases to meet the nation's spiraling cost of living. They returned to work as the government prepared to invoke emergency measures.

Customs officials staying off their jobs forced the rerouting of ships away from the nation's second largest port of Ashdod. Joining the protests against government economic policies were 8,000 grocery store owners. They locked their doors to protest a government price freeze.

NOR WERE THESE the end of the government's troubles.

Government devaluation of the Israeli pound — the third devaluation in 10 years — has added to the cost of living and to labor's discontent.

"It is the workers who are being devalued," said Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, head of Histradrut, which is the backbone of the ruling Labor party.

And to this were added the voices of Israel's newly vocal poor.

Among them is the organization called the Black Panthers, bearing no relationship to the American group of the same name but combatting what they describe as "discrimination" against the country's Oriental Jewish community.

AS WITH MANY another nation hit with inflation problems, Israel has the outward appearance of prosperity.

New industries are sprouting, especially those related to defense. The French arms embargo beginning in 1967 forced the Israelis to establish a whole new industry. Israel Aircraft Industries alone employs more than 15,000 workers.

The trouble is that the country has been operating on credit, importing $1.4 billion more than it has been able to sell. Per capita, her foreign debt is setting a world record. Interest payments and loans coming due this year will come to nearly $500 million.

Israelis already pay the highest per capita income taxes in the world. And for them the government had only this bit of good news. The taxes, it said, would not go higher.

Buchwald's Version Of Freeze: A Cure For The Common Cold

WASHINGTON — A new cure for the "common cold" couldn't have come too soon. Last week two Israeli researchers announced they had been able to cure nose colds by chilling the big toes of patients' feet. The Israelies claimed that the sudden temporary chilling of the big toes almost immediately brings about a lowering of the normal temperature within the nose. And lowering the nasal temperature dries up the nostrils, thereby curing the cold.

At the time the story appeared on the front pages of newspapers and on television I was in bed with a severe nose cold and my wife said to me, "Let's try it. What have you got to lose?"

The Israeli researchers said they had developed a special indirect cooling apparatus adapted to the shape of the big toe. It uses a refrigerant chemical called dichloro difluoromethane, which can chill a toe in less than a minute. Since we didn't have this chemical available my wife decided to tape an ice cube on each toe.

I LAY THERE with my feet sticking out of each side of the bed and ice cubes on my big toes.

"How do you feel?" she asked.

"About the same."

"Then why are you laughing?"

"The water trickling between my toes makes me ticklish."

The ice cubes kept melting and I kept sneezing and giggling, so my wife said, "Maybe ice cubes aren't the answer. Would you consider putting both your feet in the refrigerator?"

"YOU HAVE TO BE kidding," I said.

"You have everything to gain," she said, taking the ice cubes off my toes and handing me a bathrobe.

I sat on a kitchen chair while she removed the food from the shelves of the refrigerator. "We'll try it in this part of the fridge and if it doesn't work we'll put your feet in the deep freeze."

"There," she said, "put your feet on the third shelf and read a book."

FIVE MINUTES LATER she said, "Do you feel anything?"

"Nothing at all," I said.

"Then your cold is gone?"

"Where should I put them, in the oven?"

"THERE HAS TO BE some way of freezing your toes without giving you frostbite," my wife said.

"Maybe I could put them in the mashed potatoes of a frozen TV dinner?"

"Perhaps," she said, "if you stuck your feet against the air-conditioning vent."

"I'd rather put them out the window."

"I know. I'll make two frozen daiquiris and you can put a big toe in each one. That way they'll freeze but you won't suffer."

She made two daiquiris (banana) and inserted a toe in each glass. I relaxed as nature took its course. My body temperature slowly went down and in half an hour my cold was gone. Now if I can just get rid of this hangover.

Iran Plans Spectacular 2,500th Birthday Celebration

THE SHAH OF IRAN
Will host hundreds

By JOSEPH MAZANDI

TEHRAN (UPI)—Iran, the world's oldest existing monarchy, will celebrate the 2,500th anniversary of its founding in October with a magnificent pageant at Persepolis, a city built by Darius the Great and destroyed by Alexander the Great.

Amid the fabled ruins a tented city is rising to house the 50 or so heads of state expected to attend, along with many distinguished guests and 10,000 others invited by the Shah and Empress Farah.

One of the highlights of the program will be a "son et lumiere"—a sound and light— performance which will recreate the glory of the Achaemenian dynasty and its sacred capital, and a parade of military units in costumes of the various periods of Iranian history.

THE SHAH and his Empress will go to Shiraz, the modern city near Persepolis, on Oct. 12 to greet their guests as they arrive. A state dinner will be held Oct. 14 — catered by the finest chefs of Paris. The next day a pageant will dramatize the long history of the ancient world's greatest empire.

Historians have spent months researching and writing the narration which will be spoken to a background of music composed by Iranian musicians. Among other historic events the pageant will show Alexander of Macedon's triumphant entrance into Persepolis and his ceremonial burning of the Palace of Xerxes—symbolizing the conclusion of the pan-Helenic campaign of revenge.

The final destruction of Persepolis will also be reenacted, although historians are not sure what prompted Alexander to put to the torch a city considered at that time to be the wonder of the world. One legend is that he granted the wish of Thais, an Athenian courtesan, who wanted to see the city burn.

The real significance of the celebrations is that Iran has been able to maintain its separate identity as a nation despite three major invasions. Greeks, Mongols and Arabs have all in turn overrun the country and all were capable of destroying it as an independent and separate nation. Yet these invasions, and a score of minor attacks on Iran, have gone without a trace. The Persian language is still as liquid as it was during the pre-Islamic era.

THE PAGEANT — naturally enough being described as "the greatest spectacle on Earth" — is scheduled for exactly 4 p.m. Oct. 15. Seventy two hours earlier the first of a relay of horsemen will leave Tehran, clad in the military costume of 25 centuries ago and carrying a message to Iran's modern day emperor, Shahanshak (king of kings) Aryamehr (light of the Aryans) Mohammad Reza Pahlevi.

The message will convey the nation's gratitude for his "benign and benevolent rule." The Shah will then address his own people and the world in a radio-television broadcast transmitted by satellite. This will stress Iran's role in world culture, justice and civilization.

The guests—kings, queens, presidents, prime ministers, men and women of letters and the arts and others—seated on specially erected stands in Achaemenian style, directly in front of the ruins of Persepolis, will witness the great pageant. Gilded war chariots will head the two hour parade whose theme is Iran's own history.

The banquet given that night for heads of state by the Shah will "never be forgotten," a prominent court official told UPI. The best caviar in the world, pheasant, venison and hors-de'oeuvres prepared by local and international chefs will be served as the regal assembly lolls Persian style on brocaded cushions placed on carpeted floors, to the entertainment by leading singers and dancers.

THE TENT VILLAGE has all the facilities a modern palace would want, including bars, card rooms, coffee corners and lounges. The 50 main tents will be equipped with two bedrooms, a drawing room, two bathrooms, a dressing room and a kitchen.

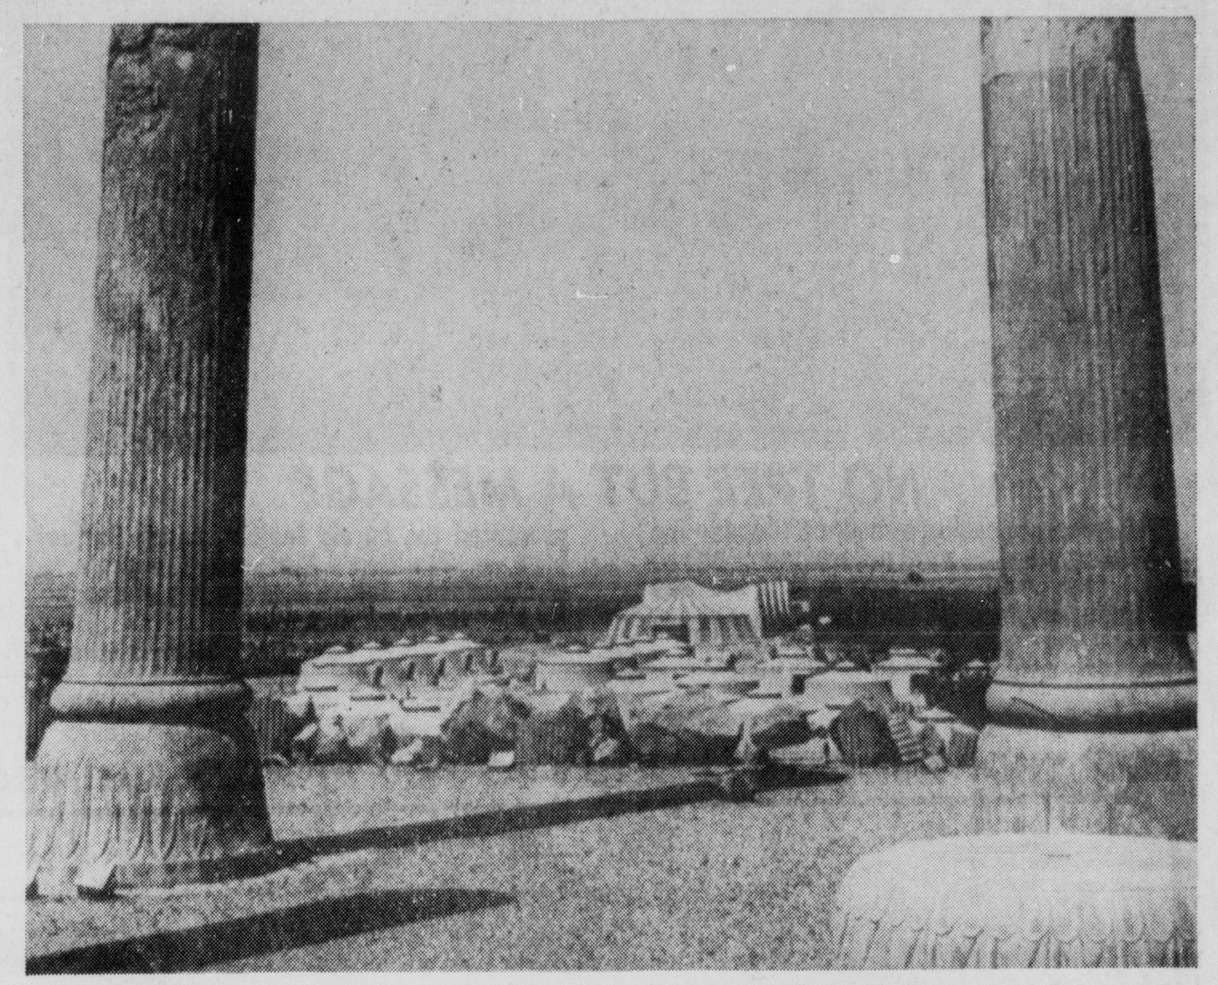
Around the tents, roads, lawns and rose gardens have been laid out, with the top attraction an orange tinted, heavily scented yellow rose specially cultivated in France and named "Persepolis" to mark the occasion.

Beauty parlors are also planned in the tented village, and the ladies will have the attention of Elizabeth Arden, Carita and Alexandre to attend them. Before departing, each head of state will receive a portrait of himself, woven into a magnificent silk and wool Persian carpet.

As the biggest assembly at one time of the heads of state and their wives under a single tent, an all-out effort has been made for comfort and safety.

The tents have been tested to withstand wind velocity of 125 m.p.h. Measures have been taken to destroy the deadly snakes, scorpions and huge rats infesting this desert area. To take care of any emergencies, a mobile first aid center and hospital have been set up.

In addition, prefabricated dwellings imported from Cyprus, new hotels and other structures have been built to accommodate the 10,000 visitors expected for the celebrations. Several school dormitories in Shiraz have been remodeled to house the 1,200 news reporters, photographers and cameramen covering the event.



THE SETTING — Amid the fabled ruins of Persepolis, a city built by Darius the Great and destroyed by Alexander the Great, a tented city is rising to house in mid-October the 50 or so heads of state expected to attend, along with many distinguished guests, the 2,500th anniversary celebration of the founding of the Persian Empire. (UPI Telephoto)

The official start of the celebrations will be at 11 a.m. on Oct. 12, when the Shah will place a wreath on the mausoleum of Cyrus the Great at Pasargadae. A 101-gun salute will mark the unfurling of the flags of Achaemenian and present-day Iran. Pasargadae, a short distance from Shiraz, was the seat of Cyrus the Great, who founded the Persian empire.

Cyrus is said to be the first king to promulgate the "declaration of human rights." He granted equal status to all his subjects and freedom of religious worship. He rebuilt the Temple of Solomon which had been destroyed by the Babylonian kings and freed some 40,000 Jews who had been jailed by the Babylonians, allowing them to return to their homes.

IN TEHRAN on Oct. 16 the Shah will inaugurate the huge Shahyad Aryamehr monument which, along with its gardens, covers an area of about 12 acres at the entrance to the city from Mehrabad international airport. On top of the monument is a large restaurant overlooking the city. The rest houses a museum with artifacts from the country's 2,500-year history.

The following day the Shah and his guests will attend the opening of a 100,000-seat stadium in Tehran. Later they will see a play at the Rudaki Theater Hall on an Achaemenian theme.

The Shah recently told an interviewer that the celebrations should be seen for their "stupendous historical and spiritual significance" to Iran and its people, rather than the "extravaganza" aspects.

He added that the October festivities are intended to "celebrate the marvel of the continuity of a way of life and a system of government which have ensured to Iran an uninterrupted national identity together with a positive guarantee for its future unity, stability, progress and prosperity."

The Jobless Rate Soars In Britain

By CHRISTOPHER B. OGDEN

LONDON (UPI) —The way Giles Andrews sees it, nobody in his right mind would dream of going on strike in Britain right now, no matter what his grievance.

"Strike? You've got to be bloody crazy to strike these days," the 27-year-old Cambridge University graduate said "too many aren't working already —including me."

Andrews is a journalist and a bachelor. He has been out of work for two months, picking up sporadic freelance work to help him scrape together the five pounds ($12) weekly rent he pays to share a West London apartment with two others.

"You'd think the university education would help," he said. "But no —London is full of free-lancers and there's precious little work available."

GILES ANDREWS' remarks mirror the mood of many British workers and employment officials at a time of the nation's highest unemployment figures in 30 years. The underlying attitude seems to be, "hang on to whatever job you've got and count yourself lucky to have it."

Labor analysts and employment officials say they see a relationship between this sort of thinking and recent government statistics showing strikes down by half from 1970.

"There's a definite psychological factor in staying on the job these days," said a spokesman for the giant Trade Unions Congress (TUC), Britain's equivalent of the U.S. AFL-CIO. It represents some nine million workers.

"You don't put your job in jeopardy by threatening to walk out when it's already a bit in jeopardy," he said.

AN OFFICIAL at the government Department of Employment said just under 800,000 British workers were out of jobs in July. The total, 3.4 per cent of the nation's work force, was the highest since 1940, he said. He noted, too, that there were only 1,176 strikes across the country in the first six months of this year, a 50 per cent drop from the 2,355 registered during the same period a year ago.

He declined to draw any conclusion from the figures. But Robert Cook, manager of the government's employment exchange in Marylebone-Camden, a commercial district in North London, said he thought fear of unemployment was keeping many workers on the job.

"Any number of workers used to say 'to hell with it, I'm going to pack it in (quit) and move on,' when they hit a bad patch," said Cook.

MACHINIST COLIN Harris, 32, was direct about his dissatisfaction with his current weekly salary of 22.50 pounds ($54). He pays 6.50 pounds a week alone for government-assisted housing for himself, his wife and three children. He'd like to look for more skilled work, perhaps as a welder.

"That could bring me an easy 10 quid (pounds —$24) more," Harris said. "But with so many others looking for jobs, I can't take the chance of leaving this one."

Government officials, pleased with their success in ending a two-month postal strike last March, are more confident now about handling industrial disputes.

Some predict that, despite such problems as the Upper Clyde Shipbuilders, where workers took over the yards in protest against a government rejection of a request for more subsidy funds, the worst problems with strikes are over.

"THE GOVERNMENT set its face against inflationary rises and took the fever out of the labor situation," one official said. He attributed last winter's labor "militancy" to a reaction against partial wage and price restraints imposed during the mid-1960s.

Labor itself agreed on the reasons.

"When the government relaxed it, we simply had to work our way through a period of wage claims," a TUC spokesman said.

He was not so confident about future labor peace.

WILL RULES WORK?

1972 Conventions May See End To Nomination Hoopla

WASHINGTON (UPI)—When a Democratic orator names "the man who" he says is destined to lead the nation for the next four years, delegates to the 1972 Democratic National Convention are supposed to keep their seats and remain silent.

It probably won't work, but a proposed rule from one of the party's reform commissions says delegates "shall maintain order" before and after nominating speeches. It also says "demonstrations on behalf of candidates shall not be permitted."

If this rule, proposed by a group headed by Rep. James G. O'Hara of Michigan, is adopted by the convention and enforced, delegates cannot jam the aisles, joined by outsiders sneaking in with hired bands, to stage domonstrations intended to show their candidate is the popular choice.

THE O'HARA Commission and another headed by Rep. Donald M. Fraser of Minnesota have spent more than two years writing and seeking adoption of convention rules and delegate selection standards to prevent the chaos that disrupted the 1968 Democratic Convention.

The Fraser Commission is claiming power to compel state Democratic organizations to follow many of its delegate selection proposals, subject to acceptance by the convention.

Republican leaders established a "Do Committee" (for delegates and organizations) with less authority to make recommendations in the same areas.

The Do Committee proposed that covention demonstrations be allowed only for candidates with "substantial delegate support," which was not defined. It reported that a poll of GOP National Committee members and state chairmen favored allowing only delegates and alternates in demonstrations.

Among other things, convention managers in both parties want to hold their television audiences. Demonstrations can create temporary excitement. But it can turn to boredom when the convention chairman is unable to cut them off.

THESE MANAGERS also take a cool view of "favorite son" candidates whose names go before conventions as tributes from their home states or to give undecided delegations time to choose between the major candidates.

When President Nixon appeared almost certain of a first ballot nomination in 1968, the names of 12 candidates were placed before the Republican convention, including the irrepressible Harold E. Stassen.

Five names were submitted to the Democratic convention.

For 1972, the O'Hara Commission recommended that candidates with substantial support in at least three states be allowed a half hour for nominating and seconding speeches. Others would get only five minutes.

The GOP committee also recommended only five minutes for favorite son candidates and 14 minutes —11 less than in 1968 —for others. It reported that its poll showed heavy support for forbidding demonstrations for favorite sons.

IT IS THE Fraser Commission, formerly headed by Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota, which is leading the Democrats into unexplored territory. The GOP is moving much more cautiously.

Some members of the Fraser Commission itself disagree about the meaning of its 18 guidelines for selecting delegates. Some have freely predicted a record number of contests over seating delegates. Some Democrats believe enforcement of the standards will cause chaos; others think enforcement is necessary to prevent chaos.

One guideline likely to cause trouble requires state delegations to represent women, Young people and minority groups in "reasonable relationship to their population in a state." But a footnote in the report says no quota system is intended and opens the way to endless argument.

One question is what happens when a state electing Democratic convention delegates in a primary names all-male candidates over 40. The rebuttal is that presidential candidates and state Democratic organizations should avoid this by naming representative slates.

THE GOP committee asked equal representation for men and women in state delegations and "numerical equity" for voters under 25. But it ran into a snag seeking a formula to give numerical equity to minority groups which tend to be heavily Democratic. A formula dealing with this issue was promised for a Republican National committee meeting in December.

Figures collected for the Fraser Commission indicated that only 5.5 per cent of the 1968 Democratic delegates were black, 13 per cent women and 4 per cent under 30. These figures showed 1.9 per cent of the Republican delegates were black, 17 per cent women and 1 per cent under 30.

The Do Committee proposals are just recommendations to Republican state organizations, the National Committee and the Convention Arrangements Committee. Its delegate selection suggestions go to the 1972 convention for adoption as party rules for the 1976 convention. Most of the Democratic proposals are intended for application in 1972.

One Republican proposal calls for allotting one seat from each state on each of four major convention committees to one man, one woman, one person under 25 and one from a minority group.

O'HARA'S commission proposed enlargment of convention committees in a different way. In the past, Democratic committees have had a maximum of 110 members — two from each state, the District of Columbia and four territories.

The change would allow each state and the five other areas at least one member on a 150-member committee, allowing larger membership for populous states more in line with the weight of their vote in the full convention. These enlargments would affect committees writing the platform, hearing credentials contests and writing convention and party rules.

In case the Fraser Commission's delegate selection standards do produce a record number of contests, the O'Hara Commission has developed an elaborate procedure, already approved by the Democratic National Committee, for settling credentials fights.

If members of a delegation are challenged, a hearing officer may be named to collect facts within a state and report to the Credential Committee. The committee would be required to meet no later than June 26, two weeks before the convention opens at Miami Beach. Its report would have to be circulated 48 hours before the convention opens.

ANOTHER POTENTIAL cause of trouble: Fraser's Commission is talking at least about devising a plan to permit the Credentials Committee to name delegates as substitutes for those held to have been chosen without compliance with the guidelines.

Both parties are planning regional hearings on their 1972 platforms before the convention. But the O'Hara Commission also is asking that the final draft from the platform committee be circulated to all delegates 10 days before the convention opens instead of during the convention.

Aggravating disputes about party reform is a lawsuit against the Democratic National Committee. The committee adopted a delegate apportionment formula cutting bonus votes given small states in 1968 but not so far as the O'Hara Commission recommended.

A group of Democrats sued for a formula based on the Democratic vote in the most recent presidential election or elections. A U.S. district court ruled against the National Committee in a case now before the D.C. Court of Appeals and headed for the Supreme Court.

The two parties have needled one another about the reform issue. Democratic leaders have argued that only they were so bold as to undertake real reform when its time had come. Republican leaders have retorted that their party never permitted some of the abuses the Democrats are trying to correct.

SECRETARY WILLIAM ROGERS
Makes proposal on yen

Everybody still was talking about the economy this week and President Nixon talked twice—in a radio address to the nation and in a joint session of Congress.

Nixon, in his congressional address, said the wage-price freeze would not be extended. He said measures of "wage and price stabilization" would be needed when the freeze expires Nov. 13. He did not say what they would be.

In his radio broadcast, Nixon said Americans had greeted his emergency policies with "overwhelming response." He called for increased productivity through new investment, job training, management and pride by employes in their work.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers asked Japan to revalue its yen and end restrictions against U.S. products exported to Japan. Japanese Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda urged the United States to end the 10 per cent import surcharge.

Joe Cahill, a leader of a wing of the Irish Republican Army, was deported from the United States. He had arrived the week before but was denied entrance on grounds his visa was invalid. In Dublin, Irish officials detained and then released him.

CAHILL'S ARM of the IRA has claimed responsibility for some of the recent strife in Northern Ireland.

A tunnel was dug into a prison in Montevideo and 106 members of the Tupamaros guerrilla organization escaped.Later the Tupamaros freed British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson who had been kidnaped in Montevideo eight months ago.

Searchers went up a mountain near Juneau, Alaska, to bring back the bodies of 111 persons who died when an Alaska Airliner 727 crashed. There were no survivors among the 104 passengers and seven crewmen.

A new 1,375-foot television tower crashed through part of a transmitter building near Shoreview, Minn., and killed seven men.

SIX MEN WERE arrested on conspiracy charges in the bombing of 10 empty school buses in Pontiac, Mich. Two of the men were identified as key figures in the Michigan Klu Klux Klan.

NO TREE BUT A MESSAGE

This concrete casing was placed outside the Novato corporation yard several years ago so that a tree could be planted in it to beautify the entrance. Perhaps the failure to plant one prompted the barely legible, sarcastic message — "Madisen's Madhouse" — scrawled on the casing. Carrol Madsen is maintenance superintendent of Novato.

Barrows Wants Only One Assistant In His Office

Marin County should have only one assistant county administrator instead of two and that assistant should get a pay raise because of increased responsibility.

This will be the recommendation of County Administrator John F. Barrows to the Marin County Board of Supervisors next Tuesday morning.

His assistant is Thomas F. Campanella, who is now getting $23,820 per year. Since Campanella will be the only assistant, Barrows recommends that Campanella's pay be raised to $25,020 as soon as the federal wage freeze will permit.

Former County Administrator Alan Bruce, who resigned on July 1, had two assistants (Barrows and Campanella), and two senior administrative analysts (Nichael A. Chrystal and William R. Pryor), a total staff of five including himself. Pryor was transferred to the probation department in July.

Barrows will ask for the same total of five, but re-allocated in this way:

County administrator, one assistant (Campanella), one senior administrative analyst (Chrystal), and two administrative analysts (one is Robert Peterson, and the second is to be hired).

This re-allocation will mean a $14,000 reduction in total cost for the remaining nine months of this fiscal year, Barrows said.

Pancake Breakfast Scheduled Tomorrow

The Petaluma Kiwanis Club will host a pancake breakfast tomorrow from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Petaluma Senior High School.

Proceeds will benefit the Petaluma Police Assistance League Girls Drill Team and the Rancho Cotate High School Key Club.

Five Youths Hurt In Wreck

Five San Rafael teen-agers were injured yesterday, none seriously, after the car they were riding in went out of control on a fire road in Fairfax and rolled over an embankment.

California Highway Patrol said the driver, Joan E. Schwartz, 18, of 353 Mountain View Avenue, was driving too fast for the road, located near Oak Manor and Manor Vier, at 1:10 a.m. when she lost control of the car.

She was treated at Marin General Hospital for back bruises. Passengers in the car, also treated at the hospital, were Michael Mountanos, 17, of 357 Mountain View, cuts on thumb and bruises; Thomas J. Gocher, 16, of 358 Mountain View, minor cuts and bruises; Mark Mountanos, 16, 357 Mountain View, broken right wrist, and Diana Castro, 18, of 313 Summit Avenue, back bruises.

The Welsh In The Bay Area

Marinites Take Active Part In Keeping Heritage Alive

By DON KEOWN

Ask Jayne Jones Calkins of Mill Valley to say something in the tongue of her native Wales, and she is likely to sing out: "Cymru mam byth!"

Which, translated, means, "Wales forever!"

And that pretty will summarizes the cause to which the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area, of which Mrs. Calkins is Marin's most active member, is dedicated.

"We are determined to keep alive our Welsh heritage and culture," she says, "and particularly our Welsh language."

WHY ALL this devotion to a language that is one of the most difficult of all the earth's tongues to master and which is spoken only in one corner of the United Kingdom, and even there must share the spotlight with English?

"Because," answers Mrs. Calkins, "it is not only one of the most beautiful languages in the word — so musical — but it is also one of the oldest. It has a tremendous history, having withstood centuries of British efforts to suppress it.

"Its loss would be a great blow, not only to the Welsh, but to all people. Just consider how many lovely poems and songs have been written in the language."

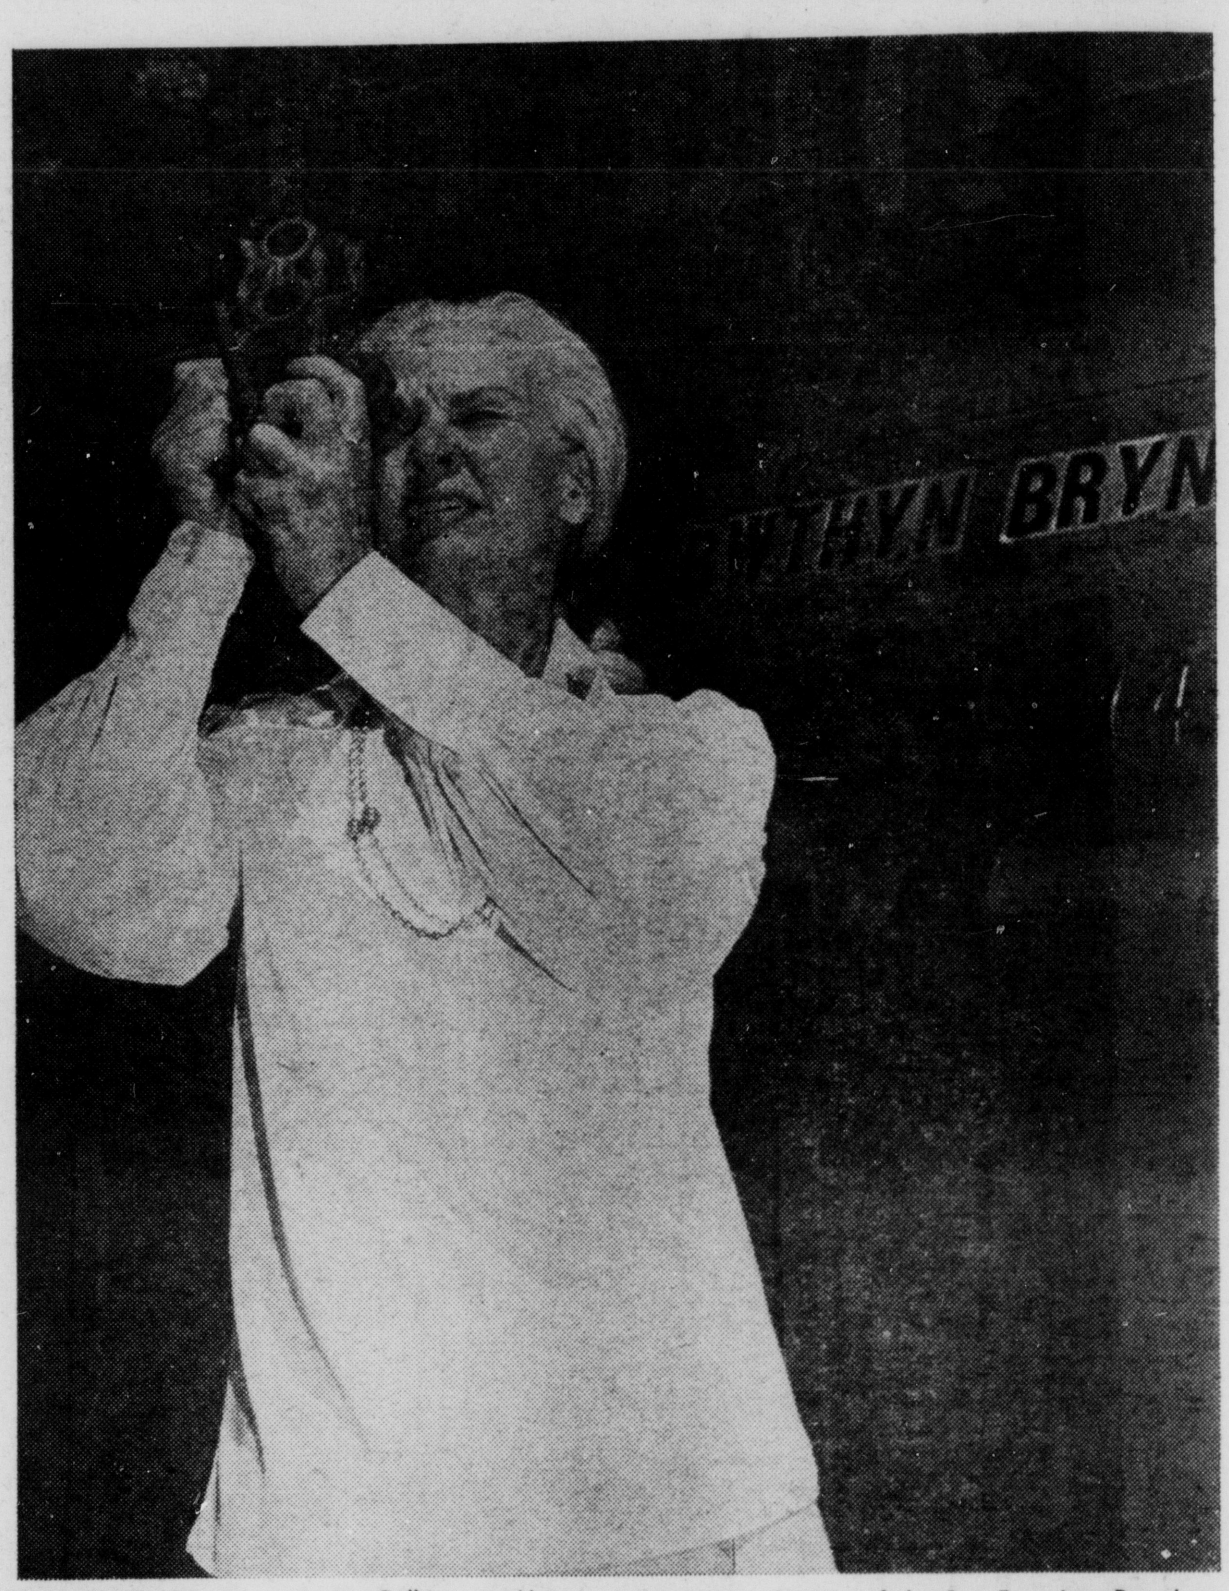
THUS, SHE says, groups like the Welsh-American Society, and the Northern California Cambrian Association, to which she also belongs, are always on the alert for opportunities to preserve the Welsh language and to encourage its use, both in the mother land, and overseas among persons of Welsh descent.

The movement, she adds, is meeting with considerable success.

"In Wales, it has become very, very fashionable these days to speak Welsh," she says. "The young people are our best hope, and not just the nationalists. All the youth seem to have become more aware of their heritage."

And in this country, where Welsh once seemed a dying language spoken only by a few reared in Welsh-speaking families, the language is now being studied by more and more young people attracted by its melodious quality.

SHE TELLS of the instructor at the University of California at Los Angeles who teaches classes in Welsh "even though he, himself, is of Irish ancestry."



THE HOME OF Jayne Jones Calkins on Mount Tamalpais above Mill Valley bears the name plate — "Bwthyn Bryn" — meaning Hill Cottage in Welsh. Here, in front of the house, Mrs. Calkins, Marin's most active member of the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area, sights through a sextant that belonged to Capt. Idwal Lewis, her uncle and the last surviving officers of the Lusitania.

Jayne Jones was actually American-born, at Utica, N.Y., but as a baby she was taken by her parents to the small North Wales town of Barmouth and spent her first years there. When she was 5, she was brought back to Utica, "speaking Welsh only."

At 6 she began her training for a career as a concert pianist, and she graduated from the Utica Conservatory of Music before an injury to her arm forced her to abandon those ambitions.

SHE THEN took a position with Doubleday and Co., book publishers.

Along with Wales and books, sailing is a subject that commands a special affection from her. For a time she and her late husband ran one of the country's most unusual bookstores, the Barkenstine Book Shop of Marina Dal Rey, Calif., specializing in nautical works.

Wrote Patrick M. Royce of Royce Publications: "Jayne Calkins probably knows more about the boating book field on the West Coast than anyone I know."

JAYNE CALKINS still enjoys a session at the piano, and also sings, having been for 15 years a member of Utica's Bach Choir. She has been active, too, in the theater, as an actress, musical director, costume coordinator, lighting director and singer.

At present her only such affiliation is with Theater Flamenco, a company headed by Adele Clara and Miguel Santos. Her connection there is the outgrowth of an earlier association with Chinin de Triana as his lighting designer. And she finds the link between herself, so staunchly Welsh, and the distinctive Spanish Gypsy music and dance not at all extraordinary, recalling that De Triano once told her that the Welsh and the Gypsies were related. "He read it in Federico Lorca."

Today, a widow, Mrs. Calkins works as a secretary for Bauman Brothers and Dick Miller Associates, yacht brokers and marine supply dealers, at Clipper Yacht Harbor, Sausalito, "and I love it because it keeps me near the boats."

SHE LIVES in a small house on Mount Tamalpais above Mill Valley which she describes as "resembling a ship's cabin that might have been cast, intact, from some old coastal schooner offshore during a violent storm and landed here safely, high and dry, among the trees where the raccoons come now to spend the evenings out on deck."

Then she smiles: "Unless we Welsh watch ourselves, we find ourselves talking like that."

Inside, amid momentoes of her beloved Wales and sailing, she edits the Welsh-American Society's Bay Area newsletter — the Pathau Cymraeg — which is issued every month and sent to some 600 addresses.

"I PUT A lot of time into it," she admits. "It sometimes seems as though I am working on it constantly."

But, she adds, its contributions toward the effort to keep alive Welsh culture and traditions makes the many hours of research, writing and production all worthwhile. The newsletter is mimeographed in Sausalito.

The Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area was founded in 1963 with Donna Davies of San Francisco taking the lead in its organization, aided by Jayne Calkins and two other Bay Area residents, Colin Edwards and Mary Cooper.

"WE WANTED to maintain our cultural background," says Mrs. Calkins, simply.

The organization has no chairman or president. Miss Davies is the executive secretary, Miss Cooper of San Francisco the treasurer, and Joan

Determined Welsh Keep Alive Their Heritage, Language

Marinites Join In Movement To Preserve People's Ways

Howell, yet another San Franciscan, the recording secretary.

The society, according to Jayne Calkins, often works in cooperation with the older Cambrian Association, although, she says, the younger group is the more active of the two organizations now.

THE CHOIR, 90 voices strong, hails from Rhymney Valley in South Wales, and will be flying from Cardiff to Oakland on Oct. 7. A performance Oct. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in San Francisco's Masonic Auditorium will be one of the highlights of that city's British Week observance.

In addition there will be appearances at Sacramento and Angwin.

Accompanying the choir will be Aeron Thomas, daughter of poet Dylan Thomas, who will read from the works of her famous father.

The appearance of Miss Thomas provides a special thrill for Jayne Calkins who says: "I met Dylan Thomas on several occasions and always found him a very, very warm person, with a great love for his country."

THE PENDYRUS Choir was formed in 1924 by out-of-work coal miners, and has since grown to virtuoso status, with vocalists from many vocations and backgrounds.

Under the direction of Glynne Jones, one of the foremost experts on Welsh music, the choir is recognized as their country's leading exponents of Cymric or Welsh-language choral music. Their program, however, will be varied, and include early classic, romantic and modern compositions from several countries and cultures, along with the favorite and most stirring of Wales' traditional songs.

While the Welsh singers are in the area they will be the guests of Bay Area Welsh-Americans.

SOME, SAYS Jayne Calkins, will be staying in Marin. "And most certainly we will be showing them the sights of Marin County."

Another project in the planning stage is a "nosen lawen" or "happy evening" to be conducted Sept. 19 starting at 4 p.m. in the Trinity Methodist Church in San Francisco, with "everyone of Welsh background, or interested in Welsh culture, invited to attend."

The event will be staged in the traditional style of Wales in the time before radio and television when neighbors would gather in the farmhouses to provide their own entertainment — by singing, by reading poetry, by playing the harp or some other instrument."

OFTEN AT these happy evenings the talent was found for the national Eisteddfod, which alternates annually between North and South Wales, and the international Eiseteddfod, held always at Llangollen.

The two great music festivals and competitions are still Wales' major event of the year. And Welsh-Americans are proud that a choir from Detroit won a recent international Eiseteddfod title.

On the West Coast, the only true Welsh choir is sponsored by the Pacific Coast's lone Welsh-language church in Los Angeles.

BUT MEMBERS of the Northern California Cambrian Association have banded together to sing in Welsh as they did in 1969 at San Francisco ceremonies in conjunction with the investiture of Prince Charles.

The Cambrians, whose membership overlaps with the Welsh-American Society, have an impressive history of musical activities that include a national song festival of "gymanfa ganu" in San Francisco in 1960. The national event was held in Los Angeles in 1966.

Mrs. Calkins says the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area currently has an active membership of about 200, of whom "easily between 60 and 75 live in Marin County."

BUT THIS, she adds, is only a small fraction of the Bay Area's population that can claim Welsh descent.

"So well integrated is most of the Welsh population that it has lost its identity," she says with some sadness. "They have melted into the pot, and have disappeared."

What is it about Northern California that has attracted so many people of Welsh, Scottish, Irish and English descent to its cities, towns and countryside?

"I THINK we are lured here by the fact that the climate and the topology of the Northern California coast is so similar to that of our mother countries," Mrs. Calkins answers.

Marin County, in particular, impresses her with its similarities to Wales, and she often refers to this country as "Little Wales Beyond the Golden Gate" in her more poetic writings in Pethau Cymraeg.

There is, she says, a stretch of shoreline "just before you come into Stinson Beach" that she finds almost identical to the coastal contours around historic Harlech Castle in North Wales to which she returns frequently.

JAYNE CALKINS would like to see more of the Bay Area's Welsh-Americans enlist in the society's effort to preserve the language and traditions of Wales.

The organization meets once a month, usually in San Francisco, sometimes in a restaurant, but most often in the colorful and roomy Edinburgh Tavern of San Francisco's Geary Street.

She finds it not at all strange that a Welsh organization should gather in a Scottish tavern among the tartans and the pipes.

"THE WELSH and the Scottish have always had a strong affinity for one another," she says. "They have shared so much in their histories. The same holds true of the Scottish and the Irish."

Edinburgh Tavern gives the society's membership access to a piano in the upstairs dining and meeting room — "the Welsh just cannot get together without some singing" — plus tasty fish and chips served up in rolled newspapers in true British style.

A prime attraction of the society is its "discount rate" tour program made possible by an affiliation with the British Commonwealth Association of San Francisco and the British-American Club of Northern California Inc.

WELSH-AMERICAN Society members are frequent travelers to Wales, either with the charter groups or on their own.

"Sometimes," says Jayne Calkins, "in the summers, there are so many of us in Wales that we have a difficult time attracting a good turnout for our functions at home."

Other Welsh-Americans prefer to time their trips back to the homeland for the Christmas season to enjoy the traditional, less commercialized holiday observance so unforgettable described by Dylan Thomas.

How do today's Welsh-Americans feel about the nationalists and the separatists working and agitating for full or a greater degree of independnece for Wales?

AT FIRST, Jayne Calkins admits, there was a tendency to regard them with misgivings, possibly as dangerous radicals.

But now, she says, the responsible nationalists have the moral support of their American kinsmen. "We have come to recognize that they are patriots. They are going quietly and wisely about their work. And we are strongly behind them."

Separation, she admits, is most unlikely. But an achievement that might well be realized, she feels, is a fairer, larger representation for Wales in the British Parliament.

AND, OF course, the all-im-

Bay Area Is Home To Welsh

They Like Its Similarity To 'Old Country'

THE PENDYRUS CHOIR of 90 male voices, recognized as Wales' leading exponents of choral music in the Welsh language, will present an international program Oct. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in San Francisco's Masonic Auditorium as part of the British Week observance. The Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area will help entertain the singers during their California stay, and a number of the choir members will be the guests of Marinites of Welsh descent.

portant "recognition of our language."

Another question: "How do Welsh-Americans — particularly older Welsh-Americans — feel about rock-and-roll singer Tom Jones, probably actor Richard Burton's only rival as the best-known living Welshman?

There was, Mrs. Calkins says, at first some indifference on the part of older Welsh-Americans towards Jones, primarily because of a dislike for his "gyrations."

BUT AS Jones progressed up the music ladder, he began to win over such critics, "especially the older women who responded to his personality."

"There is no doubt about his voice," says Jayne Calkins. "There is a great voice behind all the gimmickry."

And, she says, the tireless young entertainer with the heavy head of hair has "now entered a more productive period where he is providing a better and better quality of entertainment."

"But, of course," she admits, "we are especially impressed by his genuine love of his country. We respect and admire him for that."

MARY HOPKIN, a very pretty young, sweet-voiced singer, is another entertainer cited by Mrs. Calkins for her contributions toward reviving interest in the folk music and langauge of Wales.

In her issues of Pethau Cymraeg for which she writes and edits as Jayne Pruddarch ("a Welsh family name"), she covers a wide range of subjects.

There are news items on upcoming meetings and special events and upon the tour program. There are reports on events that have taken place during the past month. There are items about members who have traveled abroad, usually to Wales, or who have entertained guests from overseas, along with other newsy tidbits. There are reviews of books about Wales or by Welsh writers. There are updatings on the current doings of Welsh celebrities. There are tidings from the homeland.

THERE ARE descriptive passages about Welsh cities, villages and countryside.

"The mining scars are restricted to South Wales and to the area around Cardiff," she says. "There is no more beautiful and unspoiled countryside to be found anywhere than in Wales, and particularly in North Wales."

Visitors, once exposed to Snowdonia National Park, or to any of Wales' other many scenic areas, return singing the praises of the country and anxious to return, she notes.

Writing in a recent issue, she declared:

"As many of you well know, I have never had any doubt that it was in fact Prince Madoc who discovered America in 1170 — that's more than three centuries before Columbus. Just a year ago I devoted considerable space to this topic, and proclaimed that we would one day be observing Prince Madoc Day.

"NOW THERE is a new book which bears out all I have found myself and a great deal more to substantiate what should now be accepted as perfectly logical.

"As previously stated, there were 72 works listed in a 'Bibliography of Pre-Columbian Discoveries' on Madoc's discovery, the earliest of which appeared in 1584. More recent, in 1876, Bowen's book, 'America Discovered by the Welsh,' was published in Philadelphia, followed by Deacon's book, 'Madoc and the Discovery of America,' in 1967."

IN MISS Pugh's new book, tremendous research establishes the existence of the Welsh Indians. And when you take into consideration that Welshmen have been sailors since 55 B.C., and the theory of the currents in the Atlantic Ocean between Wales and the Gulf of Mexico, it is quite conceivable that he did land in Mobile, Ala.

"Furthermore, he could have done it in a rowboat; it's being done today. So that rules out the idea that they didn't have the proper craft for such a voyage.

"Moreover, the Welsh-speaking Indians were using coracles when they were discovered by later explorers. These they could have learned to make, only from the Welsh. There is no end to the fascination of this subject."

JAYNE CALKINS challenges: "Read this book yourself and you will become a believer and join the crowd that does."

Earlier she had reported proudly that the Virginia Cavalier Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution had erected a memorial tablet on Mobile Bay commemorating the Welsh prince's landing.

Another article dealt with Dr.

THE CORACLE, editor Jayne Calkins informed the readers of her Welsh-American Society newsletter, is the distinctive circular boat that the Welsh have used for centuries, and which the fishermen of Wales continue to employ today. Light in weight, they require a special skill in paddling, and they have long fascinated historians.

R. Elfyn Hughes of Ffestiniog, director of the Nature Conservancy in Wales and a pioneer teacher of ecology at the University of Wales more than two decades ago.

A STORY detailing his achievements preceded a visit by Dr. Hughes to California and his attendance as guest of honor at a Welsh-American Society function. Proudly Mrs. Calkins wrote later: "Professor Hughes (in a visit to Bwthyn Bryn) inspected my Welsh library and stated it was the best private collection he had seen."

And from the newsletter readers pick up such bits as:

"Then there was the captain of the Mayflower, who was a fellow named Jones, and among the Puritans who left England with him were many Welshmen."

"THE LAST surviving officer of the Lusitania is Capt. Idwal Lewis, of Stockton, who happens to be my uncle."

"Coracles... have always been a source of historical interest to mariners through the centuries, and are still in use today in some parts of Wales by fishermen, especially by salmon fishers on the River Severn and the Wye. Coracles were circular in form and made of skins stretched across a wicker framework."

"ONE OF the best contributors to California history was Welshman Idwal Jones, best known for his book 'Vermilion.' However, he wrote more than 200 stories and vignettes of California history, literature and folklore."

And: "Some of the best gymanfa ganus on the West Coast are held at a little church in Beaver Creek near Portland in Oregon."

Mrs. Calkins is proud of a letter she received from Dr. Islyn Thomas, president of the St. David's Society of the State of New York, in which he wrote:

"At our quarterly meeting I was presented with a copy of Pethau Cymraeg. This indeed was very interesting and you should be congratulated on an excellent Welsh newspaper.

"I WONDER if I could also become a member of the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area? The reason, of course, is to know what is going on in your area in Welsh affairs so that I can then advise Welsh Americans on the East Coast as to what is happening out there."

Jayne Calkins, however, is quick to point out that she is not the only Marinite active in Welsh affairs.

Byron Joes, for instance, and now daughter Rebecca, have played leading roles in popularizing Welsh music along with their contributions to Bay Area music generally.

BUT THAT, says Jayne Calkins, is only the beginning of the roll call of Marinites who are taking part in the campaign to keep alive their language and other associations with the bonnie — to borrow an adjective from the friendly Scots — land from whence came their forefathers.

Jayne Jones Calkins acknowledges, however, that they still have a very, very long way to go before her dream of a Prince Madoc's Day observance in America comes trues.

Until then she must settle for St. David's Day observance in March, annually marked by Northern California's Welsh with a banquet under Cambrian Association sponsorship, and with the wearing of the leek and the daffodil.

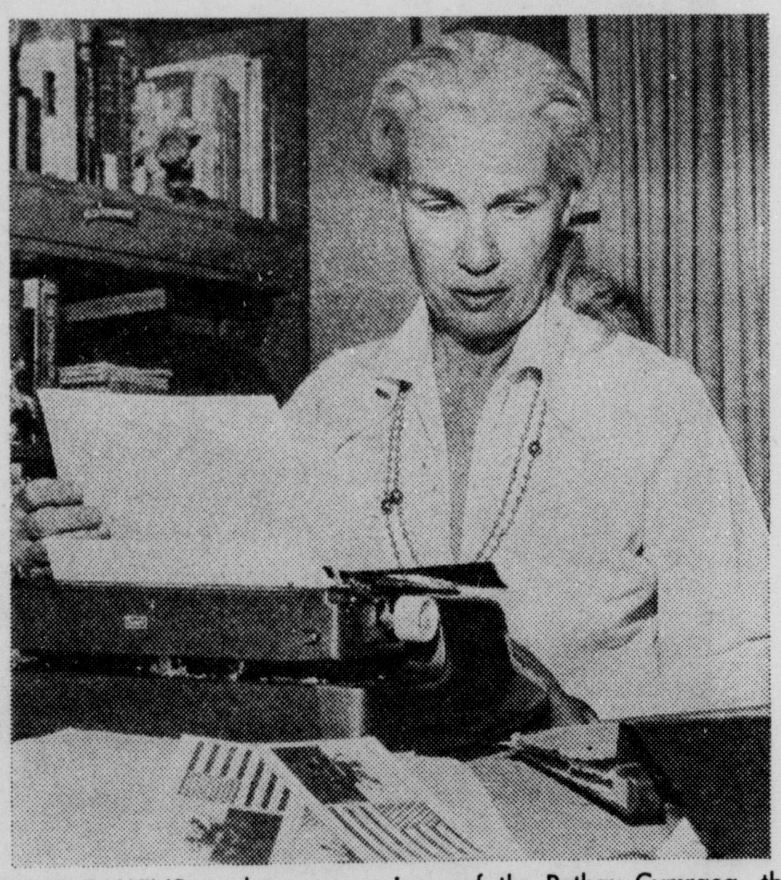
And annually the singing Welsh, the people from the land of the Joneses, the Hugheses and the Evanses, lift their voices in the singing of the national anthem, "Hen Wlad Fy Nhadau."

Chance listeners may not understand the words. But there is no mistaking the patriotic fervor behind the voices, nor the determination of the singers that it shall indeed be "Cymru nam byth — Wales forever!"



JAYNE CALKINS works upon an issue of the Pethau Cymraeg, the monthly newsletter of the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area, which she edits. She signs the newsletter Jayne Pruddcarch — "one of my Welsh family names." And intense research precedes the writing of each issue.

Marin Has Nation's Most Honored Chow In Champion Lin Fa

Sausalito-Owned Dog Has Won Trophies And Degrees Galore

By JEFF GREER

The best-educated Chow Chow dog in the United States lives in Sausalito. She is Champion Hung Jai Lin Fa, CD, CDX, UD.

That's about the equivalent of a human beauty queen winning the Miss America title, a bachelor of arts, a master's degree and a doctorate of philosophy.

Lin Fa's owner, Prudence Baxter, has one wall of her Cloudview Drive home adorned with Lin Fa's diplomas and trophies earned in official American Kennel Club competition.

ACCORDING TO the AKC, the Sausalito Chow Chow was only the seventh of her breed in the nation to win the CSX — Companion Dog, Excellent degree — three years ago. When she passed the trials for UD — Utility Dog — this summer, she became the first and only example of her breed to win that honor in this country, the AKC reported.

Mrs. Mrs. Baxter bought Lin Fa as a fuzzy, red puppy a little more than five years ago, she held little thought of ever showing her pet or training it in obedience, she said. Her main interest was sports car driving, a hobby in which she began collecting trophies before becoming involved in the dog show ring.

"I don't ever let Lin Fa hear this, but I bought her just as a pet," her proud owner said. "Then we got interested in obedience classes."

LIN FA DID a lot to dispel the public's image of Chow Chows as aloof, sometimes cross creatures that are hard to train. After a few months of training, she won her first title — Companion Dog — in three straight competitions, scoring 195 of a possible 200 points in one of the trials.

The young obedience ring star was one-year-old then. A year later she had learned the complexities of the exercises for the Companion Dog Excellent degree.

In obedience competition, the dog and handler are scored by the judge on how well they perform the required routine, including walking, halting, turns, fast and slow gaits, broad jump and high jump tests.

THE DOG MUST retrieve gloves deliberately dropped during the walks around the ring, and then choose and retrieve one little dumbbell from among several tossed onto the ground. The correct dumbbell is different from the others only in that it has been rubbed in the trainer's hands to leave a scent.

Lin Fa, at the same time she was mastering all these lessons, was competing for her "bench" championship. There, she was judged for her "beauty" among Chow Chows, as defined in a breed standard set by the AKC and compared with other Chows in competition.

She earned her championship in 1970.

About the only peak left to climb for Lin Fa and her owner is the UDT — Utility Dog, Tracking — obedience degree. Mrs. Baxter plans to start that difficult training this fall. At the moment she is busy with preparations for the Sir Francis Drake Kennel Club's annual show, which will bring more than 2,000 dogs of all breeds to the Peacock Gap Country Club on Sept. 19.

EXPERIENCED dog show enthusiasts usually don't think of a Chow Chow as being able to sniff out trails like a Bloodhound or a Bird Dog, but the history books say Chinese emperors used Chows for hunting centuries ago.

The official AKC Handbook said that "perhaps the most unusual and lavish kennel in all history was the one maintained by a T'ang emperor of about the Seventh Century AD . . . it housed 2,500 couples of 'hounds' of the Chow type."

The Chow dog's massive head, heavy coat and tail carried tightly over his back identify it as an Arctic breed, and

IT WAS HER ABILITY to select the right dumbbell — the one carrying the faint scent of her trainer's hands — from among several dropped in a show ring that earned Champion Hung Jai Lin Fa her Utility Degree and made the Chow Chow's owner, Prudence Baxter of Sausalito, a proud woman. Just a few of the trophies can be seen in the background. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE CHOW CHOW, according to some sources, is supposed to be an aloof or even hostile dog. But these friendly Chow puppies romping with their mistress, Prudence Baxter, are obviously unaware of any such reputation, and undeserving of it.

his traditional black tongue and black mouth make experts think he may have been one of the original breeds from which sprang the Samoyed, the Pomeranian and other Arctic breeds. The distinctive mouth pigmentation is required by the standard.

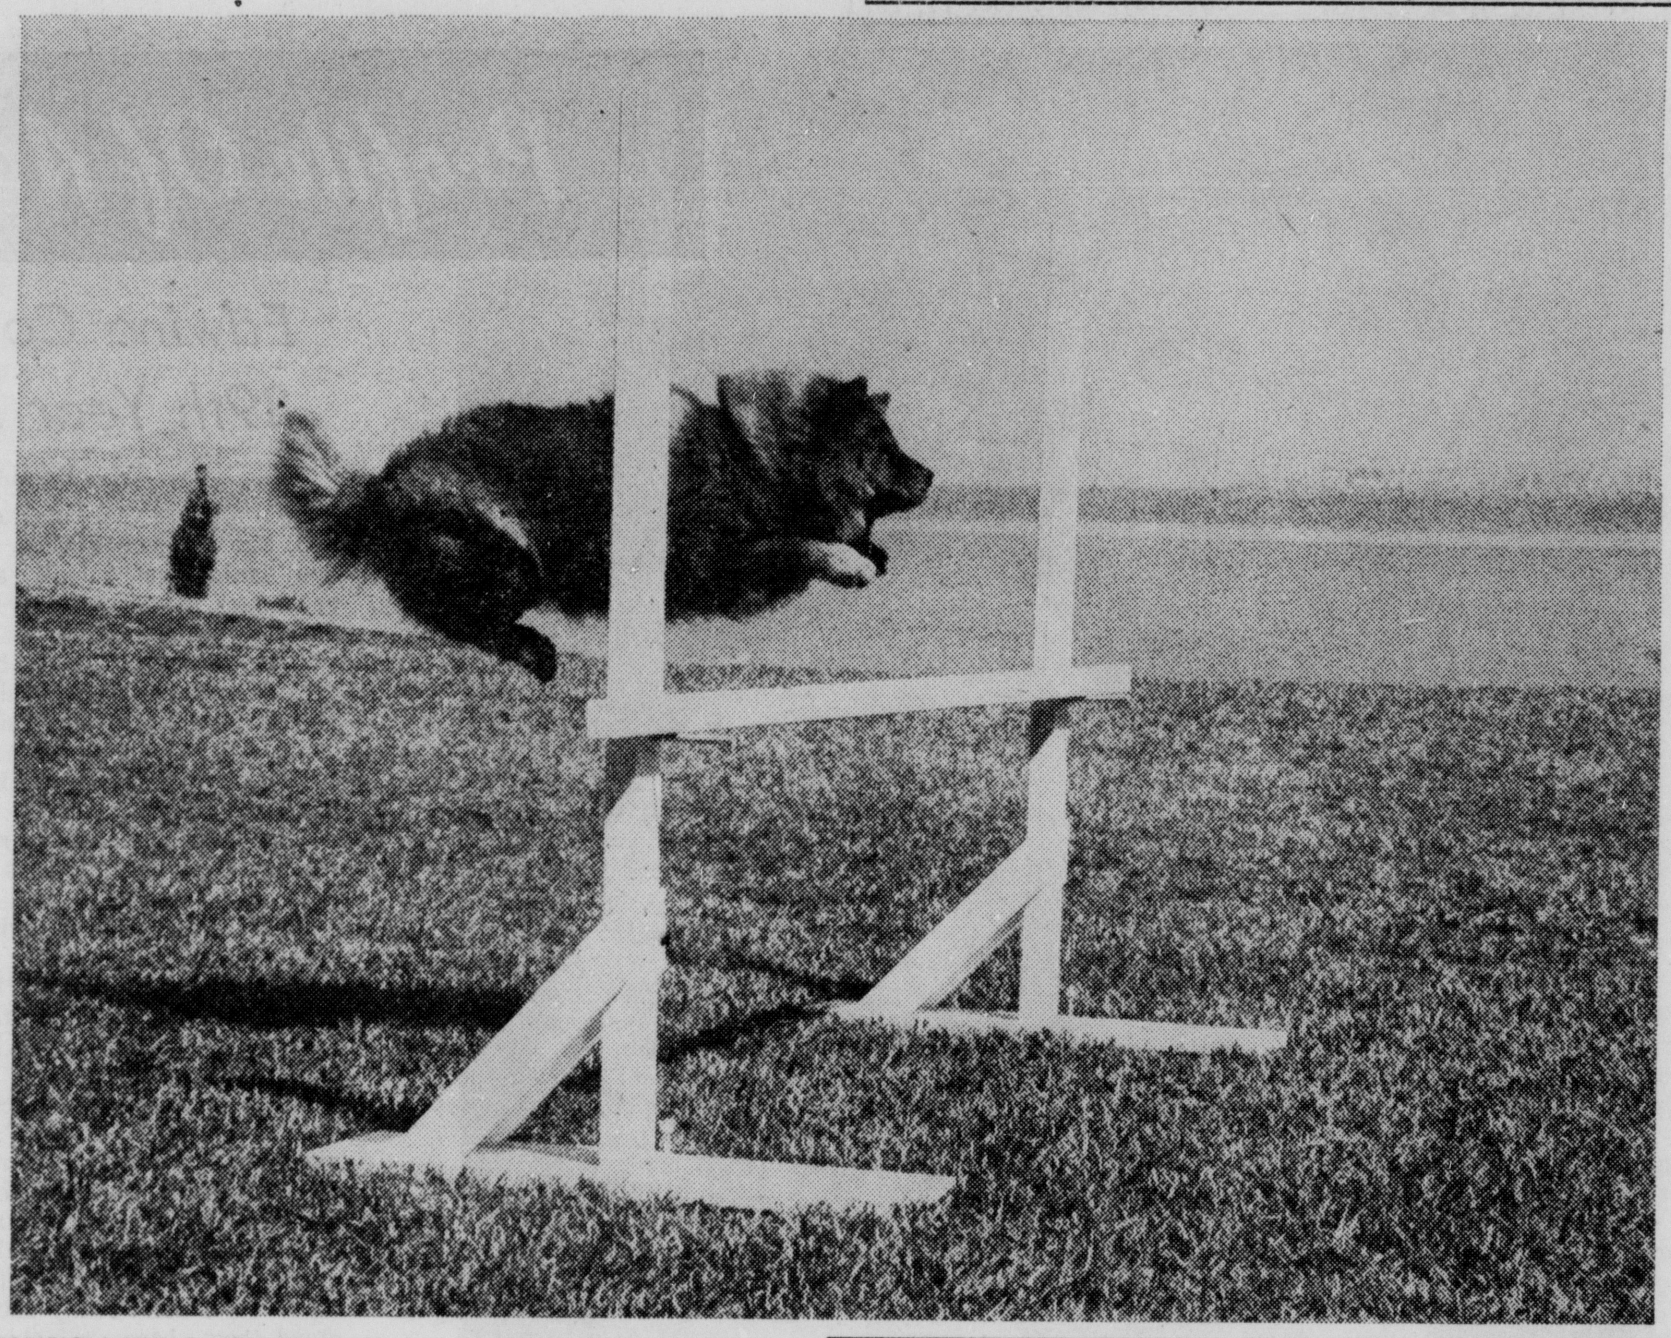
ENGLISH TRADERS and explorers knew about the Chow more than 200 years ago; a trader for the East India Company brought a pair — then known as Cantonese Dogs — to England in the 1780s.

Chinese breeders did not call the dog Chow Chow, the books relate. In their home nation, they were known as Cantonese, "black tongued dogs" or "Wonk," which was also a generic term for dog.

Some historians maintain that the Chinese also bred the dog for meat, and that Chow Chow was pidgin English for "food."

English breeders began showing them extensively before World War I. The first major show specimen brought to the United States was Brilliantine, a male Chow sold to a Chicago breeder, Mrs. Earl Hoover, for $10,000 in 1918.

SINCE THEN, the breed has spread across the country, though never in large numbers — partly because of public trepidation about the manners of the lion-like dogs.



CHAMPION HUNG JAI LIN FA shows the form that has made her America's most honored Chow Chow in the show ring and upon the competition field. Lin Fa and her owner, Prudence Baxter of Sausalito, will be on hand Sept. 19 at the Peacock Gap Country Club, San Rafael, when the Sir Francis Drake Kennel Club conducts its annual all-day show there.

"After all, the breed had been trained for centuries to be aloof," Mrs. Baxter explained. Her little group of Chows belied their fierce looks while they sniffed a visitor — their tails wagged. And suddenly, Lin Fa poked out a paw, offering to shake hands.

Marin County's annual dog show, the Sir Francis Drake Kennel Club competition at Peacock Gap, always attracts a relatively large Chow entry. Last year there were 16 in competition; this year's judge, Miss Iris de la Torre Bueno of New Rochelle, N.Y., is expected to have an even larger entry to look over on Sept. 19.

Twenty other judges will be handing out the ribbons for more than 100 other breeds at the day-long event.

NOT ONLY DOES Prudence Baxter have a champion Chow Chow at her home on Cloudview Drive in Sausalito, but she feels she also has some future champions in her puppies such as appealing Cricket.

Profile Of A Marinite

EDWINA CODONI, principal of San Rafael's Coleman School, is looking forward to her 39th year of school work with the same zest that has marked all her previous 38 years as a teacher and an administrator. Thirty-five of those years have been spent in the San Rafael system.

Edwina Codoni Eager For 39th Year In Education

By MARY LEYDECKER

Even after 38 years in education, San Rafael's Edwina Codoni said the "thrill and challenge" is still there for her as school opens this fall.

"I'm ready — I've had enough vacation," she said in an interview at her San Rafael home.

"Every year is different. This year, for example, there's the new rug for the kindergarten that took us seven years to get."

MISS CODONI, her bright eyes sparkling, described the long road that led to her present position as principal of Coleman School, a job she has had for seven years.

"Anyone is lucky who gets to do what he wants to do," she explained. "I can't remember when I didn't want to be a teacher. I try to understand young people who say they don't know what they want to do — but I don't really understand them, because I always knew I wanted to be a teacher."

Miss Codoni was born 60 years ago this month in Point Reyes Station, where her father was working as a store clerk. Her parents had lived briefly in Turlock before she was born but her mother became homesick for "The Hills of Home," as she referred to her native Marin, and the family returned.

HER FATHER later was a car dealer in San Rafael and Miss Codoni attended B Street and E Street schools and then San Rafael High School.

After graduating from the teachers college that is now San Francisco State, Miss Codoni started looking for a job in 1933 when "there just were no openings for teachers."

She went on to say that teachers who had not had at least three years of experience could not even apply for jobs in San Rafael.

SO SHE WENT to the rural areas of the state in search for a job and finally found one in the Natividad District in the Salinas Valley where she spent a year in a one-room school.

"If I had my way, I would put all beginning teachers in one-room schools where they'd have to solve all their own problems," the principal declared.

She also compared the non-graded classes popular today with the old one-room schools, saying "We've gone back to what we used to do."

AFTER TWO MORE years at rural schools in West Marin, Miss Codoni landed a job with the San Rafael School District where she has since taught in almost every school in town.

Reflecting over her many years in education, the principal said, "Today we know — tomorrow we know better," referring to changes in school methods.

Many of the changes she praised.

"We don't sit children in rows any more," she said. And the greater flexibility and freedom in classrooms means that "we don't have to have nearly so many recesses."

NEW MATH AND new science are also welcome changes to Miss Codoni, who said, "When we were young, we were taught there was only one way to do a thing. Now we learn there are many."

The volunteer parents who help at her school were also praised by the principal. These parents offer help with such subjects as French, sewing, typing and drama, she said.

The principal also explained some of her own views about education.

"Teachers talk too much," she said. "We don't listen enough to children."

To young teachers, she said, she gives this advice: "Get out (of the field) right now if you don't like children."

Her eyes lighted up when she said, "We hold our breath and make a wish when we go through the tunnel," describing a bit of children's folklore long popular in connection with the Waldo Tunnel.

"Now they have that beautiful rainbow — it's the most beautiful thing the highway department could have done for children," she added.

On a more serious note, she said that the word "accountability" currently popular in education circles, is "not a bad word."

The Pipe Organ Comes Back

By DON KEOWN

In this age of the amplified guitar and rousing big beat vocals, 20-year-old Robert George (Buddy) Kurz' favorite instrument is the pipe organ and his favorite music the mellow dance and swing tunes of the 1930s.

Young Kurz not only listens to and plays pipe organs — preferably the huge theater organs that are the survivors of another era — but he is also making a professional of installing the mammoth music-makers.

He has just completed the installation of his third such pipe organ, this one for the Marin Pizza Pub at 526 Third Street, San Rafael, across the street from the Montecito Shopping Center.

"Well," corrects Buddy, "you can't really say that I have completed it yet, even though it is in use. There will be some finishing touches that I will be taking care of for some time yet. There is always something to be adjusted, hooked up, fixed or tuned. It's a long, drawn-out process, before you have an organ just right."

YOUNG KURZ says he plans to remain a professional pipe organ installer "just as long as there is a call for this kind of work."

And right now the pipe organ is riding a wave of revived interest that is causing it to be rescued from dusty storerooms and returned to use in pizza palaces, restaurants, cocktail lounges and even private homes.

And although handbells, guitars and jazz and rock ensembles are all being heard these days inside the churches, the church pipe organ, a smaller sister of the theater organ, is still the standard provider of the music that many religions regard as conducive and even essential to their worship.

BUDDY KURZ' own affection for the pipe organ originated when as an 11-year-old in Vallejo, where he was born and reared, he began taking organ lessons.

It wasn't long before he was playing in churches for worship services and Sunday school classes.

The organ lessons continued for three years and in the third year were combined with piano instruction. "And I really got to be pretty good," says Buddy.

"Then I just dropped it completely," he says. "I really only intended to take a short vacation from the organ. But I became involved in other interests, and I was a long time getting back to it."

ONE OF THOSE interests was a job for two and a half years with a television repair shop. "A little side trip away from the pipe organ," is how he describes it today.

But he adds that the experience in television repairs — in the use of his hands — has served him in good stead in his work with the much larger but in some ways no less delicate and finicky pipe organ.

"I was always mechanically inclined and liked to fool around, doing or repairing things, with my hands," he says.

BUT EVEN during those years when he was not around pipe organs, his interest in the instruments and the music they produce remained deeply ingrained.

"While I was working at the TV shop I bought myself a tape recorder," he recalls, "and pipe organ music was the very first thing I recorded."

The hiatus ended with the purchase of a player piano. "That transaction put me into contact with people who were interested in pipe organs, and got me to thinking about them again."

Sharing Buddy's keen interest was his mother, Mrs. Robert Kurz, who also plays the organ and who already had a Hammond electronic organ in her home for her pleasure.

BOTH MOTHER and son, however, preferred the sound of the pipe organ to that of the electronic organ. So when they heard that a pipe organ owner in Cupertino was interested in selling his instrument because he was moving into a smaller home, they decided to investigate.

"We learned about the organ through a friend," Buddy says. "The fellow had purchased it from a church that in turn had acquired it from the manufacturer in the 1920s. He had then installed it in his home and had been using it."

The Kurzes tested the organ with Mrs. Kurz at the keyboard "and it sounded good." So, in July of 1969, they made the acquisition for $800, and Buddy set about his first pipe organ installation job in his own home.

LATER THE Kurzes sighted a newspaper advertisement that offered a larger pipe organ for $1,500.

This instrument had originally been acquired by the Leatherby Organ Co. of San Francisco, now the Rogers Organ Co., in about 1925 and used for demonstration purposes in its place of business.

Then, in 1943, a parish in Salinas had bought the organ and installed it in the Roman Catholic church there.

"We knew that once a pipe organ is advertised for sale, it is likely to be sold within hours," recalls Buddy. "So we took off for Salinas immediately."

AGAIN THE Kurzes bought themselves a pipe organ. As Buddy installed this larger organ in the Kurz home, he cannibalized parts from the smaller organ the family already owned — "we sold the rest of it" — and the result was that "we wound up with a better instrument than either of the two organs we had bought."

Buddy smiles: "At that time we had in our home one pipe organ, one electronic organ and two pianos."

A younger brother, 10, began learning to play the organ so that he, too, could enjoy the new possession along with his mother and Buddy. The father, Robert Kurz, confines his music to the harmonica.

ISN'T A PIPE organ overpowering in a private home?

"Not," says Buddy, "if you are talking about a studio or small church organ. They are fine in a home. But with a full-sized theater organ, well, then you do have a problem with the volume."

Buddy explains that pipe organs fall into two general categories — the theater organ, and the church organ.

"The church organ, of course, is still being manufactured and very much in demand," he says. "But the last of the theater organs was built in the very early 1930s."

THEIR PURPOSE, he explains, was to provide an accompaniment to and intermission music for the silent movies. And when the silent pictures gave way to "talkies," the theater organs fell into disuse.

Many of these great instruments were stored away in basements and warehouses, and allowed to collect dust and to rust.

The manufacturing companies closed their doors. "I know of only one that managed to survived because it also manufactured church organs," says Kurz, a student of their histories. "Now it produces church organs exclusively."

WITH THE installation of the second pipe organ in the Kurz home, Buddy Kurz had hit upon what was to be, for a time at least, his career. With interest in pipe organs soaring, he would, he decided, become a professional installer.

His first "outside" job also brought him into his first contact with a theater organ.

Charles Davis of Concord had acquired a Robert Morton Theater Organ for his home. It had been installed. Not surprisingly, it was too loud. Buddy Kurz accepted the assignment of cutting its volume and doing other finishing work.

This job was to lead him to Marin County and to his first full-scale installation of a theater organ.

DINO SANTRIZOS and John Wallace were making plans for their new Marin Pizza Pub in San Rafael. Spurred by the example of a Hayward restaurateur who had installed a theater organ in his place of business and boosted his trade tremendously, the partners decided that their pizza palace should also feature one of the big organs.

The organ that they eventually obtained was, like the one upon which Buddy Kurz had worked in Concord, a Robert Morton-built instrument.

It had begun its service in the Peninsula Theater, now the Fox Theater, in Burlingame. Then, for years, it had gone unused and ignored.

"IN ABOUT 1955," says Buddy Kurz, "it was removed by a man who is now a friend of mine. He stored it for a time, then sold it to a fellow in Southern California who installed it in part in his home. Eventually he sold it to a man in San Francisco, and it was that buyer who sold it to the Pizza Pub."

Charles Davis, pleased with the work done on his own organ by Buddy Kurz, suggested to the San Francisco seller that he recommend to the newest owners of the huge organ the employment of the young Vallejo installer.

Santrizos and Wallace acted on the recommendation, and Buddy Kurz has been living with Santrizos at his home at 4 Elaine Way, San Rafael, while making the installation.

"WE HAD AN opening day deadline to meet, and that meant I had a full-time job on my hands and more," says Buddy. "I was working 14 hours a day, seven days a week."

"You size them by the number of sets of pipes," he explains. "This one has 13 such sets. But that means 1,045 individual pipes."

The pipes have been set in a chamber with a glass window so that pub patrons can see them.

"ORDINARILY, installed in a theater, you wouldn't see the pipes and other works," Buddy says. "You would see only the ornamental grill."

The console is a decorated white and gold, "a handsome piece of furniture," and the instrument itself "was very good as it was built by the factory," but through time and neglect had deteriorated seriously until it fell into the expert and loving hands of Buddy Kurz.

Along with the pipes, the Pizza Pub organ has all the usual extra instrument hook-ups — a calliope, a piano, a set of drums, xylophone, glockenspiel, tamborine, castinets, marimba, etc.

BUDDY SAYS he would like to remain in Marin — "it's a wonderful area" — but that in his new profession "I will have to go where the work is."

Already he has a new assignment in Martinez and is commuting between here and there, dividing his time between two jobs as he puts the finishing touches on the Marin Pizza Pub organ. "That work will go on yet for some time," he says. "There is still a lot to be done."

"I'M REALLY having to start all over, from the beginning," he says. "It is amazing how much I have forgotten."

He particularly admires the talent of Bill McCoy who is heard Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays, "and who is a pipe organ virtuoso of concert stature."

MOST OF Buddy's favorite tunes are pieces from the 1920s and 1930s, the heydays of the theater organ and the swing band. "But I also like some of the newer music," providing, of course it is adaptable to the pipe organ.

"Most people think of the pipe organ only in terms of the church organ and the slow measure of religious music," Buddy Kurz says. "But the theater organ was used to play all kinds of music, much of it quite lively and spirited."

A really talented organist can play either the church organ or the theater organ, and either religious or popular music, with equal ability, says Buddy, "although the theater organ is the more difficult of the two."

WHAT IS there about the pipe organ that makes it so irresistible to Buddy Kurz and to a growing number of other buffs?

"It is the most versatile single instrument in existence," he answers. "Upon a single organ an entire orchestral arrangement can be played — complete. In fact they were called unit orchestras in their early years because they replaced entire orchestras in the theater. Instead of an entire ensemble, the theater manager needed to hire only one musician — the organist."

For the silent movies there was another major advantage. "The organist could follow the action and the mood of the pictures much more closely and so coordinate his music with the story. He could improvise, play it cold, whereas the orchestra had to stay with its score."

ON THE OTHER hand, the theater organ offered much more volume and a far greater emotional impact than did the piano played in many motion picture palaces, especially the smaller theaters.

Yet another attraction of the pipe organ for Buddy Kurz is the fact that it is an instrument that is largely handmade. "Very little of it can be mass produced, and even today, in this age of the assembly line, a lot of handwork goes into the building of an organ."

"JUST HOW carefully the manufacturers went about the construction of their organs is demonstrated by the fact that so many of these instruments have also survived this long span of time, even though most of them were subjected to years of disuse, neglect and even abuse," says Buddy.

George Wright, he adds, was the single artist most responsible for the renaissance of the theater organ.

Shall we ask pipe organ expert Buddy Kurz still one more question about his favorite subject?

All right. Then, what is the difference between the pipe organ and the calliope of circus fame?

"THE CALLIOPE," replies Buddy, "is a one-manual pipe organ with brass pipes."

He digs calliopes, too, does Buddy Kurz, young pipe organ authority, aficionado, performer and installer.

He insists he will stay with the profession of pipe organ installing "just as long as there is a call for that kind of work. I love it."

And right now his prospects are bright. A whole new generation has re-discovered a sound that once thrilled their grandparents. And even the amplified rock or jazz guitar seems a bit less impressive, one one has tuned in to the theater organ.

There's More To Luau Than Just The Poi

The Travel Pages

The one dish most generally associated with Hawaii is poi, a thick, purplish-brown and gooey paste, mostly starch, that is traditionally eaten by scooping it out of a wooden bowl with the fingers.

It is made by pounding taro roots into a pulp and letting it ferment. The Hawaiians love poi but, truthfully, the average tourists can't stomach the stuff. The taste has to be acquired.

"The same isn't true about Hawaiian eating in general," report the travel experts at Continental Airlines. "There is a great culinary tradition in the islands, which teem with fresh fruit and fresh fish from the sea. There are many native Hawaiian foods and drinks and ethnic-type restaurants of every variety.

"Wherever you eat, you never have to worry. Hawaii is one of the healthiest places in the United States. The water is extremely pure and green vegetables, tomatoes, uncooked fruit, skin and all, may be eaten as you please."

PIG, ONCE A sacrificial symbol in Hawaii, is the main luau course. Having been cleaned, dressed, salted and bathed in shoyu sauce the entire carcass is stuffed with hot stones. Then the front and back legs are tied together and wrapped in chicken wire, to keep things from falling apart.

For the cooking itself there is a deep pit, where the fire has burned itself down to glowing embers. Before placing the hot-rock-filled pig on the embers, the hole is lined with sweet potatoes, cooking bananas, and often a collection of pork, butterfish and tender, spinach-like taro shoots, all wrapped in ti leaves.

The pig then goes in on top, with ti leaves and banana leaves covering everything to keep the steam from escaping. The pit is next sheeted with wet burlap and earth added to keep the heat inside.

THIS STEAM cooking takes four hours, at least, and at a native luau this time is usually well and wetly spent. By the time the pit is opened up and the pig and other goodies removed appetites are sharply honed, and things move swiftly so that the pig doesn't get cold. It's a tasty dish, indeed, with the tender meat falling off the bones.

Traditionally, it's eaten with poi, and fingers are used instead of knives and forks.

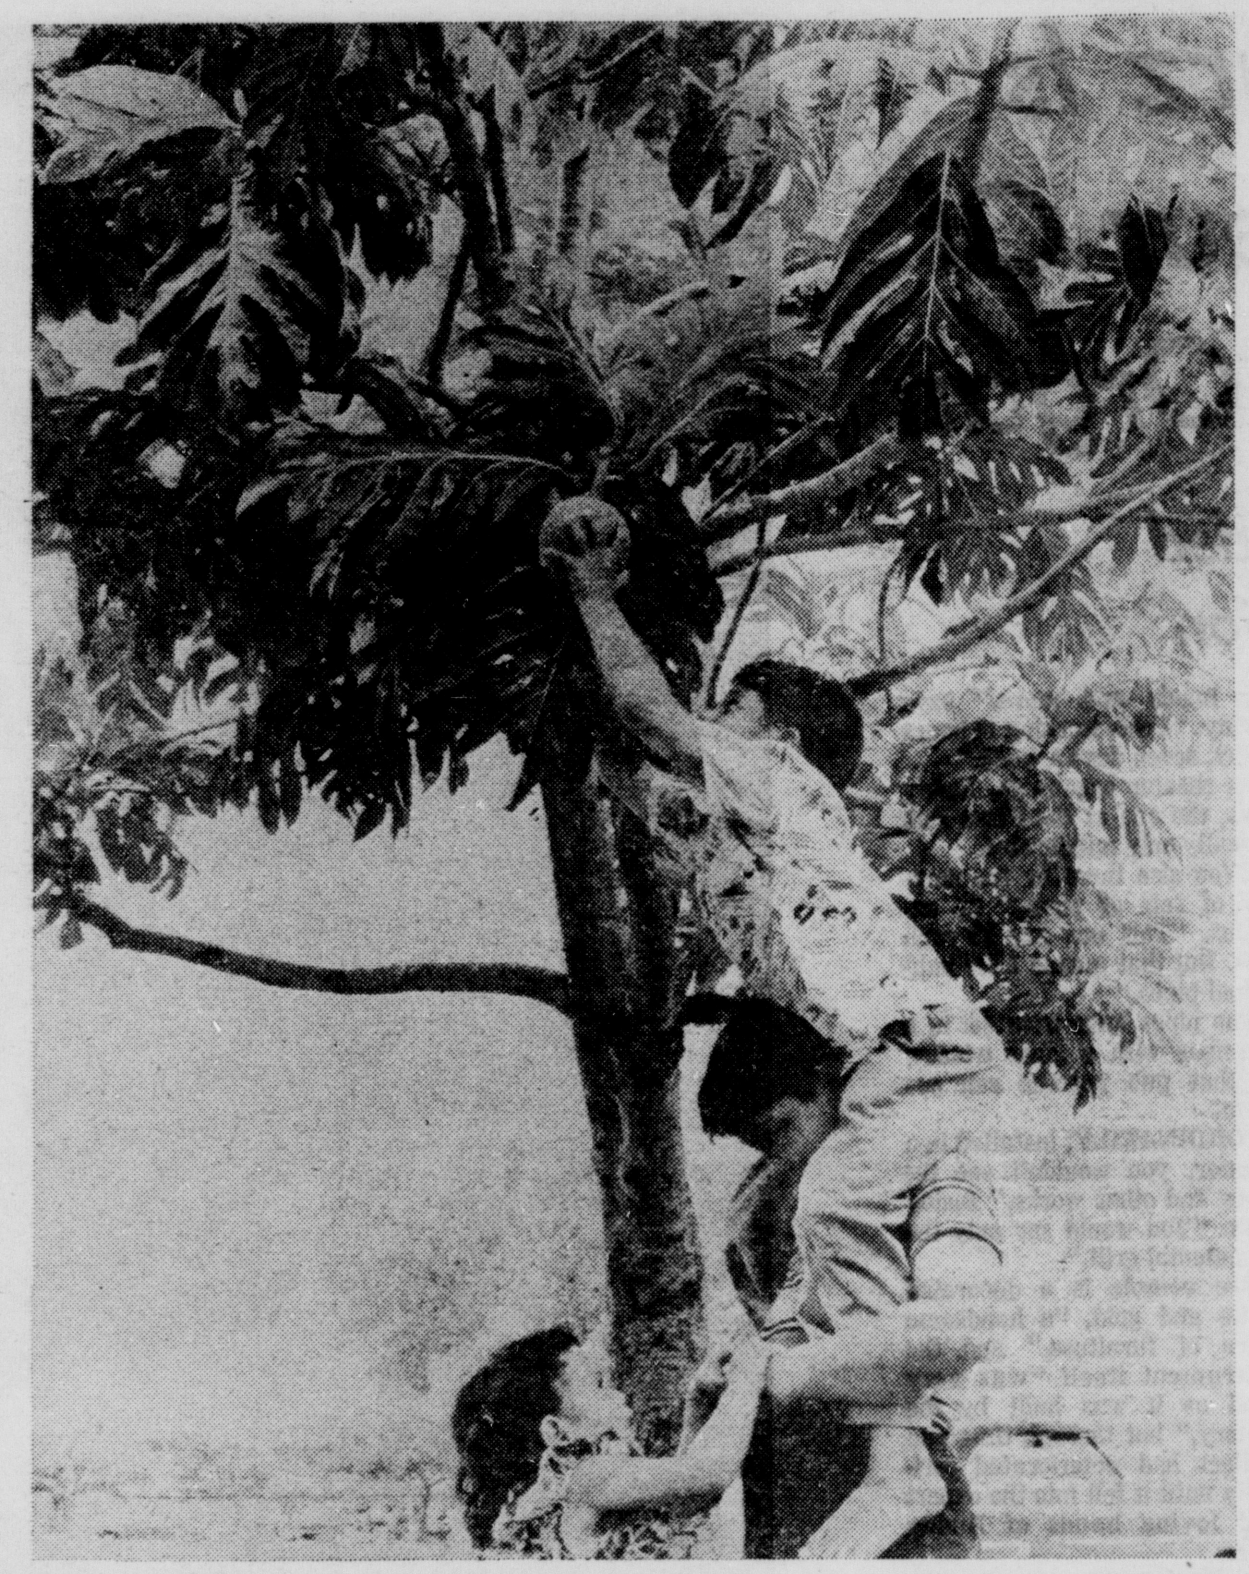
At many luaus there will be side dishes such as opihi, a salty black mollusk something like a small clam, and lomi lomi salmon, which is salmon heavily rubbed in chopped onions and tomatoes. On the other hand, poi — while you may not like the taste of the paste — is loaded with vitamin B, and is sometimes prescribed by island doctors for babies, delicate stomachs, ulcers and nervous disorders.

THERE ARE many Japanese restaurants, and even more good Chinese eating places. For something different, though, Continental Airlines suggests one of the island's many Korean cafes.

Like Mexican food, Korean dishes tend to be spicy and hot. Take kimchee, for instance, which is a merger of such vegetables as cabbage, turnips, onions and celery, pickled in garlic and red hot peppers.

If you want to give your friends a different-type souvenir you can buy kimchee in jars in Hawaiian supermarkets.

Another ethnic dish found in Hawaii is the Philippine bud bud, a concoction of rice, coconut milk and sugar steamed in a banana leaf and eaten with generous helpings of frothy hot chocolate. It's served for breakfast.



AN HAWAIIAN BOY has the help of his chums as he forages in a Honolulu seaside park for some breadfruit, a favorite on the Polynesian menu. The mealy fruit, which must be cooked before eating, is one of the exotic fruits enjoyed at the island luaus.

Canberra — Charming Capital

If today's real globetrotter were asked to rate the world's most charming capitals, Australia's Canberra might be within a rung or two of the No. 1 spot.

It is a thoroughly Australian city of about 125,000, but it has close American ties, for its original plan was drawn by an American architect, Walter Burley Griffin. Geographically, it is only a short jet hop from Sydney, Australia's largest city.

Canberra's central feature is seven-mile-long Lake Burley Griffin, which weaves through a carpet of rolling hills, airy shopping centers, government buildings, lovely parks and gardens and attractive residential areas. One of the best ways to get to know the city is via a 90-minute lake cruise.

There also are, of course, organized motor tours.

THE HEART OF downtown Canberra centers around Civic Square and the Theater Center. Here, the modernistic, large statue of Ethos sets the mood of open airiness to be found in the surrounding government buildings, theaters, art galleries, shops, restaurants and offices.

Among the cultural centers is the National Library of Australia. It is best for delving into the nation's background, but is also a place to view papers and diaries of famous statesmen and explorers. Included is the handwritten diary kept by Capt. James Cook on his discovery of Australia's eastern coast two centuries ago.

A Canberra landmark is the huge Australian War Memorial on Trelear Circle. Not far away, the eagle-topped shaft of the Australian American Memorial reflects the country's appreciation of United States aid in World War II.

STILL OTHER places of interest for the tourist include Parliament House and its landscaped grounds, the Royal Australian Mint and the foreign embassies, some of which reflect the architecture of their respective countries.

Canberra is noted, too, for its friendly people, its good hotels with modern amenities and its increasing number of first-class restaurants, but these inducements should not discourage the traveler from seeking out some of the attractions in the immediate vicinity.

These include visits to working sheep stations and a 12,000-acre fauna reserve with its koala bears, kangaroos and ostrich-like emus; folk-song sessions at an "outback" barbecue, and demonstrations of some typical aboriginal "sports" (e.g. boomerang throwing).

In winter, a popular vaction area is the Snowy Mountains region around Mount Kesciuske. This section also is the home of the so-called Snowy Mountains Scheme, one of Australia's greatest hydro-electric and irrigation projects.

Indonesian Shadow Plays Are Treats For Tourists

Every nation has its cultural specialists.

But nowhere in the world are there specialists quite so special as the dalangs of Indonesia, masters of what is probably the oldest show business art form in history, the wayang kulit or shadow play, which is seen in some version somewhere every night in the island republic.

Suparman (many Indonesians have only one name) is a dalang, a tall, slim, saturnine inheritor of an ancient profession who lives in a narrow, children-choked dirt road in the center of Jogjakarat, Java's great university city. His grandfather was a dalang. His 58-year-old father is a dalang, and Suparman, today 30, knows that his 7-year-old son will be a dalang when his education is complete.

TO ADD A note of femininity to the long line of male professionalism, Suparman's grandmother still plays in the four-piece xylophone orchestra which traditionally provides music for the wayang kulit.

Musician he is. But he is basically a story-teller in the great minstrel tradition.

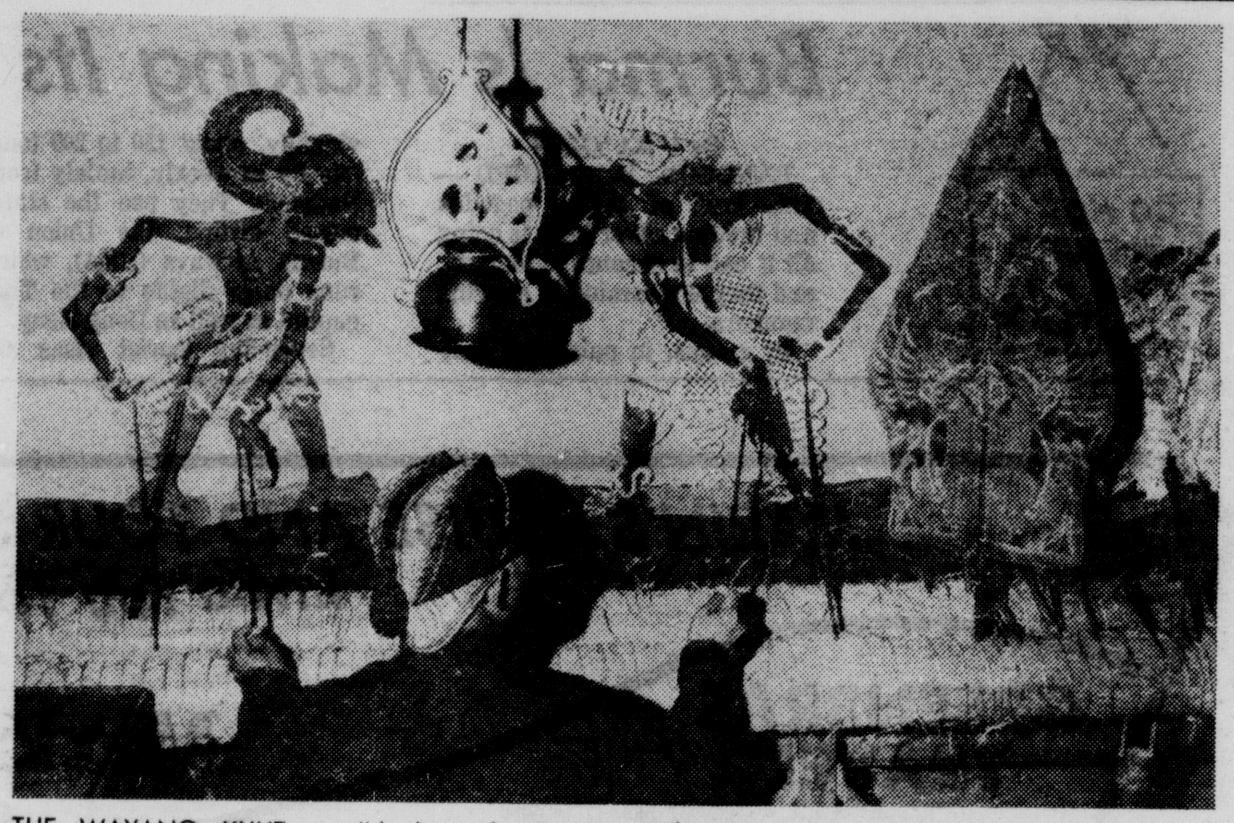
He is also a superb puppeteer, handling the puppet characters whose shadows appear on a lamp-lighted screen carrying the action to his audience with ease. And he may be an adept ventriloquist, for his voice takes many roles in many octaves as the play unfolds. He could be called a set creator, as well, for he personally makes many of the ritually decorated puppets cut from leather which are his actors.

AND, ALTHOUGH Suparman moves with languor, he could qualify as an athlete of sorts. A full dress wayang kulit play is no small-evening entertainment, for many of them begin around 9 at night and end at 6 the following morning.

It is unlikely that the Indonesian visitor swinging about the cities of Solo and Jogjakarta will have to sit for that long. Most present day performances, and Suparman makes some 15 of them each month, last about four hours, although his local audiences still insist on the 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. showtime.

Ostensibly, Suparman makes about 15,000 rupiahs a night when he works, or quite a bundle as Indonesian pay schedules go. He is vague when pressed on the rewards of the dalang buiness.

But there is no mistaking the pride he takes in simply being a dalang for as such he is quite literally a folk hero.



THE WAYANG KULIT or "shadow plays" of Indonesia began in the East Java court of King Airlangga who ruled from 1016 to 1045. Dalangs or story masters still guide their puppets through such epics as "The Ramayana."

Burma Is Making Its Bid For Tourist Trade

By U RA THAN

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — This land of golden pagodas and tinkling silver bells is doing all it can to encourage tourists, and they are coming in growing numbers.

In groups, in pairs and individually, about 150 to 200 tourists fly in weekly, mainly from Bangkok. They use the state-owned airline, the Union of Burma Airways (UBA), which runs daily flights to the Thai capital as well as Hong Kong.

Seven-day tourist visas are being issued freely by Burmese embassies abroad. This country, which was closed for nearly eight years, is now going all out to attract not only tourists but the influx of foreign currency which accompanies them.

THE COST FOR a seven-day visit here is probably the lowest in the world. Apart from airline fares, living expenses at international class hotels in Rangoon and guest houses elsewhere in Burma average about $14 per day, including room, full board, tips, guides and interpreters. There are no taxes such as a landing tax.

In an interview with UPI, Lt. Col. Maung Maung Nyunt, chairman of the board of UBA, spoke optimistically about the future of the tourist industry in Burma.

"Year by year we will improve our services," Maung Maung Nyunt said. "We have started the tourist service industry on a scale within our capabilities. Instead of waiting for all elaborate arrangements to be ready, we decided to go ahead and start now.

"In our favor is our innate sense of hsopitality and courtesy to guests. We do not have the commercial mentality that tends to mar the tourist service industry elsewhere."

Mandalay, immortalized by Kipling, is of course, a big attraction. So is Pagan, a city of ruins dating back from the time of the Norman conquest of England, and rivaling Cambodia's Angkor Wat in splendor of the 1,000-day-old edifices.

Mandalay is two hours flight from Rangoon. Pagan lies 120 miles south of Mandalay, on the banks of the Irrawaddy River. Known locally as the City of Four Million Pagodas, some 5,000 of which still survive, Pagan dates back to 107 A.D.

THE PINDAYA Caves, near Taunggyi, capital of the Shan States in eastern Burma, are another attraction. Thousands of Buddha images and shrines were carved into the rock by ancient craftsmen hundreds of years ago. Many have not been systematically explored, promising adventure to the adventurous-minded.

Then there's the Inle Lake, 5,000 feet above sea level surrounded by lofty mountain ranges. Villagers live on floating islands on the surface of the lake and even cultivate crops on their islands.

THE BOOK PAGES

A Giant Still Stands Tall, In Spite Of His Biographer

By DON KEOWN

Biographers of history's greatest personages undertake a most delicate assignment, for invariably their work requires them to judge the actions, motives and ethics of men and women who were, or are, their superiors.

When the subject is only recently dead or still living, the task becomes doubly difficult.

One outcome might be for the awe-struck biographer to shrink back from a complete chronicling and true evaluation of his subject, lapsing into a kind of idolatry or sychophancy that causes him to portray the man or woman even larger and more perfect than he or she was in real life — as a super being.

But another result might be the reverse, with the author so determined to demonstrate his professionalism and freedom from bias that he presents his subject in the very harshest and most unfair glare possible.

The book is admirable from the standpoint of its thoroughness. We are told that "Mr. Bishop spent more time on the research for this book than on any other project he has undertaken." And the reader, impressed with the immensity of the information packed into the book, cannot doubt this for a moment.

What dims — but does not destroy — the reader's enjoyment of all this effort is the decided anti-King tone that is struck repeatedly throughout the book.

Snide insinuations and innuendoes pop up with annoying frequency. And given a choice in prescribing a motive for a Martin Luther King Jr. action or decision, Bishop almost always selects the baser of the alternatives.

Yet enough of the author's personal opinion slips into his book to convince the reader that at heart Bishop is a King admirer. It is, one suspects, his determination not to let this esteem color his biography that has caused him to lean over backwards into nitpicking, second-guessing and fault-finding.

We are handed an early example of this on the book's very first page when Bishop writes of King: "He was shrewd; he was naive. He was courageous; he was cowardly. He was a leader, but not a strategist. . ."

Now Martin Luther King Jr. was not a man without fault. But those flaws most certainly did not encompass cowardice. No doubt he felt fear. And he could at times conduct himself with caution. But had he been a coward in any sense of that despised word, he would not have continued along the perilous path he followed, especially while burdened by the terrible presentiment of death by violence that he carried with him throughout his dangerous years.

Thus does Bishop give us advance notice that he intends to maintain a balance in his story and analysis of a man whose greatness far over shadowed his shortcomings.

It would be unfair to Bishop, however, to indicate that in his eagerness to avoid partiality he has created a biography too artificial to aid us in our understanding and appreciation of Martin Luther King Jr. and his passions for social justice and non-violence. All the details of King's life are there. One can easily soften Bishop's unsupported judgments and disregard the occasional irrelevancies that demean or belittle his subject.

It has become fashionable to excuse the violence and indignity to which the black has been subjected in Dixie in light of the neglect and hardships he has suffered also in the North, and to conclude that just, perhaps, the Negro in the South wasn't so bad off after all.

But it is no consolation to the patient, lying in bed in a hospital and rotting in agony with gangrene, to know that the man in the next room is dying from cancer.

And Bishop's book is replete with vicious and ignorant rednecks, brutal sheriffs, hypocritical preachers and politicians, insensitive business men and faint-hearted liberals who made life in the South a hell on earth for the misery-stricken blacks. It was these men whom Martin Luther King Jr. had to face almost daily while maintaining his stance of and faith in Christian non-violence. And it was these men who finally brought about his murder.

Jim Bishop gives no stock whatsoever to the theory that James Earl Ray acted alone and out of sheer race hatred when he fired the bullet that brought "The Days of Martin Luther King Jr." to an end in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

Bishop states with certainty that Ray was a hired killer, coached and prepared for the assassination by a "middle man" acting for the employer or employers.

While the dastardly killing dealt a stunning blow to Martin Luther King's thesis of nonviolence, already in serious trouble with restless young blacks, it in no way erased the contributions the black evangelist and his philosophy had made toward a better, more just America before he was struck down.

Whereas Bishop's book sometimes seems one long recitation of King's failure, stalemates and token victories, his summarization of the status of the civil rights movement nearing the time of its greatest leader's death speaks more accurately of his impact upon the American scene:

"More had been accomplished in 11 years than in the previous 100."

It is, then, unfair to label Marin Luther King Jr. a failure, just because he did not attain in full his dream of a utopian America. The record of his accomplishments confounds and contradicts his detractors. And even the competent and experienced Jim Bishop is thwarted in his attempt to reduce King's stature to less awesome dimensions.

King was one of those giants who walk among us only a few to a century. And he remains so after a reading of "The Days of Martin Luther King."

Sleuths & Suspense

A. C. Marin, we are told on the jacket of this novel, is a pseudonym of a writer who has published eight novels under his true name, plus two earlier suspense books as A. C. Marin.

Out of pride of place, we appeal to him that if he has any more novels in the works like "A Storm of Spears," he signs them A. C. Contra Costa, or A. C. Stanislaus, or any other name except Marin.

It is a cheap and shallow attempt to make capital of the controversy that erupted on Northern California college campuses a few years back. One instructor, Frank Charles, has an affair with an activist coed that leads to his entrapment and use by militants — controlled, naturally, from Peking. There are demonstrations, riots, drug-taking, secret paper stealing, undercover agents, sadistic beatings and a great deal of sexuality, none of it convincing or particularly interesting.

WHEN THE 1972 "Vermont Life Engagement Book" arrives from Stephen Greene Press, the Brattleboro, Vt., publisher of books and Vermont Life Magazine, then the current year must be further along than we realized.

We find this regional art endlessly fascinating, but we must confess we miss the color that embellishes the illustrations on the same publisher's beautiful "Vermont Life Calendar." On the engagement book, only the cover pictures are in color — just enough to whet the appetite for more.

"HANDWRITING is an action that is habitual. Whatever trait a person shows in one type of action that is habitual, he tends to show in every other type of habitual action. Therefore, whatever trait a person shows in his handwriting he tends to show in every other action that is habitual."

That, says Hal Falcon, graphologist, is the logical principle of his book, "How to Analyze Handwriting" (Trident, $4.95). And in its pages he offers innumerable samples of handwriting, plus his analyses of the writers' characteristics, both conscious and subconscious. And in the process he makes known the basic techniques he has developed in his 30 years of practice.

Even those who regard graphology as only another parlor game might find the book fun. Those who take it more seriously will find Falcon's illustrations and explanations intriguing and perhaps even of real practical value.

The Dialogue Is Heated

Conservationist Confronts His Foes At The Scenes Of Their Disputes

Those who missed John McPhee's entertaining and provocative profiles in recent issues of The New Yorker will be delighted to find them all in one book.

In the Cascades, he hikes with Charles Park, the mineral engineer who advocates mining the copper within the Glacier Park Wilderness. To Park privation of copper would be greater than privation of pristine wilderness in the modern scheme of things. Brower disagrees.

On Cumberland Island off the Georgia Coast, Brower and Charles Fraser, who plans a resort development on Cumberland, provide another pair of divergent views. Fraser call the conservationists druids, convinced they love trees more than people.

Sharpest clash comes on a boat trip down the Colorado with Floyd Dominy, U.S. commissioner of reclamation, stopped from construction of the Grand Canyon Dam after a bitter battle with Brower. Dominy thinks conservationists are hypocrites and he makes his feelings plain, none of which helps bridge the gap between him and Brower.

Brower's adversaries seem more real in this book. Brower himself, seems to hid his personality. He is the aloof and humorless one.

If the book has a hero it is McPhee himself. How did he persuade these adversaries to meet on the scenes of battle?

JOHN McPHEE
The real hero of his book

How, too, does he maintain his own fine objectivity?

The man has magic of persuasion and restraint. In addition, he writes superbly, providing marvelous descriptive passages as background for the heated dialogue.

Wright Morris Bids Again For National Book Award

This is a witty, bittersweet, hard-to-put-down story about Kermit, 11, and his great-uncle Floyd, 82, and their life together in a California trailer camp.

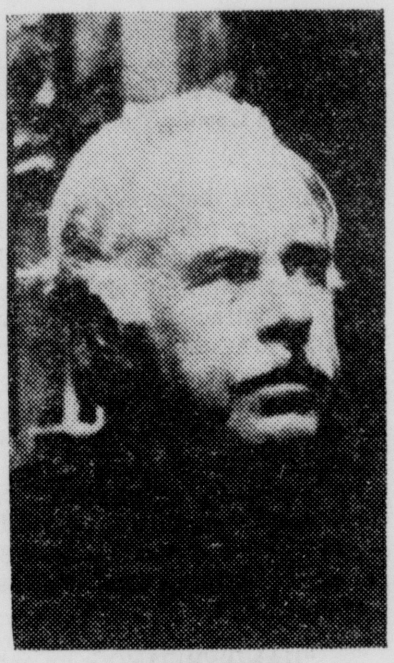
It is also a carefully-crafted, meticulously-structured novel about youth, old age, and the human condition.

For author Wright Morris (Mill Valley resident, San Francisco State College professor) has produced a rarity — a fast-paced modern novel about two sympathetic, believable characters.

Kermit, recently orphaned and consigned to his dismayed "next-of-kin" uncle, "has been nowhere, knows very little" and isn't really unhappy, though he chokes up and can't answer when his teacher (who thinks he's a nice, clean, polite boy) asks, "Are you happy?"

Uncle Floyd (who is school crossing guard and sometime caretaker for the trailer court) doesn't especially like kids, since "they all grow up to be hippies, criminals, drug addicts, sex maniacs, or basketball players."

But he is salt-of-the-earth Nebraskan — in spite of a lifetime spent denying his Bible-belt upbringing — and he accepts Kermit as his responsibility.



WRIGHT MORRIS
Convincing characters

They adapt to and tolerate each other.

Kermit helps him trim the hedge, shop for groceries, and learns to "reduce to eight the number of briquets necessary to broil four chuckburgers, leaving enough to percolate the coffee."

Kermit assuages his growing-boy hunger, and his loneliness, with Fig Newtons; covertly watches the few local hippies and is pleased when they call him "Man", (his uncle calls most people, including Kermit, "Boy"); plays with his yo-yo and says "Yes, ma'am" to the old ladies in the trailer court.

High point of the week for Kermit and Floyd is the Tuesday letter from Aunt Viola, Floyd's 87-year-old sister, who still lives in the family home in Nebraska.

Her sincere, Sunday-schoolish letters are addressed to Kermit. But Floyd, who confuses Kermit by describing Viola as a "silly child and a saintly women," reads them aloud — sometimes cursing, sometimes taking off his glasses "to rub his eyes with his knuckles."

A crisis in their lives — and in the plot — arrives with the telegram announcing Viola's death. Floyd decides to take his Maxwell (it still has the original paint) off the blocks, hook it to the trailer, and head for home.

One reason for going is his discovery that Kermit doesn't "look forward" to anything — not to "the whiteness of winter" or even to spring.

This confirms Floyd's suspicions that "California was a place to grow old and die in, but not grow up," and that "no man on whom the snow did not fall was worth a hill of beans."

The trip home is a journey, for Floyd, from old age to whatever is beyond, and, for Kermit, from boyhood to the beginning of manhood.

They encounter and are absorbed by a couple of one-dimensional hippies who bring about a flaming denouement — the cleansing "fire sermon" of the title.

The novel — especially the latter half — has enough symbols to satisfy most English Lit instructors, but Kermit and Floyd triumph and remain convincing characters to the end.

Wright Morris has an artist's eye for detail and a finely-tuned ear for Midwestern phrasing.

In 1957 Wright Morris won the National Book Award for "The Field of Vision"; now "Fire Sermon" should put him in the running for this year's prize.

Gothic Novel Of Suspense With Touch of Supernatural

FOOL'S APPLE by Sara Cardiff; Random House, 216 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This is one of those Gothic novels of suspense and romance that some detest and others revel in. And there is an added touch of the supernatural that is currently the "in" thing in fiction.

But the best thing "Fool's Apple" has going for it is an author who uses language adeptly and effectively. Although it seems this is a first novel, Sara Carfiff writes with extreme competence and considerable creativity.

The setting is the coast of New England. To Sedgewick, the family home, and to past tragedy, Elizabeth Frame returns with her husband Raoul. Against her will, Elizabeth begins to learn the causes for the tragedies of the past. But events she is seemingly powerless to control move her inevitably toward new catastrophes — the ruin of her marriage, the default of her reason, even the possible loss of her life.

All this melodrama is made quite palatable by Miss Cardiff's pleasing writing style.

THE MAGICIAN by Sol Stein; Delacorte Press, 258 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James Meldrum.

Sixteen-year-old Ed Japhet, the magician of this story, is the victim of social injustice and misunderstanding.

His father is a science teacher at the school Ed attends. This leads to complications within the plot because a normal father-son relationship is almost impossible. The novel, with its many digressions, still manages to proceed quite rapidly from sleight-of-hand on stage to sleight-of-justice in the courtroom. We have for a change not a story of racial prejudice, but one of private hate and jealousy.

The villain of the story is a young man named Urek, who can be said to be a product of his environment which of course includes his sterile home life. Urek, who leads a gang and runs a school extortion racket, is thwarted by Ed Japhet, who instead of giving in to the hoodlums' threats, defies them. Retaliation by Urek and his cohorts is swift and almost deadly, but the administration of justice is slow and unsure.

The adults in the story, including the boys' fathers, are a little unreal. Urek's father, however, does react to some events in a manner that is all too real.

Urek's defense lawyer is a sharp but shifty adversary for the state prosecution. Much of the story revolves around this attorney and his dreams of how to get the guilty off.

There are a few side stories which concern the love affairs of the young men in the story, but they do little to advance the plot except to show the differences in each boy's way of looking at life.

The story holds attention well, but each turn of events is almost predictable. Even so, each page is turned in hurried anticipation of what is to come next. The reader is allowed to see the whole picture as are most of the characters, but the big frustration is that the jury is kept in the dark.

There is a surprising ending with jungle justice being meted out. It comes upon the reader quite suddenly and could be said to be the beginning of another story.

Here's Happy Travel Book

Generally speaking, there is little more deadly reading than the travel book. But Kent Ruth's "Touring the Old West" is a happy exception.

Ruth, travel editor of the Daily Oklahoman, takes the reader vicariously to gold camps and old short-line railroads, to out-of-the-way villages and historic spots, to pioneer trails, to frontier military posts — a wide variety of places of interest in the West.

They really become places of interest with his enthusiastic and original handling. The reader soon finds himself wanting to visit them in person. And that is the mark of a first-rate travel book.

THE TWINKLE IN HIS EYE

Remember the twinkle in his eye,
The joys that all the years
Did give to you;
Let the sorrows
And the bitter woes
Pass you by;
Remember the glory

A Sewing Cabinet For The Gal Handy With Needle

The most rewarding thing about sewing is the quick results a girl can get for very little money.

Ten dollars worth of red wool can become an eye-catching coat worth all of $65. That extra yard of fabric can give you skirts, maybe three — skirts being what they are today. A husband or beau can be terribly impressed when the lady of his life appears for an evening out in a beguiling dress that she has made that very day.

It contains, in an orderly way, all of the 101 notions and tools every seamstress owns. The roomy drawers are ideal for fabrics, trim and dozens of miscellaneous items. On the inside of each door you have places for scissors, thread, patterns and other sewing tools, all plainly visible and within easy reach.

The top folds out to give you a large cutting and work surface, yet when the top is folded down the entire unit requires but little floor space.

Invisible casters make it mobile so it can be easily glided to any part of your home where you wish to work.

The entire cabinet is made of birch plywood. Or you may use any one of the other fancy plywoods now on the market.

The building is no trick at all when you use the easy-to-follow pattern. Easy-to-understand, step-by-step directions are included along with photos showing the various stages of construction.

THE COST? Very little when you build it yourself.

Some other patterns that are also worthy of your interest: No. 377, wall magazine rack, 50 cents; No. 349, ironing center, $1; No. 272, another sewing machine cabinet, $1, and No. 434, magazine end table, $1.

A BOOKFUL OF PROJECTS

Steve Ellingson, whose build-it-yourself patterns are featured weekly on the handyman's pages of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine, is now offering a new booklet picturing more than 450 do-it-yourself projects, available for 75 cents from Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409.

ACTRESS KAREN HUSTON smiles her approval of this sewing cabinet loaded with helpful aids for the needle-and-thread artist, and readily built with the help of a pattern by a home handyman.

Legs Great On Girls, But A Nuisance On Furniture

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

In my book, legs are for people not furniture.

Frequently, when looking through magazines, I find myself counting the number of legs in a room setting. It's a strange sport, I admit, but a fun one, even when you are sitting around talking design with professionals and architects.

ONE ARCHITECT I know spent many years with Frank Lloyd Wright, the great American architect. Wright disliked chairs that sat too high for comfort and often ordered an assistant to saw four inches from each chair leg!

While clients were usually startled, they eventually found that Wright was right. Which naturally gave him impetus to correct such an error when the occasion demanded.

This aversion to too many legs in a room forces one to be on the lookout for other supportive solutions. Happily, the 1970s provide nice alternatives.

Pedestal bases are pleasing sculptural forms that do their supporting job very well. Pedestals and recessed block supports make sense because they allow the person seated to have toe and heel room and, most important at a dining table, knee room!

Then there are curved tubular chrome bases, fiberglass molded shapes, wood wrapped in leather, steel rods formed into square frames and a variety of solutions in see-through plexiglass.

Pedestal concepts offer a great deal of versatility. The flowing flower-shaped pedestal is a familiar one. But there are ways to use rectangular forms as pedestals, and the two pieces shown at right prove that point.

The pieces are made by Metropolitan, a San Francisco-based company.

THE CHAIR shell is fabricated out of a polyester resin. But instead of hard edges at the corners, designer Jules Heumann gave the form softer rounder edges. This outer shell of polyester resin comes in colors (that's one of the advantages of molded resins), and the seating area rests upon a recessed pedestal or plinth of polished aluminum or wood.

Sofas and settees have been incorporated in the line, as well as five sizes in tables. Dacron seat cushions are planned so they are completely reversible, giving the seating areas a double life.

And what I especially like about the line is the absence of tricky sticky legs.

LEGS WERE ONCE considered a necessity for furniture. But no longer — not with creative designers around like Jules Heumann who came up with this solution to the too-many-legs problem for Metropolitan of San Francisco.

Hemlock Prized

Western hemlock lumber is prized for wall paneling and cabinet work because it is nonresinous and has close, straight grain.

The Flower That Inspires The Poets

Since the days of Homer and Sophocles, daffodils have been a favorite flower of writers and singers of literature and poetry.

But if those ancients, or the less distant William Shakespeare, William Wordsworth or Edmund Spenser, each of whom also helped immortalize the daffodil with his pen, could see these bulb flowers today, they would have to admit that their modern versions are even more spectacular than their poetic souls could foresee.

The familiar golden, trumpet-shape flowers have been joined by many other classes of daffodils. The shades of colors and differing flower forms are a sight to behold.

It comes as no surprise that daffodils are easy to grow; they provide a maximum of beauty with a minimum of attention. Best yet, by carefully selecting varieties, you can enjoy a succession of color from daffodils — in the garden and in indoor arrangements. The blooms are excellent cut flowers.

BASICALLY, THE blooming season for daffodils covers the period from February to April. By choosing some very early-flowering daffodils, planting early blooming varieties, some mid-season ones and late-season performers, weeks and weeks of beauty can be enjoyed.

Among the earliest daffodils to bloom are William the Silent, a mammoth yellow trumpet; and Matador, which produces up to seven flowers per stem. The larger flowers have soft yellow petals and a fiery-red cup.

Early-blooming varieties are numerous.

KING ALFRED, the popular yellow trumpet, is a best-seller, though others are gaining rapidly in stature. February Gold has star shaped petals, a long fluted orange trumpet with a ruffled orange lip. Fortune is a large-cupped yellow with a golden orange trumpet.

Ice Follies has broad white petals with a large, flat ivory cup. Actaea is the largest Poet Daffodil — white petals with a gold-edged red eye; and Pink Punch, a newer trumpet-type, sports white petals and a pink trumpet. All-white Thalia produces clusters of flowers on each stem and Texas is a double, whose soft yellow petals are marked by a clear scarlet center.

FOLLOWING the mid-season daffodils is a host of lovely, late-blooming choices: Mabel Taylor has white petals with a pink band on the frilled cup; Spencer Tracy, also white, has a multi-colored yellow flushed apricot edge.

Mount Hood is a huge pure white, with ruffled cup.

The planting season for daffodil bulbs is here, and nurseries will have a large supply available for Marin gardens. Each variety will be identified by a color reproduction of the bloom, so that you can see the colors and flower forms.

Your nurseryman can provide simple planting advice. Two important things to remember:

Plant several bulbs of each variety and mass them together in garden locations. A dozen bulbs planted at random appear lost in the garden when they bloom — grouped together in a few clusters will give a cheery effect.

Also, get quality bulbs. There are so-called bargain bulbs available, but they are only a bargain if a value is received in return.

Garden Page

THE BINKIE is a newcomer to the daffodil family, but a precocious youngster that produces a spectacular bloom highlighted by yellow petals and a white, ruffled trumpet. Nurseries have many varieties of daffodil bulbs now for planting this month. Your reward will be a soul-stirring show of garden color in the spring.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓Tuberous begonias and fuchsias will appreciate a feeding this month. Check with your nurseryman for the recommended plant food.

✓Plant Calla Lillies this month. Replant any spring-blooming bulbs which you lifted and stored this summer.

✓Certain azaleas will begin to bloom this month and next. By planting these early varieties you can extend the flowering season for several months.

✓Plant such perennials as English primrose, African daisies, white candytuft, carnations, delphiniums, chrysanthemums and helianthemums now for color next spring and summer.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

Some recent releases from RCA:

BIZET-SHCHEDRIN "The Carmen Ballet" — Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops — RCA LSC-3129: Imagine a ballet score constructed from all the familiar tunes of Bizet's "Carmen," and played without woodwinds, brass or harp — just the string section and a total of 47 percussion instruments. Such is the scintillating score arranged by the Soviet composer Rodion Shchedrin and first released on the Melodiya-Angel label.

Who could be more appropriate to conduct the first U.S. recording, in improved stereo sound, than Arthur Fiedler?

This LP has been probably the most exciting listening experience with the classics I have had in the past year. Even if you can't stand "Carmen," give this sonic trip a chance on a good stereo system.

"HOT TUNA" — RCA LPS-4353: two members of the Jefferson Airplane, Jorma Kaukonen and Jack Casady, have joined with harmonica man Will Scarlett to form a delightful little acoustic rock group. The tapes were made at the New Orleans House in Berkeley and delve into old-timey favorites like "Hesitation Blues" and "How Long Blues," as well as several originals.

Very nice, relaxed, non-freaked-out music.

"THE BEST OF the Youngbloods" — RCA LPS-4399: The Youngbloods have been around the rock world since the early days of mid-60s, and have turned out a number of fine singles, five of which are featured here. Their sound is always tastefully balanced and much richer than the trio situation would seem to allow.

CARL ORFF: "Carmina Burana" — Boston Symphony conduced by Seiji Ozawa with soloists and New England Conservatory Chorus — RCA LSC-3161: "Rhythmic ostinato figures stretching over long, harmonically immobile spans" — that doesn't sound like the structure of one of the most popular 20th Century works of concert music, does it? But it is.

It is next to impossible to describe the sensational effect on audiences of the super-simplified, repetitional music of Orff, but it does work.

Orff's music using songs of the goliards — students who wandered Europe in the Middle Ages wining, wenching and creating poetry — finds its most sympathetic interpretation in choruses made up of today's students. The New England group fits the bill, and Ozawa strikes the last measure of fire into this already roaring choral — orchestral piece.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Otto Preminger, that movie director-producer noted for steely control of his projects and employes, is just about the last person one would think of as going into television, but he's made his first such commitment. He will produce, direct and — yes! — star in a two-hour film-for-television for the ABC network. He was a stage and screen actor years ago. The work is "Open Question," a courtroom drama written by none other than Louis Nizer of New York, one of the country's most famous barristers. Deals with a controversial spy trial. Production early in 1972.

Milburn Stone is due to go back to work in Hollywood in his Doc Adams role on "Gunsmoke." Open-heart surgery took him out of circulation last April. The first six episodes of the new season on CBS will feature Pat Hingle as a Dr. John Chapman, filling in for Doc Adams, supposedly on a trip back East to brush up on medical matters.

Dean Martin has joined other top entertainers as a golf impreario. The NBC star has become host of a new major pro golf tourney, the Dean Martin Tucson Open, which NBC will telecast from the Arizona city next Jan. 22-23.

Charles Nelson Reilly, who has logged a lot of television time on "The Dean Martin Show" and the vanished "Ghost and Mrs. Muir" series, has a new assignment in a recurring role for the second season of the CBS "Arnie" program. He will play a television personality known as the Giddyap Gourmet, neighbor of Arnie Herschel Bernardi.

Vince Edwards will be surrounded by veteran actresses Helen Hayes, Sylvia Sidney and Myrna Loy in his new movie, "Do Not Fold, Spindle or Mutilate."

Robert Reed — Rare TV Actor With Two Series

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tall Robert Reed is that rare actor who stars concurrently in two prime-time television series, "Mannix" and "The Brady Bunch."

While he plays Lieutenant Tobias on a recurring basis in "Mannix," the dapper performer is Papa Mike Brady in the situation comedy.

Working two shows at once isn't all that sets Reed apart from most television actors. He also doesn't take to other performers. That's why he lives in unfashionable Pasadena, "to get away from Hollywood."

EVEN SO, Reed lives in a luxurious 20-room home that beggars most of the palaces of Bel Air and Beverly Hills.

Though he looks impeccable on the air, off-screen Reed slops around in sneakers, blue jeans and T-shirt. His appearance strikes a discordant note against the setting of his home, formal gardens and reflecting pool, the latter complete with an imposing fountain.

REED WAS divorced several years ago but is visited frequently by his 15-year-old daughter, Karen, who lives in Chicago, where her father was born.

Also helping to fill the spacious home are Reed's parents who visit him regularly from a sprawling cattle ranch in Oklahoma.

A German shepherd named Sissy and a mutt who answers to Stubby are his favorite companions around the house — that is, when Reed hasn't brought a date home and pointed her in the direction of the kitchen.

WHILE HE employs full-time help, Reed doesn't have a cook. When his mother visits she fills the bill. Otherwise unsuspecting pretty girls who accept dates from the actor often find themselves fixing meals.

"I don't myself cook for two reasons," Reed says. "I don't know how, and I have no intention of learning."

Reed is possessed of an offbeat, quiet sense of humor. At parties he is most often alone in a corner talking to one or two close friends.

From time to time he hosts small dinner parties at home. The guest list is restricted to old friends (E. G. Marshall, for instance) and working acquaintances.

BECAUSE HIS schedule is crowded with two series, Reed is well organized. He reports to Paramount studios — where both shows are filmed — at 7 a.m. and generally is through for the day 12 hours later.

He says he enjoys working with the swarm of children on "The Brady Bunch" and playing an ideal father. But remarriage is not among his calendar of events in the near future.

"Any actor who changes wardrobes all day long as part of his job is on an ego trip if he enjoys getting dressed up on his own time," Reed says. "That's why you find me in jeans and sneakers."

THIS IS THE SEASON,
TURN, TURN, TURN.

Turn, Turn, Turn.
From one channel to the next. After awhile it gets to be a little back breaking, wouldn't you say?

Like Please Don't Eat the Daisies. Gilligan's Island. Mayberry R.F.D. I Dream of Jeannie. I Love Lucy. Dragnet. And The 8 O'Clock Movie. Back to back. One after another. Beginning at 5 pm every weekday night.

So if watching TV starts to give you a pain in the back, turn to a friend. And relax!

Talks At Prison Recessed

ATTICA, N.Y. (UPI)—A citizens' group met with rebellious convicts holding 30 hostages at the Attica State Correction facility today, but the talks were recessed pending the arrival of Black Panther leaders Bobby Seale and Huey Newton as mediators in the three-day revolt.

The hasitly composed citizens' committee which included the publisher of a black newspaper met with the prisoners for more than 4-1-2 hours in what was called aprenegotiating session. It had been scheduled to last only 45 minutes.

The talks were recessed to await the arrival of Seale and Newton whose presence was demanded by the inmates. A spokesman for the Black Panther party in Oakland, Calif., said Seale would arrive by nightfall. There was no indication whether Newton would appear.

A spokesman for the delegation said the commissioner of the state department of corrections would be asked to sit in on the talks.

The purpose of the prenegotiations was to formalize the conditions and demands of later talks with prison officials.

The list of demands rose to 30, including a call for the resignation or dismissal of Vincent R. Mancusi as prison superintendent. Earlier demands voiced by some inmates included a call for transportation out of the country, payment of minimum wages for prison work and true religious freedom.

During the overnight meeting —held out of doors in a courtyard near cellblock D— inmates saw what they believed to be armed National Guard personnel on a nearby rooftop. The talks were halted for an hour and a half until the prisoners were certain there would be no trouble.

The delegation of nearly two dozen mediators included a noted criminal lawyer, a black newspaper publisher, state legislators and a congressman of Puerto Rican descent. They made a 3-1-2 hour tour of the rebel-held cellblock accompanied by newsmen Friday night, then returned to the same area without reporters.

The Rev. Raymond Bradley, an Episcopal minister, emerged from the prison to tell newsmen the delegation hoped to iron out a final set of inmate demands, then present the list -along with its own recommendations to prison officials, who would then re-enter the negotiations.

The rioting broke out Thursday night when more than half of the institution's 2,200 inmates took over a section of the prison. One guard was seriously injured when he was thrown from a second story window.

A spokesman for the State Department of Corrections placed the number of men not under the prison's control at 1,281, based on a headcount of inmates held in secure areas. Fifty-five per cent of the institution's 2,200 inmates are non-white, while an estimated 65 per cent of the rebels were believed to be non-white, the spokesman said.

The citizens' group was pressed into service as a means of communication after direct talks between leaders of the revolt and state authorities broke down in shouting.

The prisoners, who issued a list of 15 demands within hours of the outbreak, added more demands, including a call for free passage to a "nonimperialistic country" for those who so desired.

Dismissal Of Zink Is Upheld

The Sausalito City Council voted unanimously last night to uphold the May 1970 dismissal of Sausalito police Sgt. Thomas H. Zink.

The 33-year-old officer, who said the council's decision was "a miserable excuse for justice" but "not unexpected," promised to continue in the courts his 16-month fight to regain his job.

By its action, the council rejected the conclusion of a state hearing officer who had recommended in January that Zink be reinstated but demoted to patrolman.

Mayor Alexander R. Imlay told the Independent-Journal the council had arrived at its decision because it believed "Zink did not measure up to the high standards set for Sausalito police officers or to the requirements of a professional."

The police sergeant was fired from the department after 11 years on the force. At that time, his superior officers charged him with a variety of offenses including, "arriving for work late, out of uniform, and with the odor of alcohol on his breath."

He was also accused of "negligent use of a firearm," "emotional instability" and "inability to maintain a satisfactory relationship with subordinate officers."

Hearing Officer Paul A. Winton later ruled there was insufficient evidence to support many of the charges.

In March the council, after failing to reach a decision in

Abernathy Sneaks Talk With Angela

Rev. Ralph Abernathy, successor to Martin Luther King, sneaked a five-minute conversation yesterday with Angela Davis while Marin County Jail officials tried to tell him he couldn't talk to her.

The head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference told Miss Davis she was looking well and added, "We're with you all the way. We're doing everything we can."

Their conversation on a jail visiting telephone took place while a harried British television crew was attempting to interview Miss Davis, who is awaiting trial on charges stemming from the August 1970 shoot-out at the Civic Center.

While Abernathy argued with jail officials at one end of the jail lobby, Miss Davis sat behind a glass partition at the other end, waiting while the television crew tried to get their lights working.

After being told he could not see the former college instructor, Abernathy demanded to talk to Stinson. While a jailer went to get Stinson, Abernathy crossed the lobby, picked up an intercom telephone and talked with Miss Davis.

After Stinson broke up the conversation, Abernathy continued to protest, saying "I've been in jail about 30 times myself and I've never been in a jail that doesn't allow ministers.

Stinson told him Rev. Cecil Williams of San Francisco had been named by Miss Davis as her spiritual adviser.

Abernathy responded by telling Stinson, "I'll be praying for you."

He said later he would further protest his exclusion from the jail.

"I don't think it's fair," he said. "It's a racist system."

Abernathy, was in the Bay Area to address a Baptist convention in San Francisco.

Thieu Says His Future Will Depend On Electorate

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam said today he will quit if the vote of confidence he has requested in the one-man Oct. 3 presidential election is "less than half of the number of the electors who go to vote."

Thieu, speaking on nationwide television, laid down the ground rules for the election. He had announced Sept. 2 that he would ask the people for a vote of confidence after his two opponents, Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky and Gen. Duong Van (Big) Minh, dropped out of the race alleging that Thieu was rigging the election.

There are 7,085,943 registered voters. There were no estimates on how many would go to the polls, although the National Assembly election in August produced a near-record 78.3 per cent of the vote.

Thieu said he would need 50 per cent of the turnout to consider his remaining in office a mandate from the people.

Meanwhile South Vietnamese Rangers engaged Communist forces today in the first significant fighting of the nearly week-long Saigon government offensive to disrupt Communist supply lines along the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

The Rangers fought a small North Vietnamese force two hours after American helicopters had airlifted South Vietnamese Black Panther troops in an attempt to draw the Communists out into battle.

In a brief exchange of small arms and grenade fire the Rangers killed three North Vietnamese. Ten minutes later a mile to the southeast the Rangers killed two more Communists in a similar skirmish.

UPI Correspondent Stewart Kellerman reported from the U.S. combat base at Quang Tri that the Rangers suffered no casualties of their own in either clash. The Black Panthers were fanning out a mile away in an effort to make further contact with the Communists.

Six miles south of Khe Sanh and three miles northeast of the Laotian border, a South Vietnamese infantry battalion today discovered a newly built dirt road leading from Laos toward Khe Sanh.

Khrushchev Dies In Moscow At 77

Charted Russia's Course After Stalin

MOSCOW (UPI) — Former Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, the coarse by cunning peasant who loosened the chains of Stalinism and was ousted in 1964 by the present ruling troika, died today. He was 77.

In death he remained an "unperson" officially denied recognition as a hero of the Soviet Union he served, rawly and often bluntly, as a co-leader from Stalin's death in 1953 until 1958 and then as supreme ruler until his dismissal.

Family friends said Khrushchev suffered a massive heart attack at his country home 25 miles west of Moscow. He was taken to the Kremlin hospital and died there before noon.

Khrushchev will be buried, probably Monday, in Moscow's Novodevichy Cemetery, family friends said. It is a political graveyard that ranks second in prestige to the Kremlin Wall, the pantheon of Soviet heroes.

He was earthy and direct, even at the apex of power. He loved jokes, savored the limelight. Friends said the punishment of utter political silence after 1964 hurt him most.

As his earthy manners suggested, Khrushchev was born a peasant. The heights of power to which he ascended never robbed him of the blunt good humor he acquired as a boy in the village of Kalinovka, 130 miles south of Moscow where he was born on April 17, 1894.

Many of his contemporaries, especially sophisticated city dwellers, resented such earthiness in a national leader. They regarded him as a buffoon and they were relieved when he fell from power in 1964.

But others respected Khrushchev's honesty even as they winced at some of his jokes, and they trusted him in every crisis.

Khrushchev's life was a chronicle of crises, from his struggle to survive in the miserable conditions of a prerevolutionary coal mine to his losing battle with old age and death.

The hardships of the mines and the resentment they caused made Khrushchev a Bolshevik in 1918. He was on the ground floor of the new system, and he rose quickly within it. He became coal mine manager and local party leader and soon he was in Moscow where he caught the eye of Stalin's closest lieutenants.

Khrushchev survived Stalin's purges, rising quickly through the ranks of the Central Committee of the party to become Stalin's chief assistant in the Ukraine. After World War II, in which he served as a political general, he worked on restoration of the ravaged Ukraine and then returned to Moscow.

He never was among those considered likely to succeed Stalin, a fact that stood him in good stead when the dictator died in 1953.

In the vicious power struggle that followed, Stalin's heirs apparent made Khrushchev party chief because they thought him a harmless outsider. They found out how wrong they were during the five years it took Khrushchev to gather to himself all the threads of power.

Even before then, Khrushchev was changing the Soviet

Antibusing Forces To Nation's Courts

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Antibusing forces carried their fight against school integration plans to the nation's courts and streets Friday while in San Francisco officials conducted a dress rehearsal for the court-ordered busing plan which will carry half the city's grade school pupils to new schools Monday.

An ordinance extending indefinitely a sundown to sunrise curfew imposed the night before has been passed by the Lubbock, Tex. City Council following racial troubles over the slaying of a black teen-ager at an integrated high school.

on police from rooftops. One policeman was wounded in the neck and two others were hospitalized with injuries, one after he was struck by a car.

Fires broke out in Lubbock's Negro and Mexican-American neighborhoods and windows were smashed in about 25 business establishments before police were able to restore order.

Authorities said the violence erupted as a group of blacks were heading home from a march on City Hall. The group demanded action against a white youth charged with the shooting death of William Collier, 16, at Dunbar high school.

In Detroit six men linked by federal authorities to the Michigan Ku Klux Klan were arraigned before a U.S. magistrate on charges of conspiring to bomb 10 school buses at Pontiac a week before a court-ordered school busing desegregation program was to have begun.

Nine women, arrested earlier this week in turbulent antibusing demonstrations in Pontiac, pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct charges and chose to spend 15 days in jail rather than pay $100 fines. Five of them had chained themselves to bus depot gates to prevent the vehicles from leaving. Yesterday, however, buses moved out on schedule and without incident for the first time since school opened Tuesday.

In Jacksonville, Fla., school bus drivers were instructed to check their vehicles thoroughly after a brown paper sack containing a homemade dynamite bomb was discovered underneath one of the buses. Investigators said if the bomb had exploded it would have destroyed the bus and damaged surrounding buildings. The device, consisting of 14 sticks of dynamite and a timer, had been placed under the gas tank sometime during the night.

The attempted bombing was the first incident reported as Duval County completed the first week of the new school term under a court-ordered busing desegregation program.

Parents of children in the 85,000-pupil Pinellas County school system appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court Friday to stay an expanded school busing program for the St. Petersburg, Fla. area.

In another Supreme Court action Justice William O. Douglas refused to halt a new high school integration plan for San Mateo County, Calif., saying that it was too late and further delay might "imperil the new school year."

Israeli Troops Down Cairo Jet

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The Israeli government said its troops today shot down an Egyptian jet as it flew over the northern end of the Suez Canal, and the Israeli armed forces chief of staff said the possibility of another Middle East war "definitely exists."

Two Sukho 17 fighter-bombers were fired on by Israelis as they reportedly buzzed positions on the West Bank and one was seen going down on the East Bank of the Canal, Israelis said. It was the most serious incident in 13 months of the Middle East cease fire.

Earlier in the day, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Haim Bar-Lev told a radio interviewer the possibility of another war exists but that Israel is prepared and will not be taken by a surprise Egyptian attack.

Israel in war, he said, will attempt to safeguard its security without involving the Soviet troops in Egypt. But a situation may arise that "may oblige the Soviets in Egypt — the Russian troops —to take steps undesirable to us," he said.

The number of Soviet advisers in Egypt is estimated to number between 15,000 and 20,000.

Bar-Lev said Israeli strategy in a new war will be to sit tight except for some behind-the-lines raids and hold on to the territory it now occupies rather than attempt to take more Arab land. He said he was confident Israeli warplanes could destroy Egypt's network of Soviet-built antiaircraft missiles on the western bank of the Suez Canal.

"In my view, there is a possibility that Egypt will renew the fighting," Bar-Lev said. "Such a possibility definitely exists...I believe we are adequately assured and that we shall not be confronted by surprises" from Egypt.

In Egypt, President Anwar Sadat led more than eight mil-

Luna 18 Lost

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union lost its Luna 18 unmanned moon probe today in an "unlucky" landing attempt in a rugged stretch of lunar mountains, the news agency Tass said.

The agency said the ship fired its landing rockets after 54 orbits around the moon and began a descent into a "mountainous terrain which is of great scientific interest.

"Measurements show that the moon landing of the station in these difficult topographical conditions was unlucky," Tass said. "Communications with the station stopped at 10:48 Moscow time (3:48 a.m. EDT)."

Abortion Study

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court agreed Friday to decide the constitutionality of the state's therapeutic abortion law.

The high court agreed to accept the case after two districts of the state court of appeal handed down opposing verdicts—one upholding the law and the other saying it unconstitutionally limited abortions.

General Cleared

SAIGON (UPI)—Lt. Gen. Ngo Dzu, a top South Vietnamese field commander, has been cleared of charges by a U.S. congressman that he ran a narcotics ring providing heroin to American soldiers, Vietnamese military sources said today.

Dzu was exonerated of any involvement in drug running by a South Vietnamese Defense Department investigating team which presented its report to President Nguyen Van Thieu a week ago, the sources said.

Two-Hour Battle

BELFAST, NORTHERN IRELAND (UPI)—British soldiers fought a two-hour gun battle with snipers early today and wounded two men believed by the army to be members of the Irish Republican Army (IRA), an army spokesman said.

The spokesman said the shooting broke out in the Roman Catholic Ardoyne area and that two men were wounded in Fairfield Street. One man was seen being carried into a nearby school and another was being treated for a back wound in a local hospital, the spokesman said.

'Dream Come True'

BART Readying Valentine Gift

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The public may get its first chance to ride on the new Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) district trains on next Valentine's day, and a trip won't cost a dime.

BART General Manager B.R. Stockes told the district board of directors Thursday that service would begin in March. He said progress on the vast network was proceeding on schedule.

Stones said the Valentine's day free rides on Feb. 14 would provide "an opportunity for our own people to become accustomed to serving the public."

PRINCESS VISITS PLAY

Storm Watchers Keeping Close Check On Movements Of Edith

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tropical storms Edith, Fern and Ginger menaced residents of the Texas coast, the sparsely settled Yucatan Peninsula and the Atlantic resort island of Bermuda today. But none was considered especially dangerous.

The National Hurricane Center in Miami said, however, that Edith could regenerate into a dangerous hurricane after it crossed the Yucatan Peninsula and emerged into the Gulf of Mexico this evening.

Tropical storm Fern, meanwhile, continued its slow, southwestward drift along the central Texas coast after battering the Corpus Christi area most of the night with gale winds and up to six inches of rain.

In the Atlantic Ocean some 300 miles south of Bermuda, tropical storm Ginger built winds of 70 miles an hour as it moved northeastward. Although Ginger was not expected to intensify into a major storm, forecasters said it would probably become a "minimal" hurricane later today.

Edith was packing 170 miles an hour winds early Friday when it screamed out of the Caribbean sea into the tiny Honduran village of Puerto Limpara, howled across the 8,500-foot high Honduran mountains and emerged into the Gulf of Honduras south of Belize, the capital of British Honduras.

Red Cross teams began making their way toward the small fishing villages along the Honduran coast that were hit.

Japan Is Reported Against U.S. Wish Of Revaluing Yen Upward

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Japanese emissaries say Japan will refuse to adopt U. S. proposals to revalue the yen upward and to recognize two Chinas in the United Nations.

The emissaries met with President Nixon and State Department officials Friday to discuss the proposals.

The only progress made during two days of talks on the U. S. trade deficit of $2.8 billion a year with Japan was an announced agreement that new discussions would be scheduled.

The United States insisted on revaluation of the yen. The Japanese delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda, declined to respond to the request, but urged again removal of the 10 per cent surcharge on foreign imports that Nixon imposed Aug. 15.

"Japan is willing to render cooperation in many ways, but the upward revaluation of the yen is not one of them," said Japanese Finance Minister Mikio Mizuta.

Mizuta said the United States is similar to a "sick but still very strong person ... (and) because it is still a very strong person it refuses to take the medicine which everybody else knows is good for it."

Before a 40-minute meeting with Nixon, Fukuda told a news conference the United States "adequately understands why Japan cannot become a cosponsor" of a U.S. resolution to seat both mainland and nationalist Chinas in the United Nations.

Fukuda and Nixon exchanged cordial toasts at a black-tie dinner at the White House Friday night, but it was clear the breach still existed.

"I'm confident our relations are as firm today as they ever have been before," Fukuda toasted. "However, it is also true there has been some friction in our economic relations."

The Japanese delegation also said that present monetary problems, sparked largely by the dollar situation, will not be solved during the conference of the Group of 10 industrialized nations set to begin Wednesday in London.

The crux of the problem is that inexpensive Japanese-made goods have flooded the U.S. market while comparatively more costly American products have had a hard time competing in Japan. As a result, the United States imports $2.8 billion more worth of Japanese goods each year than it sells U.S. goods to Japan.

Opera Matches First Nighters

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco's 49th opera season got off to its traditional glittering start Friday night, but for a change, the opera matched the audience in splendor.

Superstar soprano Beverly Sills opened the 1971 season with Massenet's "Manon," in what critics agreed was a rarity, a major opening night hit.

New Attempt To Exhume Judge's Body

The court-appointed attorney for San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee yesterday filed in Marin Superior Court two new affidavits which he hopes will help convince a judge to order that Judge Harold J. Haley's body be exhumed.

Attorney Ernest L. Graves is seeking a new autopsy in an attempt to show that the shot which killed the judge in the Aug. 7, 1970 shoot-out at the Civic Center was not fired by Magee.

Dr. John Manwaring, the pathologist who performed the autopsy, has said that he was not sure whether a shotgun blast to the head or a bullet wound in the chest killed the judge.

Yesterday Graves filed affidavits in which Dr. Manwaring said that he had changed his mind last month about the fatal wounds suffered by two other persons who died in the shootout.

The pathologist said that after consultation with ballistic experts and examination of the clothing worn by Jonathan Jackson and San Quentin inmate William Christmas he had reversed his earlier conclusions.

In both instances the doctor said that what he had said were exit wounds were actually entrance wounds.

Graves apparently hopes that the doctor's admission of his mistakes will point up what he considers the need for a new autopsy on the judge.

Judge Richard E. Arnason of Contra Costa County has set a hearing for Sept. 22 on the exhumation request and has set that time for Judge Haley's widow to come forward if she wishes to protest.

Federal Aid Sought For Marin Jobs

Marin County officials yesterday submitted an application for $252,100 in federal funds to provide about 27 jobs for unemployed persons in the county.

County Personnel Director Maren Rinne said the Federal Emergency Employment Act of 1971 provided for the $252,100 if the county matches that with $28,011 in local funds.

Cities within the county will have a chance to apply for some of those funds. Mrs. Rinne said the exact allocation of funds and jobs to various cities and to the county is still to be determined.

The Federal Manpower Administration must approve the county's application, and this approval is not expected for at least a month.

When and if the jobs are created, the Emergency Employment Act of 1971 provides that Vietnam veterans must be given preference for the positions.

Source Of Botulism In Soup—A Mystery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spokesmen for the Food and Drug Administration and the Campbell Soup Co. still do not know exactly what caused the botulism that contaminated chicken vegetable soup canned by Campbell's in Paris, Tex.

FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards told a House Commerce subcommittee Friday that the plant was found to be clean and modern and that scientists have theories but that tests to pinpoint the exact cause are not completed.

Last month, Campbell's recalled thousands of cans of the soup after tests indicated botulism, a deadly poison, in some cans. The firm later recalled cans of vegetarian vegetable soup after bacteria spores were found in samples of the soup.

Edwards told the subcommittee he will complete within the next two weeks a series of proposals for improving FDA inspection methods including a recommendation that the 60,000 food manufacturing plants be federally licensed.

Edwards said that through licensing "we could see to it that they had certain types of technical help we feel are necessary in a modern food plant and also compile a complete list of manufacturers.

He said that a doubling ofthe FDA's $100 million annual budget would be needed to improve inspection techniques with the bulk of the increase going to expansion of the FDA's present force of 250 field and port inspectors.

The extra effort required for the Campbell's recall and the Bon Vivant case in which one man died from eating botulism contaminated soup plus the mercury-in-tuna investigation caused cancellation of thousands of scheduled plant inspections, Edwards said.

E. M. Nuckols Jr., a senior vice president of Campbell Soup Co., testified his company had produced 100 billion cans of food over 102 years without a recall due to botulism toxin.

"Until several hypotheses can be checked by inoculated and incubated test packs —which will require several weeks —it is too early to make any statements concerning the cause," Nuckols said.

However, he said from what is known now "several most unusual circumstances" could have ocurred simultaneously and combined to impede effective heat penetration into the center of a few cans.

Heat penetration is affected by a number of circumstances including density of the product, moisture content and temperature of the soup in the cans when they enter the cooker — all factors Nuckols said are carefully monitored by inspectors.

Judge Sentences Three For San Rafael Sit-In

Three persons were sentenced yesterday and a warrant issued for a fourth on charges stemming from a May 5 sit-in at the San Rafael office of the U.S. Selective Service.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of Marin Municipal Court set bail at $100 on the warrant for Richard Alan Raznikov, 24, of San Rafael, who failed to appear for sentencing yesterday.

Raznikov, a law student and former unsuccessful candidate for mayor of San Rafael, pleaded guilty in June to a charge of failing to disperse.

Three others who also earlier pleaded guilty to the failing to disperse charge were sentenced yesterday.

Driver Hurt In Accident

A San Rafael man was reported in poor condition at Marin General Hospital with a possible head injury and cut chin following an automobile accident early today in Nicasio.

The man, William J. McCarter, 32, of 79 Woodland Avenue, was a passenger in a car driven by Clifton R. Bauer, 51, of 108 Central Avenue, Woodacre, California Highway Patrol officers said.

Bauer was driving north on San Geronimo-Nicasio Road about 185 feet south of Lucas Valley Road at 1:15 a.m. when he told officers he saw lights in front of him and his vehicle started skidding.

Further details about the accident were not available.

Educator: College Humor Nearly Dead

NEW YORK (UPI) —College humor is nearly dead, according to Dario Politella, associate professor of English at the University of Massachusetts and author of "The Illustrated Anatomy of Campus Humor."

He cites student' preoccupation with the state of world affairs as the reason.

Actress Pier Angeli Is Found Dead

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI)—Pier Angeli, the copper-haired, Italian-born actress who carried on an international child custody fight with former husband Vic Damone, was found dead Friday. She was 39.

An autopsy was scheduled today to determine the cause of death.

The actress' body was found in the apartment of a friend, Helena Sorell, Miss Angeli's first acting coach when she arrived in the United States in the early 1950s.

Miss Sorell said the actress, who had just finished filming a science fiction picture in Hollywood last month, had been in "good spirits" the day before her death but had been under a physician's care for a stomach disorder.

The petite, green-eyed actress, born Anna Maria Pierangeli, was under contract with MGM during the 1950s and appeared in a series of romance and historical films, starring with Paul Newman in "Somebody Up There Likes Me" and "The Silver Chalice."

Miss Sorell said late Friday the actress' family had been notified in Italy and in France, where her sister, actress Marisa Pavan, resides. Family members were expected to fly in today to make funeral arrangements.

Miss Angeli, who pronounced her first name "Peer," married singer Damone in a 700-guest ceremony in 1954. The marriage ended after four years with their international domestic difficulties, chiefly a child custody fight, waged in headlines.

A bitter custody fight over their son, Perry, was resolved in 1965, but not before Damone and his "hot Italian temper" filed a bench warrant for his wife for "spiriting against a court order. Damone has custody of Perry, now 16.

Miss Angeli made few films in the late 1960s, preferring to live in seclusion in Beverly Hills.

Union's attitude toward the world, and toward itself. He made "peaceful coexistence—a recurrent phrase in the record of Russian Communism—the cornerstone of Soviet foreign policy.

At home, he began to ease the rigid political controls imposed by Stalin, and in 1956 he stunned his countrymen and the world by directly attacking the dictator's memory. His speech at the 20th party congress that year denounced Stalin as a tyrant, a murderer, a liar and military bungler.

His apparent liberalism led to unrest in the oppressed Soviet bloc countries and political pressure from orthodox Communists — until Khrushchev crushed the Hungarian revolt with tanks in 1956, and he smashed opposition at home a year later.

His opponents misjudged Khrushchev's political acumen and lost a dramatic Central Committee showdown in 1957. When the dust settled, a half dozen former top Kremlin leaders were out of power and Khrushchev's authority was unchallenged.

With his power secure, Khrushchev set about using it. He traveled extensively and met scores of foreign leaders. He impressed some, like Britain's Harold Macmillan, and quarreled with others, including then Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Later he met, and was impressed by, President John F. Kennedy, but he cared less for his fellow Communist, Mao Tse-tung, and he presided over the explosive breakdown in relations between China and the Soviet Union.

Khrushchev traveled extensively through the United States in 1959 and it looked for a time as if America and the Soviet Union would come to terms. But then came the U2 incident, and in his rage Khrushchev scuttled the 1961 Paris summit conference.

There ensued a time of troubles in East-West relations — first Berlin, then Khrushchev's heckling of a speech by a Philippine U.N. delegate by banging a shoe on his desk in the General Assembly chamber of the United Nations.

The greatest crisis came in 1962 when a frightened world watched the Cuban missile crisis unfold. Khrushchev backed down, and in defeat earned the respect of many who were his enemies.

It did his reputation no good at home, however. Though nobody outside the Kremlin knew it, Khrushchev was under attack because of agricultural problems and his enemies were at work against him. To the surprise of the world, Khrushchev "retired" in October, 1964.

He got the same treatment he had given his own opponents: not death, but obscurity. Khrushchev became an "unperson," never mentioned in public and seldom seen outside the country house where he spent his final years puttering, painting and gardening.

He was allowed but one brief respite from the "prison of silence." In response to publication of his alleged memoirs in the west, Khrushchev issued a statement expressing "indignation" and declaring the memoirs a fabrication.

Growth Pattern Of San Mateo County Dwindles

REDWOOD CITY (UPI)— The population of San Mateo County, one of California's fastest growing urban areas in recent years, has come to a virtual standstill.

The reasons, county officials said, were a diminishing supply of buildable land, high costs, depressed economic conditions and a growing national disenchantment with California living."

Only 500 persons were added to the county's population of 556,234 last year. It was the smallest annual growth in San Mateo County since the early 1900s.

Private funeral for Pfc. Richard Willis, 21, of Larkspur, was held yesterday at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

He was a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Co., 2nd Battalion, 4th Infantry, at Kornwestheim, near Stuttgart, and had served in the Army for one year.

Willis was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Willis of 10 Park Way. The family prefers memorial contributions to a favorite charity.

Use Of Buses, Ferries To Seashore Is Proposed

Use of Golden Gate Bridge District buses and ferries to relieve automobile traffic pressure on Point Reyes National Seashore was proposed yesterday by San Francisco Supervisor Ronald Pelosi.

With most of the 970,000 persons who visited the seashore last year coming by car, he said, the traffic "tended to congest the very park facilities they were coming to visit."

Pelosi, also a director of the bridge district, raised his proposal before a meeting of the full board. It was referred to the transportation committee, which set a meeting at 9:30 a.m. next Friday in toll plaza offices to consider the proposal.

Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum, chairman of the committee, called the early meeting so the district can present its intentions at public hearings later this month on the master plan for the seashore. The National Park Service will hold the hearings Sept. 22 and 23 in the Civic Center, both starting at 9 a.m.

Pelosi, echoing fears raised by conservationists, said "it is imperative that steps be taken now so as to avoid the fate that almost overcame Yosemite."

As a minimum, Pelosi said, the district should provide service from San Francisco to the seashore using ferries to Sausalito and Larkspur which would link with district buses to the seashore.

He noted that the district's planned ferries will be able to go out the Golden Gate and take tourists directly to the seashore. The Coast Guard certificate for the district's current Sausalito ferry does not allow service outside the Golden Gate.

Pelosi stressed the desirability of direct weekend ferry service to the seashore. The National Park Service's master plan also envisions direct ferry service.

The San Francisco supervisor also suggested that bicycle paths link the bridge and the seashore.

Marin City Firehouse Bids High

A new firehouse and sheriff's substation in Marin City will cost considerably more than the $77,000 estimated architects Gerson-Overstreet of Oakland.

Michael A. Chrystal, senior administrative analyst who presided at the bid opening, said the bids will be reviewed and presented to the Marin County Board of Supervisors, probably on Sept. 21.

The apparent low bidder was API Specialty Construction Co. of 110 San Carlos Avenue, San Rafael, which offered to do the job for $92,082.

Two other competitive bids were $94,248 by Al Allen and Son of 25 Buckelew Street, Marin City and $95,160 by M. Worden Builder of 133 Pearlta Avenue, Mill Valley.

Span Board Orders Negotiations For Site To Store Bus Fleet

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, faced with the coming rainy season and the simultaneous arrival of a fleet of 152 buses, yesterday reluctantly authorized the district's attorney to negotiate a lease for a temporary site to store and maintain the fleet.

The district's site on Highway 17 east of the San Rafael Post Office will not be ready for use when the bus system begins operation in December. It may not even be ready for a year, Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring cautioned.

He argued strongly for a temporary lease on the adjacent Ghilotti Brothers property at 517 Jacoby Street, but several directors objected loudly to the asking price — almost $6,200 a month. They suggested other sites be sought.

Luehring insisted, however, that "it's the only one" meeting the district's immediate need. Director Daniel F. Del Carlo of San Francisco agreed, saying the Ghilotti site "is made to order for us."

Director Edwin M. Fraser of Del Norte County, declaring the cost of the lease was "just too damn much," said the district's own site should have been made useable instead.

Luehring noted that the district lost three months waiting for the federal government to approve the 10-acre site for possible inclusion in the district's pending application for a federal grant.

The Ghilotti lease would include two and a half acres and 10,000 feet in the company's warehouse on the site.

The final motion authorizing negotiation for a lease on the Ghilotti site stressed that all available sites also will be considered.

Directors also authorized the staff to investigate the feasibility of a permanent satellite bus transit site of about seven acres near Gnoss Field in Novato. No additional information on this parcel was disclosed.

Staff negotiation for two other sites also was authorized, one in Santa Rosa and one in San Francisco. The Santa Rosa site, about five acres at Coddingtown Airport, also would be a bus transit satellite facility as in Novato.

These two facilities would save the cost of returning all buses to San Rafael at the ends of their runs.

The fourth site was proposed in San Francisco for midday storage of buses at Third and Perry streets. The property is owned by the state, and leased by Jackson Square Garage Inc.

Golden Gate Bridge District Board Also:

FINGER — Denied a $30,000 injury claim by Clayton Carter of Sausalito for a finger he said was damaged when a door on the Sausalito ferry closed on it.

UNIONS —Recognized the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific and the Marine Engineers Benevolent Association as representing ferry crews, and agreed to requests by the unions to leave the crews in union pension benefit systems instead of transferring them to the district's state system, which would cost the men their accumulated union benefits.

SALARIES — Approved a salary schedule totaling about $3.7 million for the bus transit system, which will have 293 employees.

SMART — Authorized a second $25,000 for Richard Smart of San Francisco, the district's special counsel working on its applications for federal funds.

FERRY — Received report from Luehring that a new monthly record of 148,339 was set in August aboard the Sausalito ferry.

FURNITURE — Authorized purchase of office furniture and equipment for the new bus system through the state.

TOLLS — Accepted the proposal of Traffic Classifying Counters of American to furnish a treadle relay logic system for $4,515 to replace the original toll equipment.

TICKETS — Bought 93,300 commute books for the first six months of next year from International Business Machines Corp. for $15,581.

KAISER — Accepted a staff recommendation that Kaiser Engineers' environmental control division be hired for $5,000 to prepare an environmentla impact report on the district's planned ferryboat system.

Land Sale To Be Considered

The Mill Valley School District board will consider at a meeting Monday selling a five-acre site to the Tamalpais Valley Community Services District.

The school board will meet at 8 p.m. at the Park School, 360 East Blithedale Avenue.

Supt. James A. Collins said the Tamalpais Valley property which was bought by the school district a few years ago for a school site is no longer needed for a school and money from the sale could be used for Middle School.

He will use slides to illustrate his talk.

A SEWING machine is handy with seven children and a husband to be kept neat. Vernice Cage and her husband John have opened their Berkeley home to six mentally retarded children as foster parents. The children are on leave from Sonoma State Hospital and spend all their time at the Cage home. The couple also have a 17-year-old daughter who lives at home.

THEIR HOME OVERFLOWS

Foster Parents To Handicapped

By THOMAS C. MILLER.

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)— Sometimes when Vernice Cage takes her six children to the park she is asked, "Are you their nurse?"

"When I don't feel like explaining," Mrs. Cage said in an interview, "I just answer, 'No, they're mine' — which they are really."

MRS. CAGE and her husband John, a postal worker, are foster parents for the six children. The children are on leave from a state hospital in Sonoma but spend all their time at the Cage home. They refer to her as "Mrs. Cage, the lady who takes care of us."

The Cages have three daughters of their own. Two are married. The youngest, 17, still lives at home. The story of how the Cages became foster parents began seven years ago after one of their daughters, then 15, visited the state hospital on a Red Cross field trip.

"We had planned to take county children —orphans — when our daughters were grown and away from home," Mrs. Cage said, "but when daughter came back she was so upset. She said, 'Mother, we must do something to help them.'"

The Cages became certified as foster parents through the Alameda County Department of Social Welfare and asked for two small mentally retarded children.

THEY WERE brought a 12-year-old boy who couldn't talk, wasn't toilet trained, suffered epileptic seizures and appeared to be crippled.

"In two weeks, we found the boy was not crippled," Mrs. Cage said. "It was his improper shoes. We got medication to control his seizures, then we started working on talking and toilet training."

Shortly afterward, an emergency arose at the hospital and 10-year-old twin boys were brought to stay temporarily with the Cages. The twins, now 17, are still there.

Later, the Cages accepted a four-year-old boy, now 10, then a 23-year-old mentally retarded woman and finally a 14-year-old girl, the sister of the youngest boy.

The 23-year-old woman stayed with the Cages almost two years, met another mentally retarded man and married. The couple now lives in nearby Oakland.

"They're doing real well," Mrs. Cage said. "She calls almost once a day and comes to see us every week."

BEFORE THEY decided to become foster parents, the Cages had added two small bedrooms to their modest white stucco house. When the children arrived one bedroom was divided with a wall so that two children could sleep in each room.

"With so many beds around here, the rule in this house is everyone makes up his own bed," Mrs. Cage said as she displayed the rooms. And from the looks of things, the rule is followed.

The children attend special education classes in the public schools, which has allowed Mrs. Cage to become active in community and county projects to aid the mentally retarded.

One of the twins has learned to read and rides a bus to a special workshop for the mentally retarded where they learn crafts and skills.

"WE HAD to teach him to read before he could ride the bus," Mrs. Cage said. "You know if you can read you can find your way around in this world."

Teaching the boy to read was a major accomplishment for the Cages, since he was unable to talk when he came to their home. Mrs. Cage said some of "the professionals" —social workers and hospital officials —had said it would be unlikely for the children to learn to talk and impossible for them to learn to read.

"He wanted to communicate, he just didn't know how," Mrs. Cage said. "I'm not a professional. I can't tell anybody how we did it. We just did it. I think it's the family touch. You know, there's just something about belonging to someone."

MOTHERS' PLIGHT

Family Day Care Centers Overflowing

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — "It is safe to say that the single biggest problem of the working mother — at all economic levels — is adequate care of her children while she is on the job," states the 1969 report of the state Commission on the Status of Women.

The commission reports there are 2,760,000 working women in California. It is estimated 1,035,000 have children under 18 years of age and 388,125 with children under 6.

Licensed family day care homes, private profit-making nurseries, private non-profit centers, state children's centers and Head Start day care, care for 116,943 children of these women. The rest of these women must find in-home care or recruit relatives or friends to care for their children while they work.

REFERRING TO state supported children's centers, William N. Roberts, coordinator for Children's Centers, Bureau of Preschool Educational Programs, said, "There is a great need for expansion of this program. There are now some 400 Children's Centers in California, providing service for some 23,000 children aged two to 14 years."

Roberts explained the program is financed by matching of three federal dollars to every state dollar. He said Assembly bill 2554, a followup to last year's AB 750, will provide several technical changes in the program.

AB 2554, introduced by Assemblyman Jerry Lewis, R-San Bernardino, would give the state authority to establish and maintain preschool children's centers, and group day care programs and administration of all federal programs through the Departments of Social Welfare and Education. It clarifies the basis on which a family should or should not pay fees, clarifies costs, and revises priorities for attendance at children's centers. The measure is before the senate Committee on Education; if passed the Assembly July 30.

TWO OTHER bills would also help alleviate the burden of finding adequate — at reasonable cost — child care.

A bill by Assemblywoman Yvonne W. Brathwaite, D-Los Angeles, would authorize community colleges, state colleges and the University of California to operate children's centers. The bill has passed the Assembly and is currently in the senate committee on finance.

Bill 2050, by Assemblyman Leon D. Ralph, D-Los Angeles, would establish standards to qualify children's centers as laboratories of instruction so that employees and volunteers working in the centers can gain college credits, thus providing more qualified persons to operate centers.

All three of these bills, if passed, will be enhanced by the Welfare Reform Act of 1971, which provides funding for child care.

After Beach Day

When washing beach togs after a day in the water and sun, don't forget yourself. A swim is not a bath. That same salt, chlorine, sun lotion, and perspiration that collects on your suit will clog the pores of your skin, produce blemishes and dull your hair if they're not washed away.

Calls Herself Utah's Only Waterboy

By BRUCE COOK

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Former school teacher Sandy Duncan, 22, calls herself the waterboy of the Utah State University campus.

She's the only female ever hired as a USU groundskeeper and one of her duties is to get the sprinkler system going at 6 a.m. daily.

"I took the job on a dare," says Miss Duncan, who hails from Cheyenne, Wyo.

"I worked in a corner grocery just off campus and some of the men on the grounds crew started kidding me about applying for a job with them."

They never thought she'd do it, but in the spring of 1970 she applied for and got the job and walked into the campus greenhouse where the rest of the crew had gathered before the day's work.

"The minute I crossed the threshhold all heads turned and the silence fell so thick you could have cut it," she said.

"The silent treatment lasted for two or three weeks, then a few men started being friendly privately, but as a group they weren't too accepting."

Gradually, she broke the ice with the rest of them and became a full-fledged member of the watering crew —"an irrigation engineer," as she puts it.

Miss Duncan, a dimpled, smiling graduate of Northern Colorado University at Greeley and a former French teacher in the Cheyenne school system, says students at Utah State frequently ask her if she's a member of the women's liberation movement.

"Hell, no," is her reply.

"I figure they aren't necessarily being rude when they stare at me as I run about campus on my scooter turning water on and off.

"WHEN A person puts himself in a position of being different, he must be ready to have others be astonished; for example, when a guy grows his hair long he has to expect to have people stare."

She also left the grounds crew for a while and took a job with the Weber County Welfare Office at Ogden, Utah, but it didn't last long.

"I couldn't work there any more under the pretense of helping people. It is frightening to see the welfare workers manipulate and rule these welfare clients —making them so humble that they lose all dignity."

Now under a one-year contract at the university, Miss Duncan is undecided about her future but has been thinking about the concept of teaching awareness through films.

"We'd take everyday happenings and put them all together for meaning. The students make their own films," she explained. "This is what I want to do eventually," she said.

Shirley chose Mrs. Cheryl Herndon of San Rafael as her matron of honor and Shirley's twin sister, Mrs. Sharon Zucker of Albany was a bridesmaid. The other bridal attendant was the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Janna Schumacher of San Ramon.

Mark Herdon of San Rafael served as best man. The guests were seated by Darryl Berry of San Ramon and Kensel Schumacher, also of San Ramon.

Mrs. Martin Long Is AFS Chapter President

New president of the American Field Service's Tamalpais Chapter is Mrs. Martin H. Long of Mill Valley, who has been active in the AFS program since 1968, when she and her family were hosts to an Argentine exchange student.

MRS. MARTIN H. LONG
AFS chapter president

Sixty countries participate in the American Field Service program, which exists to promote better understanding throughout the world by means of student exchange. Local chapters, such as Tamalpais, supervise the general well being of foreign students in the community, help select families to act as hosts to these students during the school year and coordinate the selection of local high school students to compete nationally for placement abroad under the program.

Mrs. Long is preparing for the first of the Tamalpais Chapter's fund-raising events this year, the annual flea market to be held Sept. 18 and 19 at the Tamalpais High School gymnasium. The group also has a Christmas candy wreath sale and sponsors the Peacock Gap Antiques Show and Sale in January to raise funds for the program.

The wife of a Mill Valley physician, Alice Gurley Long has been aware of the importance of international understanding since her childhood as an "Army brat" living in various parts of the Western Hemisphere. After high school in Panama, she attended Madison College in Harrisonburg, Va.

The Longs, who have lived in Mill Valley 22 years, are the parents of two daughters, Linda, 20, a sophomore at Chico State College, and Ann, 17, who will attend College of Marin this fall. There are also two horses, four dogs and assorted turtles and fish in the Long household.

Alice Long was a Girl Scout and Camp Fire Girl leader and active in the Parent-Teacher Association. She was made an honorary member of the P-TA for her work as library chairman of Alto School. For the past two years she has been on the Tamalpais High School P-TA board and is past president of the Southern Marin Horseman's Association.

The Longs began taking scuba diving lessons after a trip to Hawaii last winter and have been spending weekends diving on the Monterey Peninsula and in Mendocino County.

Serving with Mrs. Long as officers of the Tamalpais AFS Chapter are Archer Forsythe, vice president; Mrs. William Pemberton, secretary; Irvin Sutley, treasurer, and Mrs. Warren Staiger, membership chairman.

MONTGOMERY WARD

THE GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Better To Ignore Than Fight Back When Someone Bugs You

Several times, when kids have written in about gross teachers they don't get along with, you've implied it's better to quietly earn your grade than fight what you can't change and risk getting failed.

Well, what do you say about a teacher who never misses a chance to poke fun at minority races? When a pregnant white girl quit school to marry her Puerto Rican boy friend, he called it "heir pollution" and some of the class even laughed!

Being Jewish, I get my share of his dirty cuts and I'm not about to sit and take it! I figure an "A" from this creep would be a disgrace, though I could make one if I'd act humble. He'll probably flunk me.

Maybe you don't agree with me, Helen, but I'll bet your daughter Sue does. — FIGHTER

P.S. He never does anything "open" enough to complain to the principal about, so I take revenge by driving him bananas. With his stupidity, it's easy.

DEAR FIGHTER:

And you win — an F, plus a year of make-up work. And this waspish teacher will end up more firmly locked into his prejudices, because you've "proved what he always said about those people." So all fighting gets you is the doubtful satisfaction of skewering a stupid little man who isn't worth your effort.

Maybe I'm just too practical: if you can change things, I say fight; if not, ignore. — HELEN

Okay, Sue, your turn:

SUE'S VIEWS:

DEAR FIGHTER:

Mom has a neat trick: To someone like your teacher, she'd mentally say, "Zap, you don't exist," and then get on with the course. His cuts couldn't hurt because she'd smile and look right through him.

It works for her, but I'm more of a head-on fighter, because there's always the outside chance you can change things. Like for instance I drew two "Fs" in citizenship (and stern words from home) before this teacher and I finally got to understanding each other. This year — big surprise — we're good friends.

Why couldn't you do your work, draw a decent grade, and still smack down stupid prejudices, Fighter? Otherwise, as Mom says, you're only hurting yourself. — SUE

DEAR SUE,

Back in the eighth grade I went with a certain boy and I've always liked him a lot.

We're still friends three years later, but just friends, nothing else. I've learned to accept this.

The problem is I recently heard that someone is spreading the rumor around that he is a fag. I can't believe it and won't! Or can I?

How can I stop this? Should I go to the boy and ask him straight out? — STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED:

If you asked a guy about a rumor like this, you wouldn't gain anything and you might lose his friendship.

Just stand by and keep on being his friend, no matter what — someone he can really talk to.

And don't get so shook. It's kind of a fad to whisper about "who's queer" these days. People don't take it all that seriously. — SUE

DEAR STUMPED:

. . . And at 16, no boy is locked into homosexuality, even though he may have had an experience or two that brought on the whispers. — H.

Choose Colorful Winter Coat Fabrics

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I'll be one of the gals who will certainly need a new coat this fall as you predicted. I'd love to use a beautiful wool but don't know how to choose one that will go with everything and still fit into my budget. Wool seems so expensive.

MRS. J.C.

DEAR MRS. J.C.:

First, remember that a coat is a separate covering and doesn't have to go with everything or anything. It can simply carry itself. Choose a coat pattern that buttons up to the neckline. Use a beautiful colorful fabric that will make everyone who sees you feel good.

Once you have removed your coat, the rest of your apparel is a separate story. The only time you will want to coordinate them is when you plan a definite coat and dress ensemble. These usually have an open neckline and part of the dress shows and coordinates with the coat.

Choose a glorious tweed, plaid, or color that will not only be a joy to wear, a joy for others to see, but also a joy to make. Black, brown, and beige are not practical if they are not becoming to you. You'll find today that red, blue, green, and purple are just as practical. They're also morale boosters as well.

As to the cost of the fabrics — too many women place overemphasis on the price per-yard cost of fabric. They forget the relationship between the cost of the completed garment compared to the cost of a coat you could afford if you bought it ready-made. As an example: if you felt you could spend $75 on a good coat, then proportionately, you could easily afford $15 to $20 a yard for fabric. The lining, buttons and notions would make up the difference.

The real difference is in the finished product. If this coat is well done, it is worth more than $75, and you will now have the luxurious feeling of owning a coat that would have cost $200 or more. What an ego-builder!

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Jack Tschetter, Killarney, Manitoba, Canada is this week's tailor trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"Just wanted to share with your readers another use for my invisible zipper foot. When I tried to put cording around the edges of slipcovers, I found my regular zipper foot simply didn't stitch close enough to the cording. I tried the invisible foot, and it worked like a charm. The cording was basted in place first, then the cording simply slides along in the groove where the zipper normally slides. The needle sews very close to the cording with no guesswork."

DEAR EUICE,

Whenever I use one of the softer knits, the seams always roll and curl up on the inside causing extra bulk. What is your solution?

MRS. K.M.

DEAR MRS. K.M.:

Possibly, you are referring to the soft sweater knits that are so popular today. I would suggest machine stitching the seams with a straight stitch on the seam allowance. (Be sure to check the lengthwise stretch.) After the seam has been stitched, bring the two seam allowances together and zig-zag close to your seam allowance. Cut away the excess beyond this zig-zag stitching, you will have a finished sweater type seam for your garment

Unfortunately, some sewing machines have tension problems that cause the seams to draw up when zig-zagged which can distort the shape of your garment. With the wide variety of knit stitches and the combination of fibers, it's best to pretest any stitching you are intending to use just to see how it works on the particular fabric you are currently working with.

ENDANGERED SPECIES

The Bald Eagle Becoming A Rarity

By DARRYL STEWART
Toronto Telegram Syndicate
(Fifth of 12 articles)

The continued existence of the bald eagle as a species is seriously threatened. At one time, it bred extensively over North America — but now it is regarded as one of our rarest birds.

In earlier time, every lake or bay must have had its pairs of bald eagles. But today many Americans have never seen their national bird. The overall census of bald eagles conducted by the National Audubon Society in 1963 was given as 3,547 — and their numbers have been steadily dwindling since that date. Only in the northern parts of Canadian provinces are they now to be found in any numbers at all.

The decline in the bald eagle population was originally brought about by indiscriminate slaughter. The eagle was not only shot by marksmen for sport without the benefit of protective laws, but was also relentlessly pursued by egg-collectors.

Extensive logging has been another contributing factor in its elimination. Unlike the golden eagle which is a bird of our western mountain regions, the bald eagle prefers to build its nest near the top of very tall trees near water. With the clearing of forest trees, the bald eagle began to disappear.

Except for the almost-extinct California condor, the bald eagle is the largest and most magnificent of all our birds of prey. The female, usually three or four inches larger than her mate, may attain a length of 30 inches and sport a 7½ foot wingspan. The adult bird is quite unmistakable by virtue of its majestic size and white head and tail.

Bald Eagle

However, it is not until the bird has attained its fourth year that it acquires the adult plumage. Until that time, it is a sombre dark-brown and is then not easily distinguishable at a distance from the golden eagle.

The bald eagle was adopted as the national emblem of the United States by act of the Second Continental Congress of 1782 (much to the protests of Benjamin Franklin). However, this magnificent bird was not afforded protection by Federal law until 1940. Its provisions at the time did not apply to Alaska.

In 1917, the Legislature of Alaska started a campaign against the American eagle by paying a bounty of fifty cents a bird. These bounties were sponsored by the territorial government itself in retaliation against the bird which was accused of robbing the country of its fish supply. From that date until the present time, the number of bald eagles killed for bounty in Alaska is believed to be no less than 100,000. They now are seldom seen in vast areas in this territory where they once abounded.

It was only after its population had been drastically reduced that investigation proved that the bald eagle is too lazy to catch live fish when it can pick up dead ones.

Also, it is a poor fisherman. Any live fish that it can manage to capture are usually spawned-out salmon which require no real fishing at all. At long last in 1952, the bald eagle was granted full protection in Alaska. Anyone today found harming an eagle or its nest is subject to fines up to $500. This protection, however, may have come too late.

On the occasions when the bald eagle does have a taste for fresh fish, it will harass the far more skillful fish-catching osprey, forcing it to drop its catch. As the fish falls from the clutches of the osprey, the eagle swoops down under it and retrieves it before it hits the water. It was this trait of piracy in the bird's makeup that caused Benjamin Franklin to oppose the choice of the bald eagle for the national emblem.

Eagles have always been regarded as emblems of power and majesty, so our national bird may still be admired by those who are not too familiar with its habits. In flight, with its pure-white head and tail glistening in the sunlight, it makes an inspiring sight and adds grandeur to any scene.

The bald eagle is a harmless species, its principal food being dead fish. When fish are scarce, the bald eagle may supplement its diet with crabs. It will occasionally feed upon mice, rats, other small mammals, waterfowl, and (very seldom) its impressive size, the bird itself weighs no more than 13 pounds and is virtually incapable of lifting any weight in excess of eight or 10 lbs. Experiments have demonstrated this conclusively.

Whenever a bald eagle is nesting in a particular area, it is always apparent due to the immense size of its next. These nests (used year after year by the same couple) are refurnished each year with new layers of branches. As a result, the nests often reach astounding proportions.

One nest which was used for 20 or 30 years near St. Petersburg, Fla., is reported to have reached a height of 20 feet and a width of almost 10 feet. But the size of this well-established nest is not really so surprising, since the eagles mate for life and are often long-lived. Some even attain the amazing age of 100 years.

Today, the greatest peril facing the bald eagle is the pollution of rivers, streams and coastal bays which kills off the fish. Bald eagles, being largely scavengers, consume large quantities of these poisoned dead fish that are thrown up onto river banks and coastlines. The fish are contaminated with DDT and other chlorinated hydrocarbons.

These pesticides, originally sprayed on nearby trees and shrubs, are blown by the wind or travel with falling leaves along coastlines. They are then absorbed by the plankton, algae and other minute animal organisms in the waterways. They are in turn eaten by the fish on which the bald eagle feeds. This accumulation of poisons consumed by the bald eagle results in a sterilizing effect on its eggs, eventually leading to the death of the adult bird itself.

One recent survey conducted in the States of Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, and Delaware, revealed 16 nests known to be active. Of these 16 nests, only three eaglets were produced.

Another incident involves an adult eagle on Jamestown Island, Virginia, where the bird was picked up under its nest. It was suffering from tremors, a condition typical of pesticide poisoning.

By virtue of being a scavenger, the bald eagle plays a most important role in the balance of nature. Scavengers are nature's garbage collectors. Without them, the earth would become a breeding place for disease, and plague would certainly run rampant. As the bald eagle is also a predator, it is doubly useful (it frequently preys on small rodents). It would be sad indeed if we were ever to lose such a bird.

However, unless the use of pesticide poisons is more strongly controlled in the future, the emblem of the United States could well become the emblem of extinction.

Target Board Sets Fund Raising Talks

Board composition and fund raising events will be among topics discussed at a special meeting of the Southern Marin Target Area board of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the area office at Manzanita Center.

According to secretary Shirley Roberts, the board will also elect a new chairman at the meeting.

Abernathy Claims United States 'Sick'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Ralph D. Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, yesterday termed the United States a "sick" nation and charged President Nixon had created "a climate of opposition" to busing of school children.

Abernathy, who succeeded Dr. Martin Luther King in leadership of the group he heads, held a brief news conference before addressing the 91st convention of the Baptists of America.

"Today's issues are so confused," he said, "and America is so sick. The Nixon administration is so opposed to our ideals that the national administration no longer walks with us and no longer are our supporters."

Abernathy said the current convention of the black branch of the Baptist Church was currently the "best support of our moral cause." He said the organization he represented was in "a grave financial crisis" and if the group was to live "then black people must support it."

Questioned on the current school busing problem, Abernathy was critical of the administration's stand.

"The President has created the climate for the opposition to busing," he said. "Those who follow his views have been given moral support to protest. Mr. Nixon very seldom says anything right, and seldom does he do anything that's right."

"We certainly will welcome the Black Panthers," he said. "We would be delighted to have our black brothers come to Atlanta, an all-American city... It is possible that our group will be taken over and solve our financial difficulties."

Abernathy said the country certainly could not have quality education for all unless the busing program was fulfilled, but "because of housing, we still have black ghettos and only white students will be bused while black students will still be walking."

He was asked about a black man's chance of becoming a vice president and replied "in this sick nation a black man does not have a chance."

Guilty Pleas To Reduced Counts

Barbara Sanford, 21, and Daniel Ross Wood, 24, both of Sausalito, have pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to reduced misdemeanor charges of possessing marijuana.

They are to be sentenced Oct. 22.

The pair was arrested Aug. 10 in a raid by drug abuse agents on their houseboat, Prospero, anchored off Gate 5, Sausalito.

Agents said they seized about $7,800 worth of hashish, a small amount of dexadrine and one marijuana plant in the raid.

They were originally charged with felony counts of possessing and cultivating pot and possessing dangerous drugs, but the charges were reduced by the district attorney's office which reported a witness needed for prosecution of the case had disappeared.

Evangelist Services Slated Next Month

The fall evangelist services of the First Baptist Church of San Rafael will be held from Oct. 15 to Oct. 24 on the theme of "Christ, the One Way."

Rev. Danny Coker, pastor of San Francisco's 19th Avenue Baptist Church, will be guest evangelist. Services will be held nightly at 7:30.

FIRE BLAZES ON SANTA VENETIA HILL

TWO RELIGIOUS GROUPS

Feud Over Mideast Policies

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Two of America's most distinguished religious organizations are feuding publicly over U. S. policy in the Middle East.

Involved are the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC), a Quaker organization long noted for its objective view toward current political problems and the American Jewish Committee, equally distinguished and considered one of the most eloquent spokesmen for the organized Jewish community in the United States.

Touching off the feud was a study done for the AFSC and published as "Search For Peace in the Middle East."

Although the Friends' study was undertaken in 1968 –"with the urging of both Jews and Arabs," according to the AFSC —it was not published until last year and only recently raised any eyebrows.

Now the AJC, in cooperation with the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, has published a lengthy critique of the Quaker study sharply questioning the Friends' objectivity and accusing the study of being filled with "blatant bias."

The two religious organizations, both generally liberal on political policy questions, historically have frequently collaborated with each other.

But the AJC report said the Friends study "is harmful to the cause of a just and lasting peace" and "endangers the previous good relationship between Jews and the Quaker community ..."

The Friends working party which prepared the study, headed by Landrum R. Bolling, president of Earlham college in Richmond, Ind., seemed to be acutely aware of the emotional quicksand involved in any attempt to assess the Middle East situation.

"We wish to make clear to all, particularly to our countrymen of Jewish and Arab backgrounds, that our position is one of concern for both peoples and is based on the conviction that the rights and interests of both must be recognized and reconciled on some just and peaceful basis," the Friends said.

The study added: "Many on each side will denounce any comment which does not support their position, on the grounds that 'if you are not for us, you are against us.'"

But the Jewish critique emphasized that it felt the Friends—concerned about what they considered pro-Israeli distortions in the West and particularly in the United States was blatantly pro-Arab.

"Repeated references in the Quaker report uncritically accept the Arab argument that Israel was imposed on the area by Western states guilty of anti-semitism to solve, at Arab expense, a problem Arabs never created," the Jewish study said.

It added that this argument was a false "propaganda claim" and in accepting that version of the origin of Israel, "The Quaker report furthers the Arab line."

The Jewish analysis charges the Quakers with a "strategy of distortion" in which they seek to "portray the Arab countries as innocent victims of Western guilt and the existence of Israel as an injustice against the Arabs."

These differences on the background of the Middle East conflict result in sharply differing views of how a peaceful settlement might be reached for the area.

For example, the Quakers suggest that the Israeli government "must give forthright assurances on eventual withdrawal from occupied territories as part of an overall peace settlement and should attempt to refute accusations of further expansionist aims."

Tied to this suggestion is one that the Arab governments "must declare their acceptance of the fact of Israel's existence as a sovereign state and must make clear their willingness to live in a condition of true peace with Israel."

The Jews see in these two points an anti-Israeli position. They said that since Israel has claimed in the past it does not seek territorial expansion, the first argument amounts to a "w h e n-d i d-y ou-stop-beating-your-wife?" syndrome.

As for the second Quaker proposal, the AJC study said: "In contrast to the specific demand made on Israel for giving up territory and abandoning its goal of secure and defensible borders, the Arab government are not required to make any substantive commitment whatever."

The Jewish team that prepared the critique was most sharply critical of the Quaker proposal—generally being followed by the United States in its peace initiative—that the Big Four powers play a major role in guaranteeing peace in the area.

"There is no reason to expect that the Big Four could or would guarantee a true peace in the Middle East," the study said. It pointed to the Soviet Union's obvious pro-Arab leanings and said France and England were primarily concerned with "shoring up what is left of their influence among the Arab states ..."

In general, the Jewish critique seemed to conclude the Quaker search for peace was less a search for peace than for American friends for the Arab world.

For the Quakers, the Jewish critique seemed to underline their judgment that "the emotionally overcharged atmosphere in the Middle East must be cleared" if peace is to be achieved.

If, as seems certain, neither of the studies will quickly resolve the Middle East situation, they do suggest a great deal more dialogue will be needed before any religious consensus emerges on the Middle East crisis.

OF MAN AND GOD

Schweitzer's Look Into Deeper Spiritual Life

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The most shocking thing Jesus ever said —from the viewpoint of conventional wisdom — is that it's a blessing to suffer.

Many thoughtful men, from the time of the Greek Stoics until now, have looked upon pain and bereavement as inevitable aspects of human existence to be borne with patience and courage.

But Jesus went much farther than that. He did not teach mere resignation to life's hurts. He said: "Happy are those who mourn ... How blest are the sorrowful."

Jesus was not a masochist who took pleasure in pain. It is clear from the gospels that he avoided hardship whenever he could do so without shirking his duty or compromising his principles. He also tried whenever possible to ameliorate the suffering of others.

So, when he said it is blessed to suffer, he did NOT mean that we should go out of our way to incur miseries. He was simply saying that when trouble comes upon us anyway, desite all our efforts to avoid it, we may find in it a hidden benediction.

The late Dr. Albert Schweitzer, one of the greatest Christians of this or any other century, regarded this teaching as "the lodestar of Jesus' life."

Before he went to Africa to serve as a medical missionary, Schweitzer was pastor of the Church of St. Nicolai in Strasbourg. He frequently preached sermons on the creative aspect of suffering. Some of these previously unpublished sermons have been collected in a book called "Reverence for Life" (Harper & Row) which I commend to everyone who seeks to deepen his spiritual life.

Schweitzer reminds us that the gospel offers no encouragement to the popular belief that a person can purchase Divine protection against suffering by being "good." Quite the contrary. "The Savior suffered more than anyone" and if we truly follow his way, he will "draw us with him into his suffering." Misfortune is "part of what it means to be a Christian."

Why?

"Because suffering is exaltation. Just as Jesus was exalted on the cross, so we too must suffer in order to be exalted above the world.

"In pain we discover the existence of something higher than earthly happinesss and physical contentment. Then we can gradually detach ourselves from those things which hold our senses captive ... we set our eyes on the eternal."

But Jesus was not speaking only of "pie in the sky" when he said that those who suffer will be comforted. The blessing to be found in pain is a right-there, right-now blessing, which takes place in the very midst of suffering.

And what is its nature? Schweitzer suggests that the answer can be found by looking back at the times in your life in which you were calm and contented and everything seemed to be going right for you.

"If the whole of your life had been a succession of hours like those, do you know what would have become of you? You would become selfish, hard-hearted, lonely, without regard for higher things, for the pure, for God — and you would never have felt blessedness.

"When did it first dawn on you that we men don't live unto ourselves? When did the blessedness of compassion bring comfort to you? In suffering.

"Where did your heart come close to those who were so distant and cold to you? In suffering.

"Where did you catch a glimpse of the higher destiny of your life? In suffering.

"Where did you feel God was near to you? In suffering."

Schweitzer concludes with this advice:

"Don't vex your mind by trying to explain the suffering you have to endure in this life. Don't think that God is punishing you or disciplining you or that He has rejected you. Even in the midst of your suffering you are in His kingdom. You are always His child, and He has His protecting arm around you...

"Does a child understand everything his father does? No —but he can confidently nestle in his father's arms and feel perfect happiness, even while tears glisten in his eyes, because he is his father's child."

HISTORIC EVENT

Kol Shofar To Rededicate Torah From Czechoslovakia

Part of the Jewish heritage of Czechoslovakia will become intertwined into the history of Congregation Kol Shofar of Marin next Friday.

At that time the congregation will rededicate a Sifre Torah (Book of Scrolls) at 8:30 p.m. services which was once used by a Czechoslovakian synagogue destroyed by the German army more than 30 years ago.

This Torah was once part of a collection, assembled by the Nazis, and later taken over by Prague Museum. In 1964 1,564 of these high religious scrolls arrived at the Westminister Synagogue in London. Last summer the task of recording each scroll was completed and stored in specially constructed racks.

Through the efforts of Sam Margoliash of San Anselmo, a member of the congregation, who visited the London synagogue, the Torah was obtained for Kol Shofar.

Officiating at the rededication service will be Cantor Robert Scherr.

Polish Church Having Emigration Worries

BERLIN, East Germany (LWF) — Immense difficulties are being created for the Evangelical Church of Augsburg Confession in Poland as emigration continues from Poland to West Germany, according to the bishop of the 80,000-member church, Rt. Rev. Andrzej Wantula of Warsaw.

The emigration is a result of agreements reached last year between the Polish and West German governments which permit German families still living in Poland to reunite with their families in West Germany.

Writing in "Evangelisches Pfarrerblatt" — a monthly bulletin for East German Protestant clergymen — the 65-year-old prelate noted that due to emigration of Lutherans from Poland, church administrative units must be constantly restructured while the existence of other units is threatened. The church reported a loss of one-fifth of its membership this year over 1970.

In a situation report for the clergy periodical, Bishop Wantula also described his church's tense relationship with the dominant Roman Catholic Church of the country.

Following World War II, he said, the Catholic Church seized Lutheran property in the former German territories which had been ceded to Poland.

The seizure was accomplished by the Catholic Church under the pretext that the properties were goods left behind by the defeated Germans, Bishop Wantula revealed.

Subsequently, in order to regain much-needed church buildings, the Lutheran chancery in Warsaw initiated a series of "laborious court proceedings" against the Catholic Church, for which in many cases no verdict has yet been delivered, the Polish Lutheran leader said.

The current dwindling membership within Poland's Lutheran church also presents "obstacles of a material nature," Bishop Wantula wrote.

Relations between the two denominations have been so strongly influenced by the touchy legal proceedings in the courts that no notable rapprochement has come about between the Catholic and Lutheran churches in Poland.

Bishop Wantula said that his church "represents a conservative and orthodox position within Lutheranism" and that "the devoutness of the faithful people and their religiosity have been influenced by a pietistic spirit."

In a statistical profile of the Polish Lutheran church, the prelate reports that there are presently 123 parishes and 229 preaching places.

Rodef Sholom High School Series Set

Congregation Rodef Sholom will inaugurate an evening high school program, beginning Oct. 5.

Meeting each Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. at the temple, 170 North San Pedro Road, five special calsses will be offered, according to Aaron Lor, education director.

"The Jewish Scene Today," will be offered to tenth graders from 7 to 8 p.m., directed by Hal Friedman. The course will trace the history of the Holocaust, its later repercussions and the American Jewish involvement in and with Israel.

Also at the same time a one-hour course in Hebrew reading, writing and conservation will be taught by Lor for students in the upper three grades of high school.

Rabbi David Davis will lead a course of junior and seniors (7 to 8 p.m.) on Jewish religious ideas. An hour later Davis will offer tenth graders a course dealing with Jewish values and ethics while Friedman will give instruction to juniors and seniors on the philosophy of Judaism. Works of Martin Buber, Mordecai Kaplan and Arbraham Heschel will be among those explored.

Responsible Pupils

NEW YORK (UPI)—Making student responsibility and self-discipline a part of the educational process can increase the operating capacities of school facilities while raising the morale and productivity of teachers and students, reports Educational Facilities Laboratories (EFL).

Gallinas CSD Forms Youth Commission

Gallinas Village Community Services District board has established a youth commission and will open a youth center at the Gallinas Village Shopping Center later this month.

The board Thursday night voted to establish a 10-member youth commission to act as an advisory board. Members will include two directors from the service district, two from the Gallinas Village Improvement Association and six teen-agers to be selected by Teen-Agers in Action, a new youth group in the area.

According to board secretary Marguerite F. Clark, the board has leased a former restaurant at the shopping center on Adrian Way for the teens to use as a drop-in center.

The room measures 20 by 40 and will be furnished and decorated by the teen group. Teen-Agers in Action already have helped the board clean up the new center, Mrs. Clark said, and earned $180 last week by holding rummage sale. The money will be put toward stereo equipment.

The service board, with an annual budget of approximately $30,000, has allotted $3,300 to pay for the rent for the center and a part-time coordinator, Mrs. Clark reported.

Reception Set To Welcome Home Marin Troupe

The College of Marin theatrical troupe, which was the hit of the Edinburgh, Scotland, Festival will be welcomed home Monday at a gala reception at the Oakland International Airport.

The company is due to arrive from England at 7 p.m. The reception will be held in the terminal's second floor lobby, featuring Prince Charles Bagpipe Band.

All friends of the college's drama department are invited to attend, it was announced.

Seashore Discussion Set Monday

Marin County Planning and the Parks and Recreation commission will meet jointly Monday morning to thrash out a policy statement on the master plan for Point Reyes Seashore.

The meeting will start at 9 a.m. on the third floor of the Civic Center.

The parks and recreation commissioners are already on record as favoring redesignating the seashore as a national park. The planning commissioners will add their recommendations, and the joint statement will go to the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

When the seashore discussion is completed, the parks and recreation commissioners will leave, and the planning commissioners will continue with their regular Monday agenda.

Bike Accident Injures Boy

A 10-year-old San Rafael boy was injured Thursday in a bike-auto accident on Fourth Street, police reported yesterday.

According to police, Michael Dean Stephenson of 58 Arquello Circle, going east on his bicycle, turned in front of a car driven by Sam Bert Suhrke, 71, of 8½ Garden Avenue, causing the accident.

Stephenson was thrown from his bike by the impact of the collision. He was treated at Marin General Hospital for cuts and bruises.

A Project For Learning About Laws

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — Working with schools from kindergarten through high school, the State Bar and the University of California are laying the foundation for a six-year project to increase respect for law.

The project: "Law in a Free Society."

First cooperating schools are in areas around San Diego, Los Angeles, Fresno, San Francisco Bay cities, and Sacramento.

Working with them will be citizens' advisory groups, local bar associations, school systems, and educational specialists.

Finances for the first year — $70,000 — have been supplied by the California Council on Criminal Justice, the State Bar of California, and the San Diego County Bar Association.

Project director Charles N. Quigley of the UCLA Extension Committee on Civic Education will work with citizens groups and the law schools of the University to gather, select, and test out curriculum materials and techniques.

After a thorough evaluation and revision, they will be offered to all schools.

Only One Bid On Four Houses

Only one bid of $51.03 was received for all four houses which are to be removed from Point Reyes National Seashore, according to the San Francisco office of the General Services Administration.

Edward Beck, realty officer, said the bid was made by a B. Sellick of South San Francisco. Sellick would have to pay to have the house removed.

Because the bid was so low, Beck said there is a possibility the bid may be rejected. He said a decision will be made Wednesday.

The houses range in size from 825 square feet to 1,812 square feet and are located on seashore property, Beck said.

Flying In Private Planes More Risky

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—It is 45 times more dangerous to fly in a private plane in Denmark than by commercial airliner, says the Danish Air Authority.

In 1970, five persons were killed and 45 planes wrecked in private plane accidents while commercial airlines and charter services combined had one plane wrecked with no deaths or injuries.

Momentum And Magic—Dodgers Have It, Giants Don't

By STEVE WILSTEIN
UPI Sports Writer

Momentum? Lucky Breaks? Magic? Whatever it is, the Los Angeles Dodgers have it and the San Francisco Giants don't.

The Giants still hold first place in the National League's Western Division by 3 1-2 games, though the way things have been going that may be little more than consolation on a rainy day.

With the bases full in the top of the ninth inning Maury Wills rolled a single into short left field to drive in Wes Parker, breaking a 2-2 tie and setting off a four-run explosion that gave the Dodgers their fifth straight victory, 6-2, over the San Diego Padres Friday night.

With two on in the bottom of the 11th, after a 2:19 rain delay and six hours after the game began, Hank Aaron rocked the Giants' hopes with a blast into the right field stands, his 40th of the year.

It was the 10th triumph for the Dodgers in their last 12 games. It was the sixth loss in a row for the Giants. The two teams will meet each other for a two-game set next Monday and Tuesday in San Francisco, their last encounter this year.

In the ninth inning the Dodgers sent eight men to the plate and the Padres used four pitchers in an effort to halt the four-run rally.

The game in Atlanta was even more maddening. San Francisco took a 5-4 lead in the top of the 11th when Ken Henderson scored from third on a balk by Jim Nash. The game had gone into extra innings with the score tied at 3-3 but both teams pushed runs across in the 10th.

However, the Braves quickly put two runners on in the bottom of the 11th when pinch-hitter Jim Breazeale singled and Felix Millan walked. The umpires then called time and play did not resume until almost 2:00 a.m. (EDT).

Ralph Garr struck out but Aaron connected on a 2-0 pitch from Jerry Johnson and sliced it over the fence for his 632nd career homer. Aaron also set a National record of seven seasons hitting 40-or-more homers. The previous record was held by Willie Mays.

In other National League games, Montreal edged Pittsburgh 3-2 in 11 innings, St. Louis nipped Chicago 8-7 in 12innings, New York beat Philadelphia 4-3 and Houston blanked Cincinnati 1-0.

Bob Bailey singled home Rusty Staub, who had singled and gone to third on a base hit by Bobby Wine, in the 11th inning to hand John Strohmayer the victory after pitching only one inning of relief for the Expos.

Joe Torre and Ted Simmons hit run-scoring hits with two out in the 12th inning to lead the Cards over Chicago to their fifth victory in the last six games.

Matty Alou started the Cardinals' rally when he singled with two out and stole second. Torre followed, singled to score Alou and Simmons doubled to score Torre.

Jerry Koosman and Danny Frisella combined on a nine-hitter as the Mets moved into third place in the Eastern Division race. Koosman's victory, his sixth against nine losses, nudged the Mets a half game ahead of the Cubs.

Jack Billingham pitched a two-hitter for the Astros and picked up his third shutout of the season in Houston's victory over the Reds.

A's Bullpen Reaches Peak; Magic Number Down To 6

Best Relief Job Of Year For Oakland

OAKLAND (UPI)—It was without a doubt one of the best performances by a bullpen crew this season.

The crew, made up of Darold Knowles, Jim Grant, Rollie Fingers and Bob Locker, held the Minnesota Twins to four hits over nine innings after John Odom was bombed without getting a man out Friday night to give the runaway Oakland A's a 5-4 victory.

"This was a satisfying performance all the way around," said manager Dick Williams. "These guys have been doing it all season long but this had to be the icing on the cake. I can't remember a better performance by any bullpen this year."

A single by pinch-hitter Angel Mangual and a sacrifice fly by Bert Campaneris drove in two ninth inning runs to pull it off and as a result reduced the A's division title-clinching magic number to six.

Singles by Cesar Tovar, Rod Carew and Tony Oliva and Harmon Killebrew's 23rd homer rocked Odom for four runs before he could retire a batter but Knowles came on to give up another hit to Leo Cardenas and then hung on three scoreless innings before turning the ball over to Jim Grant.

Grant, Fingers and Locker added two scoreless innings each with Locker gaining credit for the victory, his fifth in six decisions.

Gene Tenace started the A's ninth inning rally off reliever Hal Haydel with a double. Dick Green bunted toward first and when Killebrew elected to head off Tenace at third both runners were safe. Mangual singled sharply off second baseman Carew's glove as Tenace scored and Green raced to third. Campaneris' fly to medium center then scored Green with the winner.

A single by Reggie Jackson and a two-base boot of the blow by Steve Brye plus Sal Bando's sacrifice fly netted the A's their first run in the fourth and a single by Jackson and Mike Epstein's 7th homer in the sixth closed the gap to 4-3.

To show the depth of the Oakland relief staff Fingers now hasn't given up a run in five of his last six outings covering 8 2-3 innings; Knowles has not been scored on in his last six outings over 7 2-3 innings, Locker has given up just one run over the last 16 1-3 innings he has worked.

Cinderella Back To School; King, Casals In U.S. Final

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — A demure Chris Evert, Cinderella of the tennis world, licked her wounds today enroute home to school after Mrs. Billie Jean King ended the 16-year-old's 46 match victory streak with a 6-3, 6-2 trouncing in the semi-finals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships yesterday.

"She just overpowered me. Nothing could go wrong for her," Miss Evert smiled. "I'm sorry it all had to end. It was just wonderful. I have to go back to school now."

Meanwhile, Mrs. King walked into the finals with San Francisco's Rosie Casals, a 6-4, 6-3 winner over Kerry Melville yesterday. Mrs. King commented on her own victory: "I stayed back and beat her. I didn't want to give her any angles to play."

Asked if she felt like a villain before a pro-Evert, near-capacity throng, Mrs. King replied, "The crowd was just wonderful. I almost fainted when, in the first set, they applauded both of us."

Jim Evert held another view, regarding his daughter's play against Mrs. King. "She played as good as she could today, and Billie Jean was simply great. I think Chris learned a great deal from the match."

Miss Evert agreed and added, "In a way it was good for me to lose. It'll help me buckle down the next time."

Miss Casals observed that she didn't care who her final opponent would be. If it had been Miss Evert, Miss Casals quipped, "We'll just have to turn her back into a pumpkin and send her away."

She didn't have to; Mrs. King did. With the woman's semis aside, attention was focused on the Sunday King-Casals clash. Mrs. King is favored in that go, on the strength of her 9-1 mark won-lost against Miss Casals this year.

The men had a brief moment on stage, when second seeded Smith completed the quarter finals by putting down Marxy Riessen, 7-6, 6-2, 7-6. Smith, in his first real test of the tournament, dominated play despite the two tie break sets. He won the first set by coming from 2-4 to win on his own three final serves, clinched the match by winning the third set tie break, five points to one.

Should Ashe and Okker survive today's matches, it would set up a replay of the 1968 championships, in which Ashe won in five sets, but Okker walked off with the first prize money of $14,000. Ashe was an amateur then.

Giants Give Manager Fox $10,000 Anti-Freeze Hike

ATLANTA (UPI)—The San Francisco Giants, saying they were waiting until President Nixon declared an end to the wage-price freeze, have settled rumors about the future of Charlie Fox by re-hiring the manager for 1972 for "a substantial increase in salary."

Jerry Donovan, assistant to Giants president Horace Stoneham, made the announcement Friday at a downtown hotel. Donovan said agreement with Fox had been reached in June and the players were informed of the situation two or three weeks ago.

"Mr. Stoneham showed that he thought of Fox back in June," Donovan said. "He would have made the agreement public earlier but he wanted to wait until President Nixon declared an end to the wage-price freeze."

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed, but it was reported that Fox jumped from $25,000 to $35,000.

Fox, who took over for Clyde King in May of 1970, said he was happy with his new contract and already is looking forward to next year, although he added "there are a few things we have to take care of right now."

Sausalito Skippers 1-2 In Bay Regatta

Two Sausalito residents, Knud Wibroe and Al Blair, were running one-two going into today's final races of the Knarr Class International Regatta on San Francisco Bay.

Wibroe, San Francisco Yacht Club representative who stayed in contention throughout the week, finally eased into the lead by nipping Belvedere's Richard Griffith of the SFYC by one second over a 12-mile course in yesterday's action. Despite a hefty 10-25 knot wind battering the sails, Wibroe steered to a comfortable 10.7 point lead over erstwhile pacesetter Blair of Tiburon's Corinthian Y.C. At the midway mark, Blair had a commanding six-point lead. He dropped five markers Thursday and surrendered the lead yesterday, no thanks to a dismal 11th place finish.

Consistent Terry Anderlini of San Mateo, a SFYC member, remained in the battle, 15 points behind in the fourth slot, while defending champion Niels Johansen of Denmark was a distant ninth, 31.7 digits behind.

VULNERABLE KICKOFF COVERAGE

49er Coach Cracks Whip

Vowing to improve their vulnerable kickoff coverage, the San Francisco 49ers began preparing in earnest for next Sunday's National Football League opener in Atlanta against the Falcons.

Coach Dick Nolan, admittedly piqued over the 103-yard, game-deciding runback by the Los Angeles Ram cornerback Gene Howard Thursday night, promised, "We're going to drill every day on kick-off return coverage."

The four-year veteran's shocker boosted the host Rams to an insurmountable 23-6 lead and an eventual 23-20 triumph.

Yesterday, Nolan was still brooding over that play. However, he can ill afford to ponder the pre-season finale, particularly in view of the upcoming contest against the pesky Falcons.

As is Atlanta Coach Norm Van Brocklin's wont, he had his club "up" for last fall's 49er invasion which resulted in a 21-20 Falcon upset. Prospector kicker Bruce Gossett remembers the game well, for it was his missed field goal in the last 19 seconds which enabled the hosts to claim the surprise victory.

Gossett and his group want revenge, and they will attempt to get it with a healthy 40-man group next Sunday. No major injuries were reported in the exhibition-ending encounter which dropped the 49er "no-count" won-lost-tied log to 3-2-1. However, rookie running back Joe Orduna of Nebraska sprained his left knee. Before acquiring his wound, Orduna made the most of his first real chance to carry the ball by churning out 33 yards in four carries.

Cedrick "Nasty" Hardman, the second-year defensive end, was held out of the Ram row to facilitate a hamstring muscle pull recovery. "He could have played, but there was no need to jeopardize him for Atlanta," explained Paul Wiggin, defensive line coach.

He added that the 49ers were "tired, mentally and physically" following the Los Angeles Coliseum clash; but today the former Cleveland Brown defensive end greeted back ends Carter Campbell, Bill Belk, Tommy Hart and Hardman, plus tackles Stan Hindman, Charley Krueger, Earl Edwards and Sam Silas.

This eight-strong brigade is counted on to blunt the powerful Falcon running game, featuring Bill "Cannonball" Butler. In the third game of 1970, he led a ground assault which pierced the highly regarded San Francisco defensive line enough to fashion the 21-20 cliffhanger.

Hoping to prevent any reoccurence of that type of performance, Wiggin intently drilled his troups today to contain Butler and scrambling quarterback Bob Berry, while Nolan feverishly worked over a shell-shocked kickoff coverage conglomerate.

The coaches know that if the 49ers are to retain the hard-earned Western Division, National Football Conference, title, San Francisco must whip immediate rivals Atlanta, the Rams and New Orleans.

Marin Baseball Team Organized

A newly-organized semi-professional baseball team to be known as the Marin A's will hold its first tryout session tomorrow, 10:30 a.m., at Albert Park in San Rafael, it was announced today by sponsor-manager Peter Maggi Jr.

"We'll play a winter schedule of night games in San Rafael," said Maggi, announcing that tryouts are open to Marin County athletes aged 17 and older.

NO FAIR CATCH — St. Louis Cardinal cornerback Roger Wherli (22) and the Cleveland Browns' Charles Hall were entangled while a fumble bounded away in the second quarter of the host Cards' 27-13 win last night. The Cardinals, who bobbled the ball on a fair catch signal off a Browns' punt, recovered.

Raiders Out To Snap Colt Jinx

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) —The Oakland Raiders would like to add a little icing to their pre-season cake tonight when they close out their most successful exhibition season against the Baltimore Colts.

Despite a glittering 4-1 exhibition record, the Raiders have a double incentive to whip the Colts. Baltimore beat Oakland in the AFC championship game in January and went on to nudge Dallas in the Super Bowl.

In addition, the Raiders have never beaten the Colts in four meetings.

Coach John Madden of the Raiders will throw running backs Marv Hubbard, Pete Banaszak, Don Highsmith and rookie Clarence Davis at the Colts who own a 3-3 pre-season mark.

Madden will probably give veteran quarterback Daryle Lamonica his longest playing time of the season. That's because Madden wants Lamonica to round into shape for the league opener against New England next week and the Raiders may need an experienced signal-caller to outsmart the Colts intricate zone defense.

"They're noted as a zone coverage team," said Madden. "But it's not just a zone, it's a number of zones."

Ken Stabler has been doing most of the quarterbacking so far for Oakland and has performed admirably.

Bob Brown, the Raiders' 290-pound offensive tackle, has been trying to shake off a knee injury and may see limited action against Bubba Smith.

Colt quarterback Earl Morrall also has a quartet of nifty running backs behind him. They include veterans Tom Matte and Norm Bulaich and rookies Don McCauley of North Carolina and Don Nottingham of Kent State.

Wide receiver Eddie Hinton, who has caught 14 passes for 245 yards, will put a lot of pressure on Oakland's defensive secondary.

Favorite targets of Lamonica and Stabler will be Raymond Chester, Fred Biletnikoff and Rod Sherman.

Warriors High On Draftee; Oregon's Casanova Retires

NEW YORK — The Golden State Warriors have selected Cyril Baptiste, a 6-9, 240-pound Creighton University forward, in the National Basketball Association's hardship draft of players with college eligibility remaining.

"Had we been available in the spring draft of seniors when our turn came up," Warrior general manager Bob Feerick said Thursday after the draft, "we would have picked him no. 1 ahead of Darnell Hillman."

Hillman, the center from San Jose State and the U.S. Army, signed with the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association. The Warriors may still have to contest the ABA for Baptiste, a junior.

Football

Eugene, Ore. — Leonard J. (Len) Casanova, associate director of university relations and former head football coach and athletic director at the University of Oregon, will retire next Feb. 1.

In announcing his retirement plans Friday, Casanova said he will go into business as an associate in a local pizza restaurant in the capacity of promotion, advertising, public relations and coordinating youth activities.

Casanova was head football coach at Oregon from 1951 to 1967 when he became athletic director. A former head coach at Santa Clara and Pittsburgh, he currently serves on the NCAA Football Rules Committee.

San Mateo — Joseph R. Cain, manager of the Mutuel Department for the California Jockey Club and most of the Northern California fairs died Thursday night. He was 54.

Cain worked Tuesday at the California State Fair in Sacramento, where he had been mutuel manager for many years. He served in a similar capacity at Vallejo, Pleasanton and Stockton.

He is survived by his wife, Beverly, and five children.

Evans, of Hillsborough, shot a 70 Friday to finish a 135, Forrest Fezler, San Jose, who was tied after the first round with Evans, fell back to a 74 in the second round to hold down second place at 139.

In third place were three professionals — Steve Wilson, Los Angeles; Chick Evans, former assistant pro at host Salt Lake Country Club; and Jon Fister, Ogden, Utah, all at 140.

Houston — Joe Lazaro of Waltham, Mass., was named winner Friday of the 26th annual Blind Golfers Tournament with an opening round score of 89.

Hockey

Montreal — J.C. Tremblay, the all-star defenseman of the Stanley Cup Champion Montreal Canadiens, has signed his contract for the 1971-72 National Hockey League season.

Sailing

The 19-year-old Marin County skipper qualified for the five-race series concluding next Saturday on Shilshole Bay by winning the Labor Day weekend battle in British Columbia Monday.

PRO GRID ROUNDUP

Jets, Cards and Packers Win; 'Brain Bowl' Tonight

By JOE CARNICELLI
UPI Sports Writer

It's "Brain Bowl" time.

Hank Stram of the Kansas City Chiefs and Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys, probably the two most inventive coaches in pro football, match wits tonight in a pre-season battle of unbeatens.

Stram, who coined the phrase "Offense of the 70s" after the Chiefs won the Super Bowl in 1970, takes these exhibition games seriously. He hasn't lost one in two years but had his record smeared slightly last week when held to a 17-17 tie by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dallas, unbeaten in five pre-season games, also features one of pro football's most intricate offenses. The Cowboys, despite a rash of injuries, have been awesome in exhibition play and Landry will have this final game to decide on a starting quarterback. Roger Staubach takes his turn as a starter tonight with Craig Morton scheduled for relief.

In Friday night play, the New York Jets trounced the New England Patriots 38-9, St. Louis beat Cleveland 27-13 and Green Bay downed Buffalo 20-14.

John Riggins ran 53 yards for a touchdown in the first half and reserve quarterback Bob Davis engineered a 24-point second half to lead the Jets over New England. Riggins' run and Emerson Boozer's one-yard plunge gave the Jets a 14-6 halftime lead and Davis marched the Jets to three second half scores, a 15-yard run by Clifford McClain, a two-yard burst by Steve Harkey and a 21-yard pass to John Dockery.

New England rookie Jim Plunkett, the former Heisman Trophy winner from Stanford, completed 13 of 32 passes for 200 yards. He had two intercepted.

Miller Farr raced 94 yards with an intercepted pass in the last quarter to boost the Cardinals past Cleveland. Farr intercepted Bill Nelsen's pass at the six and used a block by Jim Hargrove to go all the way. Cid Edwards and MacArthur Lane also scored for the Cards while Fair Hooker accounted for the Browns' only TD on a five-yard pass from Nelsen.

Dave Hampton's second TD of the night, a four-yard run early in the fourth period, lifted Green Bay over Buffalo. Rookie Scott Hunter set up the TD with a 31-yard pass to Carroll Dale at the Bills' 31. Hampton scored five plays later and Dave Conway added an insurance field goal late in the game.

Buffalo led 14-3 at the half on Dennis Shaw's 12-yard pass to Haven Moses and an 88-yard punt return by rookie Tim Beamer.

Spitz Heads Fantastic U.S. Streak

MOSCOW (UPI)—The United States, boasting a fantastic victory string in the first 20 events, goes after a sweep of the final nine events today in a triangular swimming meet with Russia and Great Britain.

Mark Spitz established one world record and helped the U.S. set another Friday as the Yanks ran their victory total to 18 in 20 events and piled up a 232-point total to 139 for the Soviet squad and 99 for Britain.

Spitz broke his own 200-meter freestyle mark by seven-tenths of a second when he touched at one minute, 53.5 seconds in the opening leg of the 800-meter freestyle. The U.S. established a world mark of 7:43.33 for the event as Jerry Heidenreich, Fred Tyler and Tom McBreen joined Spitz in the recordbreaking spree.

The U.S. equalled a world record as Ellie Daniel matched her old mark of 2:18.4 in the 200-meter women's butterfly and Ann Simmons tied an American standard in the 400-meter freestyle with a 4:22.8 clocking.

Galina Stepanova gave Russia its only victory of the day as she equalled her European 200-meter breaststroke record of 2:40.1 to beat Claudia Clevenger of the U.S. by seven seconds.

THE 'HARDSHIP' DRAFT

Bullets Pick Cal Cager

NEW YORK (UPI)—Nate Williams was the first of five "hardship cases" chosen by National Basketball Association teams Friday in a supplementary draft.

Williams, a 6-foot-5 swingman from Utah State, was picked by the Cincinnati Royals after being passed up by Cleveland, Buffalo and Portland.

The Atlantic Hawks made 7-foot-2 Thomas Payne the second selection. Payne, who would be entering his junior year at the University of Kentucky, was the first black to play for that school.

Cyrile Baptiste, a 6-foot-9 center-forward from Creighton, was the pick of the Golden State Warriors. The fourth and final player to be picked on the first round was 6-foot-4 guard Phil Chenier, from the University of California at Berkeley. Chenier was chosen by the Baltimore Bullets.

Joe Hammond, a 6-foot-4 guard who did not attend college, was selected by the Los Angeles Lakers on the fourth round. Hammond, rated by many observers as the best player to come out of the Harlem playgrounds, had been extended an invitation to work out by coach Lou Carnesecca of the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association.

Jack Dolph, the commissioner of the ABA announced that 11 undergraduates had been named to the loop's hardship list. In addition to Payne, Baptiste, Chenier, and Williams those named were Mickey Davis of Duquesne University, Ed Leftwich of North Carolina State, Michael Meade of Hartford University, Curtis Pritchett of St. Augustine and Joby Wright of Indiana. Allen Raphael and Anthony Reed were added to the list with no college designated.

NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy, who conducted the draft by telephone, ended the selections after the 20th round with only 6-foot-9 Ed Owens of Weber State left unchosen among those eligible. The selecting took about 30 minutes.

The ABA has made "hardship case" selections previously. Spencer Haywood and, later, Ralph Simpson were signed by the Denver Rockets. This is the first year the NBA has allowed hardship cases.

Players whose financial and family situations either cause them to drop out of school or prevent them from attending one are considered for hardship eligibility.

Champs To Vie In Fairfax Walking Race

The Fairfax Festival walking race tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in the city's Redwood Park will have a definite San Rafael High School influence.

Three Bulldog faculty members plus a student will compete in this seven-mile race. The teaching trio includes 1968 Olympic Games veterans Goetz Klopfer, the 1971 Pan American Games 20-kilometer walk winner in Columbia, and his runnerup Tom Dooley. Bill Ranney, America's 15-mile and 25-kilometer record holder, is the third participating instructor.

They will vie with the nation's top prep walker, San Rafael's Jerry Lansing. The Bulldog senior has been selected to train on the Olympic Development Program in Colorado the past two summers.

Larkspur's Steve Lund, the 30-kilometer Championship Walk victor at the 1969 Junior Nationals, will also compete, along with his 1971 successor Wayne Glusker, a San Jose State graduate student.

USC IS UPSET, 17-10

Alabama's Sweet Revenge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant is a proud man and for a year he had been awaiting the chance to avenge the 42-21 defeat inflicted on his Alabama team by the University of Southern California in the opening game of the 1970 season.

The Crimson Tide did the job to Bryant's satisfaction Friday night as they outplayed the Trojans for a 17-10 victory that looms large to their coach because it was the 200th win of his college career.

"This was one of my most satisfying victories for an opener," Bryant said. "I've been with better teams before, but I've never been associated with a prouder team."

Asked about his plan for the game, Bryant said it simply was to keep the ball the way Alabama used to do when it won the national championship.

Bryant lavished his praise on all his players but had the most for his senior running back, Johnny Musso, who scored both of Alabama's touchdowns and was voted back of the game. Defensive end Robin Parkhouse was named lineman of the game while Steve Higginbotham turned in a spectacular pass interception and fumble recovery in the second half to keep the Trojans in check.

Coach John McKay said he didn't want to take anything away from Alabama and his longtime friend, coach Bryant, but he was not satisfied with his team's defenses.

"We played defense like some Chinese firemen," he said. "They did an excellent job of controlling the ball against us, even though they didn't score as many points as they did last year."

McKay thought a turning point came in the fourth period when the Trojans were moving but a penalty against tackle John Vella for throwing a forearm nullified a first down and Alabama was able to turn back the threat.

"I thought we should have had it at the end," McKay said. "I don't want to take anything away from Alabama. Their backs ran awfully, awfully hard and our defense went for the quarterback instead of waiting for the pitch."

Southern Cal did all its scoring in the second period. The Trojans culminated a 73 yard march with a seven-yard pass from Jones to Charles Young in the end zone. And Mike Rae in the final two seconds of the half booted a 37 yard field goal after Jones' passing put the Trojans in scoring position. Lou Harris of the Trojans gained 116 yards to 85 for Musso but the Alabama star got the touchdowns.

'ANYONE CAN WIN'

Miller Uneasy Leader In Southern Tourney

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI)—John Miller knows what he's talking about.

Right after he posted a 67 Friday to go with his leading 65 of Thursday for an eight-under-par 132 in the $100,000 Southern Invitational Tournament here, he warned:

"I'm not excited about having the lead. There are about 20 guys out here who can win this."

One of them is Gay Brewer. Down by three shots at the start of Friday's round, the veteran from Dallas, Tex., reeled off a sizzling 30-34—64, two off the Green Island Country Club course record.

When the grass settled, the 39-year-old Brewer, who hasn't won a tournament in three years, had matched Miller's two-day total of 132.

But it's strictly a two-man show for the $20,000 first prize money in the second annual event.

Posing the most serious threat is Harry Toscano of New Castle, Pa., who is four back with a 69-67—136.

Five shots behind the co-leaders were Bert Yancey, Cesar Sanudo, Larry Ziegler and Jim Colbert. Ziegler rebounded from an opening 73 with a red-hot 64.

Included in the 138 group was Hugh Royer Jr., who is trying to win in his hometown. He's had identical 69s.

Bob Murphy, with considerable help from a hole-in-one on No. 2, finished with a 65 and is in a five-way tie at 139.

Brewer went on a birdie tear on the back nine with four in a row. A 70-foot putt on No. 14 accounted for one of them.

Miller ran into his first bogies in the Southern open. He strayed over par on Nos. 2 and 15, both direct results of three putts.

Today is Saturday, Sept. 11, the 254th day of 1971.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Virgo.

On this day in history:

In 1777 troops of George Washington were badly defeated by the British in the battle of Brandywine.

In 1940 in the early days of World War II, Buckingham Palace in London was damaged by German bombers.

In 1963 all 81 persons aboard an Indian airlines Viscount died when the plane crashed near New Delhi.

A thought for today: U. S. poet Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy."

Hawaii Can Have Its Bad Weather

HONOLULU (UPI)—Hawaii is noted for its pleasant weather, but it is not always that way.

The islands have had tidal waves, floods and vicious wind and surf storms. At Haleakala, Maui, early this year, there was rain, thunder and lightning, sleet, hail, snow and 50-mile-an-hour winds—all in a space of five hours.

The Standard Trump Play Assures Six-Spade Victory

You should be able to make certain plays in your sleep. The correct play of the trump suit in today's hand is included in this category. If you're not familiar with it, just look at the hand carefully and remember it the next time you run into it in actual play.

WHAT THEN?

You take the first trick with dummy's ace of clubs and lead a low trump to the ace. Then:

If you're greedy, you try to make one extra trick, worth 30 points — and lose a small slam worth 50 times as much. If you hungrily lead the king of spades in the hope of capturing the queen, West will get two trump tricks. Down one.

CORRECT PLAY

The correct play is to continue the trumps by leading a low trump toward dummy's jack. This protects you against any possible trump break.

As the cards lie, West must step up with the queen of spades to prevent dummy's jack from winning. East's discard tells you about the bad trump break.

You win any return, lead a trump to the jack, get back to your hand and draw the last trump with the king. The rest if easy.

OTHER BREAKS

The standard play works even if East has the four trumps. West discards when you lead the second trump, and dummy's jack forces out the queen. You get to dummy later and return a trump to finesse through East's ten.

The same sort of play is correct even if your ace and king of trumps are in separate hands. For xample, with K-J-6 opposite A-9-7-3-2, take the first trump with the king. Get to your hand and lead a low trump toward the jack. The situation is then the same as in today's hands. For example, with K-J-6 opposite A-9-7-3-2, take the first trump with the king. Get to your hand and lead a low trump toward the jack. The situation is then the same as in today's hand.

FOUR TRUMPS?

What if neither opponent has four trumps? You lose the second round of trumps, regain the lead and then draw the last trump. You are quite willing to give up one trump trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - 4
♥ - 9 8 4 3 2
♦ - 8 7 4
♣ - K 5 4 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts.

Despite the trump length and side singleton, the hand is too weak for a jump to four hearts. (Some experts would bid four hearts with this hand, but they are in the minority.)

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY
28 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1971 EDITORIAL PAGE

The Editor's Notebook

San Juan Bautista Still 'Old California'

There are few places left in California where one can still experience what must have been the "feel" of the Spanish-Mexican era.

The heart of the little town is its ancient plaza, one of the few remaining much as it was in Spanish times. In the days of the dons, it was the scene of many bullfights.

Bordering the north side of the plaza is historic Mission San Juan Bautista, founded in 1797 as the 18th in the chain of California missions. It was designed as the largest of all 21 of the Alta California chain and was built by Indians under the direction of the Franciscan padres. It was completed in 1812, five years before our own Mission San Rafael was founded. On its interior walls you can still see the faded decorations done by Indians long ago.

In one wing there is a museum with many interesting relics of early times.

ALSO FACING THE PLAZA are half a dozen other structures more than a century old, now embraced in a state historic park. These include Plaza Hall, Plaza Stables, Plaza Hotel, Castro Adobe, an ancient log cabin and the town's jail. In Spanish times, the hall was the setting for many a fandango. The hotel was built originally to house Spanish soldiers. The Castro adobe was built to house officials of early California's Mexican government. Later, it was the home of the Patrick Breen family, survivors of the ill-fated Donner party.

Altogheter, within a quarter of a mile of the mission there remain two dozen buildings more than 100 years old, representing various architectures of early California.

Many of these buildings are not mere museum pieces on display for tourists. They actually are still in use as private residences or business buildings. Although streets are paved and sidewalks mostly concrete, much of the atmosphere of Hispanic California is still present.

THE SLEEPY LITTLE town sits on a flat overlooking beautiful, fertile San Juan Valley. If you sit in the shade of the grape arbor at Cadematori's restaurant, overlooking the broad fields of the valley below, it is easy to imagine Indians working in those fields and Spanish vaqueros of yesteryear tending their cattle.

One edge of the plaza overlooks the valley. If you stroll along that edge toward the mission, you can see the outline of what was the stage coach road which marked the original El Camino Real, which began at the trail trudged by the Franciscan padres back and forth between the missions, over the length of California. The ancient cemetery there contains the bones of 5,000 Indians Christianized by the Franciscans.

California missions were secularized by the Mexican government in 1835, but the expropriation order was never effected at San Juan Bautista. Already it was somewhat remote and off the beaten path. It is the only one of California's chain of missions which remained in the hands of the church continuously and uninterruptedly. It has been served by priests in unbroken succession.

IF ALL THIS is not enough to produce the feel of the Spanish-Mexican era, you can still hear Spanish spoken in the streets, in some stores and some beer joints.

Mexican field workers and their families — some undoubtedly descended from the original Spanish and Mexican settlers of San Juan Bautista — are always in evidence on the streets and in the stores.

They usually speak English to storekeepers but among themselves still speak Spanish.

The town's theater offers both indoor and outdoor performances before a shaded patio dotted with tables where playgoers can sip refreshing drinks. Spanish language as well as English language productions are presented.

The main business street of the town today is dotted with antique shops, galleries displaying works of local artists and craftsmen as well as those from other parts of the state, and various restaurants, some featuring early California specialities.

HOW HAS SAN JUAN BAUTISTA escaped "progress?"

When the state built the Coast Highway (which we know now as 101), it followed a shorter, faster route from Salinas to San Jose than the old route of the padres and stagecoaches. The San Juan Valley was bypassed and thereafter isolated from the main stream.

Today, San Juan Bautista's inhabitants number scarcely 1,200. Only recently has it begun to be discovered by visitors.

A visit to San Juan Bautista, plus a bit of imagination, will give you a good idea of what San Rafael was like 100 years ago when Spanish-Mexican influence was still widely in evidence.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to a lot of people — teachers, janitors, school administrators, parents — who have been working hard to get Marin public schools ready for opening. And we hope the schools have a year free enough from conflict so that major energies can be devoted to the job of education.

BRICKBAT to California Development Co. for continuing to add new demands in negotiations for return to the Marin County Redevelopment Agency of land the company failed to redevelop in Marin City. The latest proposal that density restrictions on ridgeland held by Cal Development be eliminated puts the company in a particularly bad light.

BOUQUET to the Belvedere City Council for rebelling against Tiburon's idea of putting a bridle path beside a bicycle path — a ridiculous idea; and a BRICKBAT to the Tiburon City Council for approving such nonsense.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

'National Parks Aren't Made For People'

In view of your recent articles on our Point Reyes National Seashore I would like to point out to the public the true meaning of a national park. You see our national parks aren't made for people. In the interest of people yes but not for them to use directly. Tthe national parks are for the birds and the trees and for every kind of life and non-life that inhabits them.

John Muir in his time had concern that 1,500 people in Yosemite per year would damage it. Last month on week ends there were close to 3,000 people camped in the Tuolomne Meadows area of Yosemite alone. Anyone who has spent more time than the time it takes to drive through Yosemite can tell that John Muir was right. Ecological balance in Yosemite is damaged.

Do we want this to happen to the national park whose future is mostly in our hands?

In conclusion I would like to say that the best way to preserve the park for the natural things that are there is to keep people away or at least have people in small dosages. And the way to do this? Keep the park the way it is. No development besides maintenance. After all, it has been operated that way for at least as long as I've known about it. For nature's sake, save our park.

Director Disavows 'Full Mind' Article

I am writing to correct an impression left by the feature article in the Marin Magazine of Sept. 4, entitled "The Mobilization of the Full Mind."

Because of interest in brain-wave phenomena and related states of mind, such as meditation and ESP, I decided to take a course given under a money-back guarantee, by the men who now direct Motivation Research Center. At that time, they were giving the course under the aegis of another company. Although initially skeptical, I did have an ESP experience on the final day of that course, which I was later able to verify to my complete satisfaction. . .

It was precisely, however, because of what I felt was exaggerated language, and misleading and inappropriate use of words, conveying the impression of an irresponsible attitude, that I encouraged these men to break away from this image to a more responsible one. The possibilities for enlargement of the human potential appear to be multiplying at such a rate today that I feel it important for psychiatrists and allied professionals to encourage and guide the development of this potential, and to aid its transmission to humanity at large . . .

After the above-described successful induction of an ESP experience, I was therefore happy to join an organization headed by people who appeared to me to have the desirable attitudes described above, and this is how I became a member of the board of directors.

However, in the relatively brief time since its organization, it has unfortunately not been true, as implied in your article, that the board gives approval to all material before it is distributed. In fact, it is for this very reason that I have recently told the organization's president that I am on the point of resigning, since I cannot be responsible for the wording of any of the material presented, either orally or in print . . .

Although I believe endeavors such as Motivation Research could really have a very great deal to offer the public, I must disclaim responsibility for what is presented by them unless there is great deal more authority, control, and communication between the board members, the executive, and the instructors on the one hand, than is now the case so far as I am concerned.

Buchwald's Version Of Freeze: A Cure For The Common Cold

WASHINGTON — A new cure for the "common cold" couldn't have come too soon. Last week two Israeli researchers announced they had been able to cure nose colds by chilling the big toes of patients' feet. The Israelies claimed that the sudden temporary chilling of the big toes almost immediately brings about a lowering of the normal temperature within the nose. And lowering the nasal temperature dries up the nostrils, thereby curing the cold.

At the time the story appeared on the front pages of newspapers and on television I was in bed with a severe nose cold and my wife said to me, "Let's try it. What have you got to lose?"

The Israeli researchers said they had developed a special indirect cooling apparatus adapted to the shape of the big toe. It uses a refrigerant chemical called dichloro difluoromethane, which can chill a toe in less than a minute. Since we didn't have this chemical available my wife decided to tape an ice cube on each toe.

I LAY THERE with my feet sticking out of each side of the bed and ice cubes on my big toes.

"How do you feel?" she asked.

"About the same."

"Then why are you laughing?"

"The water trickling between my toes makes me ticklish."

The ice cubes kept melting and I kept sneezing and giggling, so my wife said, "Maybe ice cubes aren't the answer. Would you consider putting both your feet in the refrigerator?"

"YOU HAVE TO BE kidding," I said.

"You have everything to gain," she said, taking the ice cubes off my toes and handing me a bathrobe.

I sat on a kitchen chair while she removed the food from the shelves of the refrigerator. "We'll try it in this part of the fridge and if it doesn't work we'll put your feet in the deep freeze."

"I'd just as soon drink plenty of liquids and take aspirin."

"There," she said, "put your feet on the third shelf and read a book."

FIVE MINUTES LATER she said, "Do you feel anything?"

"Nothing at all," I said.

"Then your cold is gone?"

"No, my toes are frozen. I can't move them."

"Where should I put them, in the oven?"

"THERE HAS TO BE some way of freezing your toes without giving you frostbite," my wife said.

"Perhaps," she said, "if you stuck your feet against the air-conditioning vent."

"I'd rather put them out the window."

"I know. I'll make two frozen daiquiris and you can put a big toe in each one. That way they'll freeze but you won't suffer."

She made two daiquiris (banana) and inserted a toe in each glass. I relaxed as nature took its course. My body temperature slowly went down and in half an hour my cold was gone. Now if I can just get rid of this hangover.

Conservationists Score Victory In Atomic Power Plant Order

WASHINGTON — It is not hard to put down the conservationists and environmentalists and fuzzy-minded idealists. But to their credit an important victory must be chalked up.

The Atomic Energy Commission has just ruled that all 96 nuclear power plants, 91 under construction, must show that in operation they will not pollute the environment. This means not alone the threat of a nuclear accident, which the AEC has stoutly maintained is virtually impossible under safety regulations stipulated by the commission, but pollution of the waters —thermal pollution —used in the cooling process.

That has been the outcry of the environmentalists, who maintain that raising the temperature of the water in bays and estuaries by a degree or even a fraction of a degree will destroy marine life. This will, in turn, upset the whole ecological balance in coastal waters, endangering species already on the fringe of extinction.

THE AEC ORDER followed an opinion by Judge Skelly Wright of the United States Court of Appeals holding that the commission had not complied with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. It was not enough, the far-reaching Wright decision held, to rely on certification by the states that thermal and other kinds of pollution would not occur. The commission wisely decided against carrying an appeal to the supreme court.

Each nuclear plant is now given 40 days to prove to the AEC that it will not be a polluter in any form. As construction proceeds the responses will be evaluated.

The conservationists may exaggerate the dangers. The fact is, however, that ever since that first atom bomb explosion in the New Mexican desert, man has been dealing with forces hitherto unknown on this planet. They are forces that give fallible, blundering mankind a reach in power never before dreamed of.

When he was informed of the success of the secret experiment in New Mexico that wisest of wise men, Albert Einstein, said, "Now everything is changed." Everything, he added, except the pictures in men's minds of what their world is like. That is reason enough for caution. In managing these new forces — after all, only 26 years in being —an irretrievable step could put the future in grave jeopardy. A significant body of scientists challenge the AEC's safety regulations and 96 plants mean a multiplication of the risks.

THE AEC IS THE TARGET for an even more concentrated attack by conservationists along with anti-war protesters. This is over the AEC's five-megaton — equivalent to five million tons of TNT, 250 times greater than the bomb that demolished Hiroshima — underground test on the Aleutian island of Amchitka. If it comes off, it will be America's biggest underground nuclear bang.

With protests coming from many sources, a provision by Congress puts the responsibility for going through with the Amchitka blast up to President Nixon. The cost is $160 million, with the AEC claiming that at a depth of 5,875 feet the danger of leakage of radioactivity into the earth's atmosphere is negligible.

But Amchitka is in the heart of an earthquake zone and Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska and many seismologists contend that an explosion of that magnitude could trigger a major quake. Alaskans have painful memories of what happened on Good Friday in 1964. A large part of the state was devastated by an earthquake that began with a shock of 6.5 on the Richter scale and triggered itself to a peak of 8.4, only slightly less than the estimated force of the quake of 1906 that destroyed much of San Francisco.

FROM ALL AROUND the Pacific rim have come protests against the Amchitka explosion, with Canada and Japan the most vehement. On the conservation side, the threat is to seepage of radioactivity into the Bering Sea. The Aleutians are the crossroads for the spawning migrations of Pacific salmon. Contamination of the salmon would be a devastating blow to one of Alaska's principal industries.

Emperor Hirohito of Japan is meeting President Nixon in Alaska on Sept. 25. The guess is that Mr. Nixon will use that occasion to cancel the Amchitka explosion. It would be taken through the Pacific basin as an act of great good will.

Outlook In Israel Gives Little Cheer To Golda Meir

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

For Israeli Premier Mrs. Golda Meir the summer is ending as it began. And it hasn't been easy.

More than a year of ceasefire has brought to the surface manifestations of unrest otherwise suppressed for the common good in time of war emergency.

IN EARLY JUNE, striking hospital maintenance workers virtually closed down government medical services, threatening for a couple of days to leave women in childbirth and accident victims no place to turn in an emergency in those areas not served by private facilities.

Also on strike were electric repairman, dock guards and customs men.

The government invoked emergency regulations and forced them back to work.

In early September airport workers hit at another one of Israel's vital industries.

A wildcat strike at Tel Aviv's international airport stranded thousands of travelers. The workers were protesting government delays in granting wage increases to meet the nation's spiraling cost of living. They returned to work as the government prepared to invoke emergency measures.

Customs officials staying off their jobs forced the rerouting of ships away from the nation's second largest port of Ashdod. Joining the protests against government economic policies were 8,000 grocery store owners. They locked their doors to protest a government price freeze.

NOR WERE THESE the end of the government's troubles.

Government devaluation of the Israeli pound — the third devaluation in 10 years — has added to the cost of living and to labor's discontent.

"It is the workers who are being devalued," said Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, head of Histradrut, which is the backbone of the ruling Labor party.

And to this were added the voices of Israel's newly vocal poor.

Among them is the organization called the Black Panthers, bearing no relationship to the American group of the same name but combatting what they describe as "discrimination" against the country's Oriental Jewish community.

AS WITH MANY another nation hit with inflation problems, Israel has the outward appearance of prosperity.

New industries are sprouting, especially those related to defense. The French arms embargo beginning in 1967 forced the Israelis to establish a whole new industry. Israel Aircraft Industries alone employs more than 15,000 workers.

The trouble is that the country has been operating on credit, importing $1.4 billion more than it has been able to sell. Per capita, her foreign debt is setting a world record. Interest payments and loans coming due this year will come to nearly $500 million.

Israelis already pay the highest per capita income taxes in the world. And for them the government had only this bit of good news. The taxes, it said, would not go higher.

Iran Plans Spectacular 2,500th Birthday Celebration

THE SHAH OF IRAN
Will host hundreds

By JOSEPH MAZANDI

TEHRAN (UPI)—Iran, the world's oldest existing monarchy, will celebrate the 2,500th anniversary of its founding in October with a magnificent pageant at Persepolis, a city built by Darius the Great and destroyed by Alexander the Great.

Amid the fabled ruins a tented city is rising to house the 50 or so heads of state expected to attend, along with many distinguished guests and 10,000 others invited by the Shah and Empress Farah.

One of the highlights of the program will be a "son et lumiere"—a sound and light— performance which will recreate the glory of the Achaemenian dynasty and its sacred capital, and a parade of military units in costumes of the various periods of Iranian history.

THE SHAH and his Empress will go to Shiraz, the modern city near Persepolis, on Oct. 12 to greet their guests as they arrive. A state dinner will be held Oct. 14 — catered by the finest chefs of Paris. The next day a pageant will dramatize the long history of the ancient world's greatest empire.

Historians have spent months researching and writing the narration which will be spoken to a background of music composed by Iranian musicians. Among other historic events the pageant will show Alexander of Macedon's triumphant entrance into Persepolis and his ceremonial burning of the Palace of Xerxes—symbolizing the conclusion of the pan-Helenic campaign of revenge.

The final destruction of Persepolis will also be reenacted, although historians are not sure what prompted Alexander to put to the torch a city considered at that time to be the wonder of the world. One legend is that he granted the wish of Thais, an Athenian courtesan, who wanted to see the city burn.

The real significance of the celebrations is that Iran has been able to maintain its separate identity as a nation despite three major invasions. Greeks, Mongols and Arabs have all in turn overrun the country and all were capable of destroying it as an independent and separate nation. Yet these invasions, and a score of minor attacks on Iran, have gone without a trace. The Persian language is still as liquid as it was during the pre-Islamic era.

THE PAGEANT — naturally enough being described as "the greatest spectacle on Earth" — is scheduled for exactly 4 p.m. Oct. 15. Seventy two hours earlier the first of a relay of horsemen will leave Tehran, clad in the military costume of 25 centuries ago and carrying a message to Iran's modern day emperor, Shahanshak (king of kings) Aryamehr (light of the Aryans) Mohammad Reza Pahlevi.

The message will convey the nation's gratitude for his "benign and benevolent rule." The Shah will then address his own people and the world in a radio-television broadcast transmitted by satellite. This will stress Iran's role in world culture, justice and civilization.

The guests—kings, queens, presidents, prime ministers, men and women of letters and the arts and others—seated on specially erected stands in Achaemenian style, directly in front of the ruins of Persepolis, will witness the great pageant. Gilded war chariots will head the two hour parade whose theme is Iran's own history.

The banquet given that night for heads of state by the Shah will "never be forgotten," a prominent court official told UPI. The best caviar in the world, pheasant, venison and hors-de'oeuvres prepared by local and international chefs will be served as the regal assembly lolls Persian style on brocaded cushions placed on carpeted floors, to the entertainment by leading singers and dancers.

THE TENT VILLAGE has all the facilities a modern palace would want, including bars, card rooms, coffee corners and lounges. The 50 main tents will be equipped with two bedrooms, a drawing room, two bathrooms, a dressing room and a kitchen.

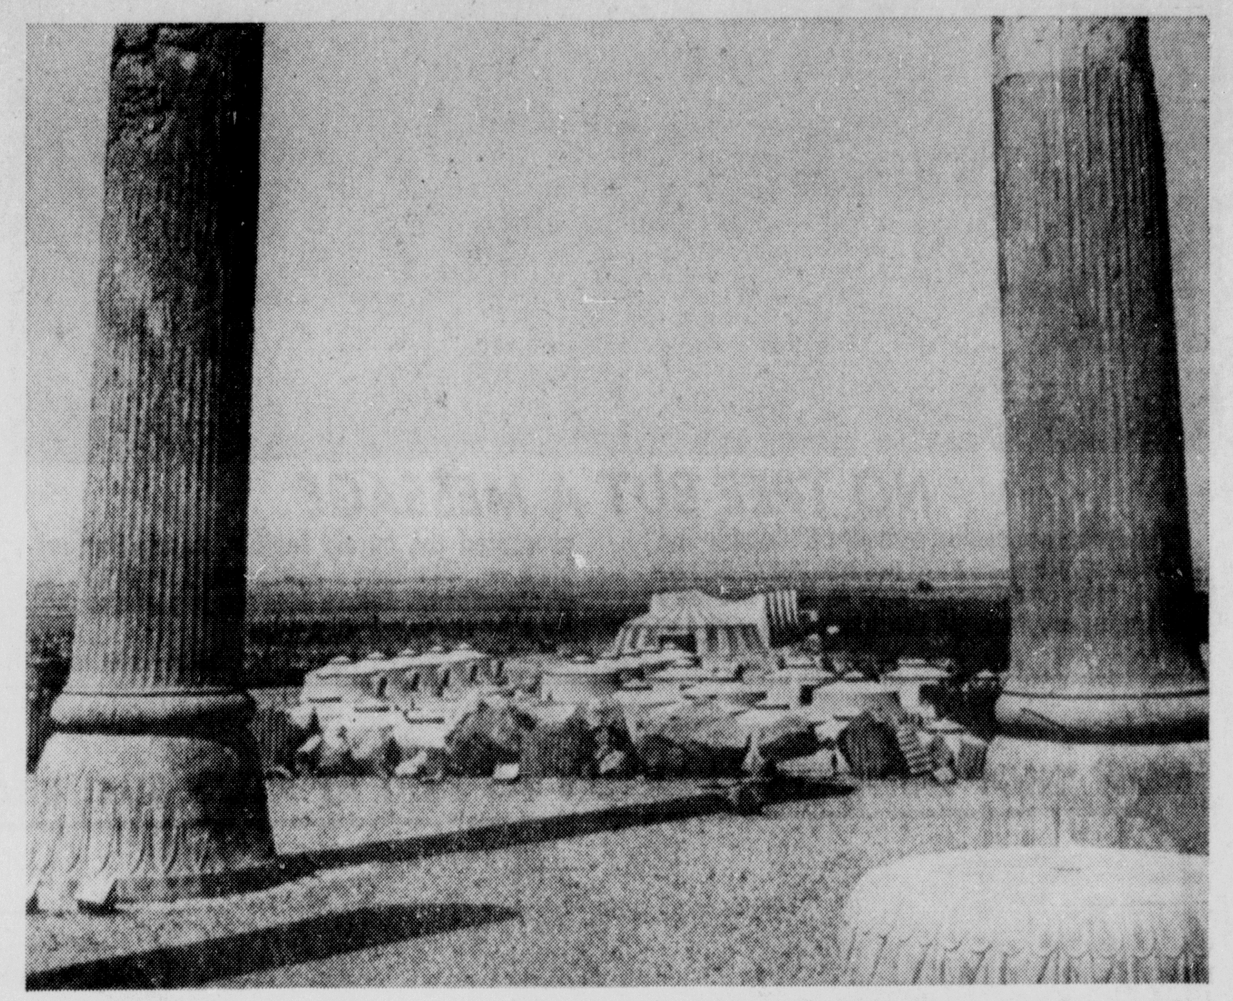
Around the tents, roads, lawns and rose gardens have been laid out, with the top attraction an orange tinted, heavily scented yellow rose specially cultivated in France and named "Persepolis" to mark the occasion.

Beauty parlors are also planned in the tented village, and the ladies will have the attention of Elizabeth Arden, Carita and Alexandre to attend them. Before departing, each head of state will receive a portrait of himself, woven into a magnificent silk and wool Persian carpet.

As the biggest assembly at one time of the heads of state and their wives under a single tent, an all-out effort has been made for comfort and safety.

The tents have been tested to withstand wind velocity of 125 m.p.h. Measures have been taken to destroy the deadly snakes, scorpions and huge rats infesting this desert area. To take care of any emergencies, a mobile first aid center and hospital have been set up.

In addition, prefabricated dwellings imported from Cyprus, new hotels and other structures have been built to accommodate the 10,000 visitors expected for the celebrations. Several school dormitories in Shiraz have been remodeled to house the 1,200 news reporters, photographers and cameramen covering the event.



THE SETTING — Amid the fabled ruins of Persepolis, a city built by Darius the Great and destroyed by Alexander the Great, a tented city is rising to house in mid-October the 50 or so heads of state expected to attend, along with many distinguished guests, the 2,500th anniversary celebration of the founding of the Persian Empire. (UPI Telephoto)

The official start of the celebrations will be at 11 a.m. on Oct. 12, when the Shah will place a wreath on the mausoleum of Cyrus the Great at Pasargadae. A 101-gun salute will mark the unfurling of the flags of Achaemenian and present-day Iran. Pasargadae, a short distance from Shiraz, was the seat of Cyrus the Great, who founded the Persian empire.

Cyrus is said to be the first king to promulgate the "declaration of human rights." He granted equal status to all his subjects and freedom of religious worship. He rebuilt the Temple of Solomon which had been destroyed by the Babylonian kings and freed some 40,000 Jews who had been jailed by the Babylonians, allowing them to return to their homes.

IN TEHRAN on Oct. 16 the Shah will inaugurate the huge Shahyad Aryamehr monument which, along with its gardens, covers an area of about 12 acres at the entrance to the city from Mehrabad international airport. On top of the monument is a large restaurant overlooking the city. The rest houses a museum with artifacts from the country's 2,500-year history.

The following day the Shah and his guests will attend the opening of a 100,000-seat stadium in Tehran. Later they will see a play at the Rudaki Theater Hall on an Achaemenian theme.

The Shah recently told an interviewer that the celebrations should be seen for their "stupendous historical and spiritual significance" to Iran and its people, rather than the "extravaganza" aspects.

He added that the October festivities are intended to "celebrate the marvel of the continuity of a way of life and a system of government which have ensured to Iran an uninterrupted national identity together with a positive guarantee for its future unity, stability, progress and prosperity."

The Jobless Rate Soars In Britain

By CHRISTOPHER B. OGDEN

LONDON (UPI) —The way Giles Andrews sees it, nobody in his right mind would dream of going on strike in Britain right now, no matter what his grievance.

"Strike? You've got to be bloody crazy to strike these days," the 27-year-old Cambridge University graduate said "too many aren't working already —including me."

Andrews is a journalist and a bachelor. He has been out of work for two months, picking up sporadic freelance work to help him scrape together the five pounds ($12) weekly rent he pays to share a West London apartment with two others.

"You'd think the university education would help," he said. "But no —London is full of free-lancers and there's precious little work available."

GILES ANDREWS' remarks mirror the mood of many British workers and employment officials at a time of the nation's highest unemployment figures in 30 years. The underlying attitude seems to be, "hang on to whatever job you've got and count yourself lucky to have it."

Labor analysts and employment officials say they see a relationship between this sort of thinking and recent government statistics showing strikes down by half from 1970.

"There's a definite psychological factor in staying on the job these days," said a spokesman for the giant Trade Unions Congress (TUC), Britain's equivalent of the U.S. AFL-CIO. It represents some nine million workers.

"You don't put your job in jeopardy by threatening to walk out when it's already a bit in jeopardy," he said.

AN OFFICIAL at the government Department of Employment said just under 800,000 British workers were out of jobs in July. The total, 3.4 per cent of the nation's work force, was the highest since 1940, he said. He noted, too, that there were only 1,176 strikes across the country in the first six months of this year, a 50 per cent drop from the 2,355 registered during the same period a year ago.

He declined to draw any conclusion from the figures. But Robert Cook, manager of the government's employment exchange in Marylebone-Camden, a commercial district in North London, said he thought fear of unemployment was keeping many workers on the job.

"Any number of workers used to say 'to hell with it, I'm going to pack it in (quit) and move on,' when they hit a bad patch," said Cook.

MACHINIST COLIN Harris, 32, was direct about his dissatisfaction with his current weekly salary of 22.50 pounds ($54). He pays 6.50 pounds a week alone for government-assisted housing for himself, his wife and three children. He'd like to look for more skilled work, perhaps as a welder.

"That could bring me an easy 10 quid (pounds —$24) more," Harris said. "But with so many others looking for jobs, I can't take the chance of leaving this one."

Government officials, pleased with their success in ending a two-month postal strike last March, are more confident now about handling industrial disputes.

Some predict that, despite such problems as the Upper Clyde Shipbuilders, where workers took over the yards in protest against a government rejection of a request for more subsidy funds, the worst problems with strikes are over.

"THE GOVERNMENT set its face against inflationary rises and took the fever out of the labor situation," one official said. He attributed last winter's labor "militancy" to a reaction against partial wage and price restraints imposed during the mid-1960s.

Labor itself agreed on the reasons.

"When the government relaxed it, we simply had to work our way through a period of wage claims," a TUC spokesman said.

He was not so confident about future labor peace.

WILL RULES WORK?

1972 Conventions May See End To Nomination Hoopla

WASHINGTON (UPI)—When a Democratic orator names "the man who" he says is destined to lead the nation for the next four years, delegates to the 1972 Democratic National Convention are supposed to keep their seats and remain silent.

It probably won't work, but a proposed rule from one of the party's reform commissions says delegates "shall maintain order" before and after nominating speeches. It also says "demonstrations on behalf of candidates shall not be permitted."

If this rule, proposed by a group headed by Rep. James G. O'Hara of Michigan, is adopted by the convention and enforced, delegates cannot jam the aisles, joined by outsiders sneaking in with hired bands, to stage domonstrations intended to show their candidate is the popular choice.

THE O'HARA Commission and another headed by Rep. Donald M. Fraser of Minnesota have spent more than two years writing and seeking adoption of convention rules and delegate selection standards to prevent the chaos that disrupted the 1968 Democratic Convention.

The Fraser Commission is claiming power to compel state Democratic organizations to follow many of its delegate selection proposals, subject to acceptance by the convention.

Republican leaders established a "Do Committee" (for delegates and organizations) with less authority to make recommendations in the same areas.

The Do Committee proposed that covention demonstrations be allowed only for candidates with "substantial delegate support," which was not defined. It reported that a poll of GOP National Committee members and state chairmen favored allowing only delegates and alternates in demonstrations.

Among other things, convention managers in both parties want to hold their television audiences. Demonstrations can create temporary excitement. But it can turn to boredom when the convention chairman is unable to cut them off.

THESE MANAGERS also take a cool view of "favorite son" candidates whose names go before conventions as tributes from their home states or to give undecided delegations time to choose between the major candidates.

When President Nixon appeared almost certain of a first ballot nomination in 1968, the names of 12 candidates were placed before the Republican convention, including the irrepressible Harold E. Stassen.

Five names were submitted to the Democratic convention.

For 1972, the O'Hara Commission recommended that candidates with substantial support in at least three states be allowed a half hour for nominating and seconding speeches. Others would get only five minutes.

The GOP committee also recommended only five minutes for favorite son candidates and 14 minutes —11 less than in 1968 —for others. It reported that its poll showed heavy support for forbidding demonstrations for favorite sons.

IT IS THE Fraser Commission, formerly headed by Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota, which is leading the Democrats into unexplored territory. The GOP is moving much more cautiously.

Some members of the Fraser Commission itself disagree about the meaning of its 18 guidelines for selecting delegates. Some have freely predicted a record number of contests over seating delegates. Some Democrats believe enforcement of the standards will cause chaos; others think enforcement is necessary to prevent chaos.

One guideline likely to cause trouble requires state delegations to represent women, Young people and minority groups in "reasonable relationship to their population in a state." But a footnote in the report says no quota system is intended and opens the way to endless argument.

One question is what happens when a state electing Democratic convention delegates in a primary names all-male candidates over 40. The rebuttal is that presidential candidates and state Democratic organizations should avoid this by naming representative slates.

THE GOP committee asked equal representation for men and women in state delegations and "numerical equity" for voters under 25. But it ran into a snag seeking a formula to give numerical equity to minority groups which tend to be heavily Democratic. A formula dealing with this issue was promised for a Republican National committee meeting in December.

Figures collected for the Fraser Commission indicated that only 5.5 per cent of the 1968 Democratic delegates were black, 13 per cent women and 4 per cent under 30. These figures showed 1.9 per cent of the Republican delegates were black, 17 per cent women and 1 per cent under 30.

The Do Committee proposals are just recommendations to Republican state organizations, the National Committee and the Convention Arrangements Committee. Its delegate selection suggestions go to the 1972 convention for adoption as party rules for the 1976 convention. Most of the Democratic proposals are intended for application in 1972.

One Republican proposal calls for allotting one seat from each state on each of four major convention committees to one man, one woman, one person under 25 and one from a minority group.

O'HARA'S commission proposed enlargment of convention committees in a different way. In the past, Democratic committees have had a maximum of 110 members — two from each state, the District of Columbia and four territories.

The change would allow each state and the five other areas at least one member on a 150-member committee, allowing larger membership for populous states more in line with the weight of their vote in the full convention. These enlargments would affect committees writing the platform, hearing credentials contests and writing convention and party rules.

In case the Fraser Commission's delegate selection standards do produce a record number of contests, the O'Hara Commission has developed an elaborate procedure, already approved by the Democratic National Committee, for settling credentials fights.

If members of a delegation are challenged, a hearing officer may be named to collect facts within a state and report to the Credential Committee. The committee would be required to meet no later than June 26, two weeks before the convention opens at Miami Beach. Its report would have to be circulated 48 hours before the convention opens.

ANOTHER POTENTIAL cause of trouble: Fraser's Commission is talking at least about devising a plan to permit the Credentials Committee to name delegates as substitutes for those held to have been chosen without compliance with the guidelines.

Both parties are planning regional hearings on their 1972 platforms before the convention. But the O'Hara Commission also is asking that the final draft from the platform committee be circulated to all delegates 10 days before the convention opens instead of during the convention.

Aggravating disputes about party reform is a lawsuit against the Democratic National Committee. The committee adopted a delegate apportionment formula cutting bonus votes given small states in 1968 but not so far as the O'Hara Commission recommended.

A group of Democrats sued for a formula based on the Democratic vote in the most recent presidential election or elections. A U.S. district court ruled against the National Committee in a case now before the D.C. Court of Appeals and headed for the Supreme Court.

The two parties have needled one another about the reform issue. Democratic leaders have argued that only they were so bold as to undertake real reform when its time had come. Republican leaders have retorted that their party never permitted some of the abuses the Democrats are trying to correct.

SECRETARY WILLIAM ROGERS
Makes proposal on yen

Everybody still was talking about the economy this week and President Nixon talked twice—in a radio address to the nation and in a joint session of Congress.

Nixon, in his congressional address, said the wage-price freeze would not be extended. He said measures of "wage and price stabilization" would be needed when the freeze expires Nov. 13. He did not say what they would be.

In his radio broadcast, Nixon said Americans had greeted his emergency policies with "overwhelming response." He called for increased productivity through new investment, job training, management and pride by employes in their work.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers asked Japan to revalue its yen and end restrictions against U.S. products exported to Japan. Japanese Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda urged the United States to end the 10 per cent import surcharge.

Joe Cahill, a leader of a wing of the Irish Republican Army, was deported from the United States. He had arrived the week before but was denied entrance on grounds his visa was invalid. In Dublin, Irish officials detained and then released him.

CAHILL'S ARM of the IRA has claimed responsibility for some of the recent strife in Northern Ireland.

A tunnel was dug into a prison in Montevideo and 106 members of the Tupamaros guerrilla organization escaped.Later the Tupamaros freed British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson who had been kidnaped in Montevideo eight months ago.

Searchers went up a mountain near Juneau, Alaska, to bring back the bodies of 111 persons who died when an Alaska Airliner 727 crashed. There were no survivors among the 104 passengers and seven crewmen.

A new 1,375-foot television tower crashed through part of a transmitter building near Shoreview, Minn., and killed seven men.

SIX MEN WERE arrested on conspiracy charges in the bombing of 10 empty school buses in Pontiac, Mich. Two of the men were identified as key figures in the Michigan Klu Klux Klan.

NO TREE BUT A MESSAGE

This concrete casing was placed outside the Novato corporation yard several years ago so that a tree could be planted in it to beautify the entrance. Perhaps the failure to plant one prompted the barely legible, sarcastic message — "Madisen's Madhouse" — scrawled on the casing. Carrol Madsen is maintenance superintendent of Novato.

Barrows Wants Only One Assistant In His Office

Marin County should have only one assistant county administrator instead of two and that assistant should get a pay raise because of increased responsibility.

This will be the recommendation of County Administrator John F. Barrows to the Marin County Board of Supervisors next Tuesday morning.

His assistant is Thomas F. Campanella, who is now getting $23,820 per year. Since Campanella will be the only assistant, Barrows recommends that Campanella's pay be raised to $25,020 as soon as the federal wage freeze will permit.

Former County Administrator Alan Bruce, who resigned on July 1, had two assistants (Barrows and Campanella), and two senior administrative analysts (Nichael A. Chrystal and William R. Pryor), a total staff of five including himself. Pryor was transferred to the probation department in July.

Barrows will ask for the same total of five, but re-allocated in this way:

County administrator, one assistant (Campanella), one senior administrative analyst (Chrystal), and two administrative analysts (one is Robert Peterson, and the second is to be hired).

This re-allocation will mean a $14,000 reduction in total cost for the remaining nine months of this fiscal year, Barrows said.

Pancake Breakfast Scheduled Tomorrow

Five Youths Hurt In Wreck

Five San Rafael teen-agers were injured yesterday, none seriously, after the car they were riding in went out of control on a fire road in Fairfax and rolled over an embankment.

California Highway Patrol said the driver, Joan E. Schwartz, 18, of 353 Mountain View Avenue, was driving too fast for the road, located near Oak Manor and Manor Vier, at 1:10 a.m. when she lost control of the car.

She was treated at Marin General Hospital for back bruises. Passengers in the car, also treated at the hospital, were Michael Mountanos, 17, of 357 Mountain View, cuts on thumb and bruises; Thomas J. Gocher, 16, of 358 Mountain View, minor cuts and bruises; Mark Mountanos, 16, 357 Mountain View, broken right wrist, and Diana Castro, 18, of 313 Summit Avenue, back bruises.

The Welsh In The Bay Area

Marinites Take Active Part In Keeping Heritage Alive

By DON KEOWN

Ask Jayne Jones Calkins of Mill Valley to say something in the tongue of her native Wales, and she is likely to sing out: "Cymru mam byth!"

Which, translated, means, "Wales forever!"

And that pretty will summarizes the cause to which the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area, of which Mrs. Calkins is Marin's most active member, is dedicated.

"We are determined to keep alive our Welsh heritage and culture," she says, "and particularly our Welsh language."

WHY ALL this devotion to a language that is one of the most difficult of all the earth's tongues to master and which is spoken only in one corner of the United Kingdom, and even there must share the spotlight with English?

"Because," answers Mrs. Calkins, "it is not only one of the most beautiful languages in the word — so musical — but it is also one of the oldest. It has a tremendous history, having withstood centuries of British efforts to suppress it.

"Its loss would be a great blow, not only to the Welsh, but to all people. Just consider how many lovely poems and songs have been written in the language."

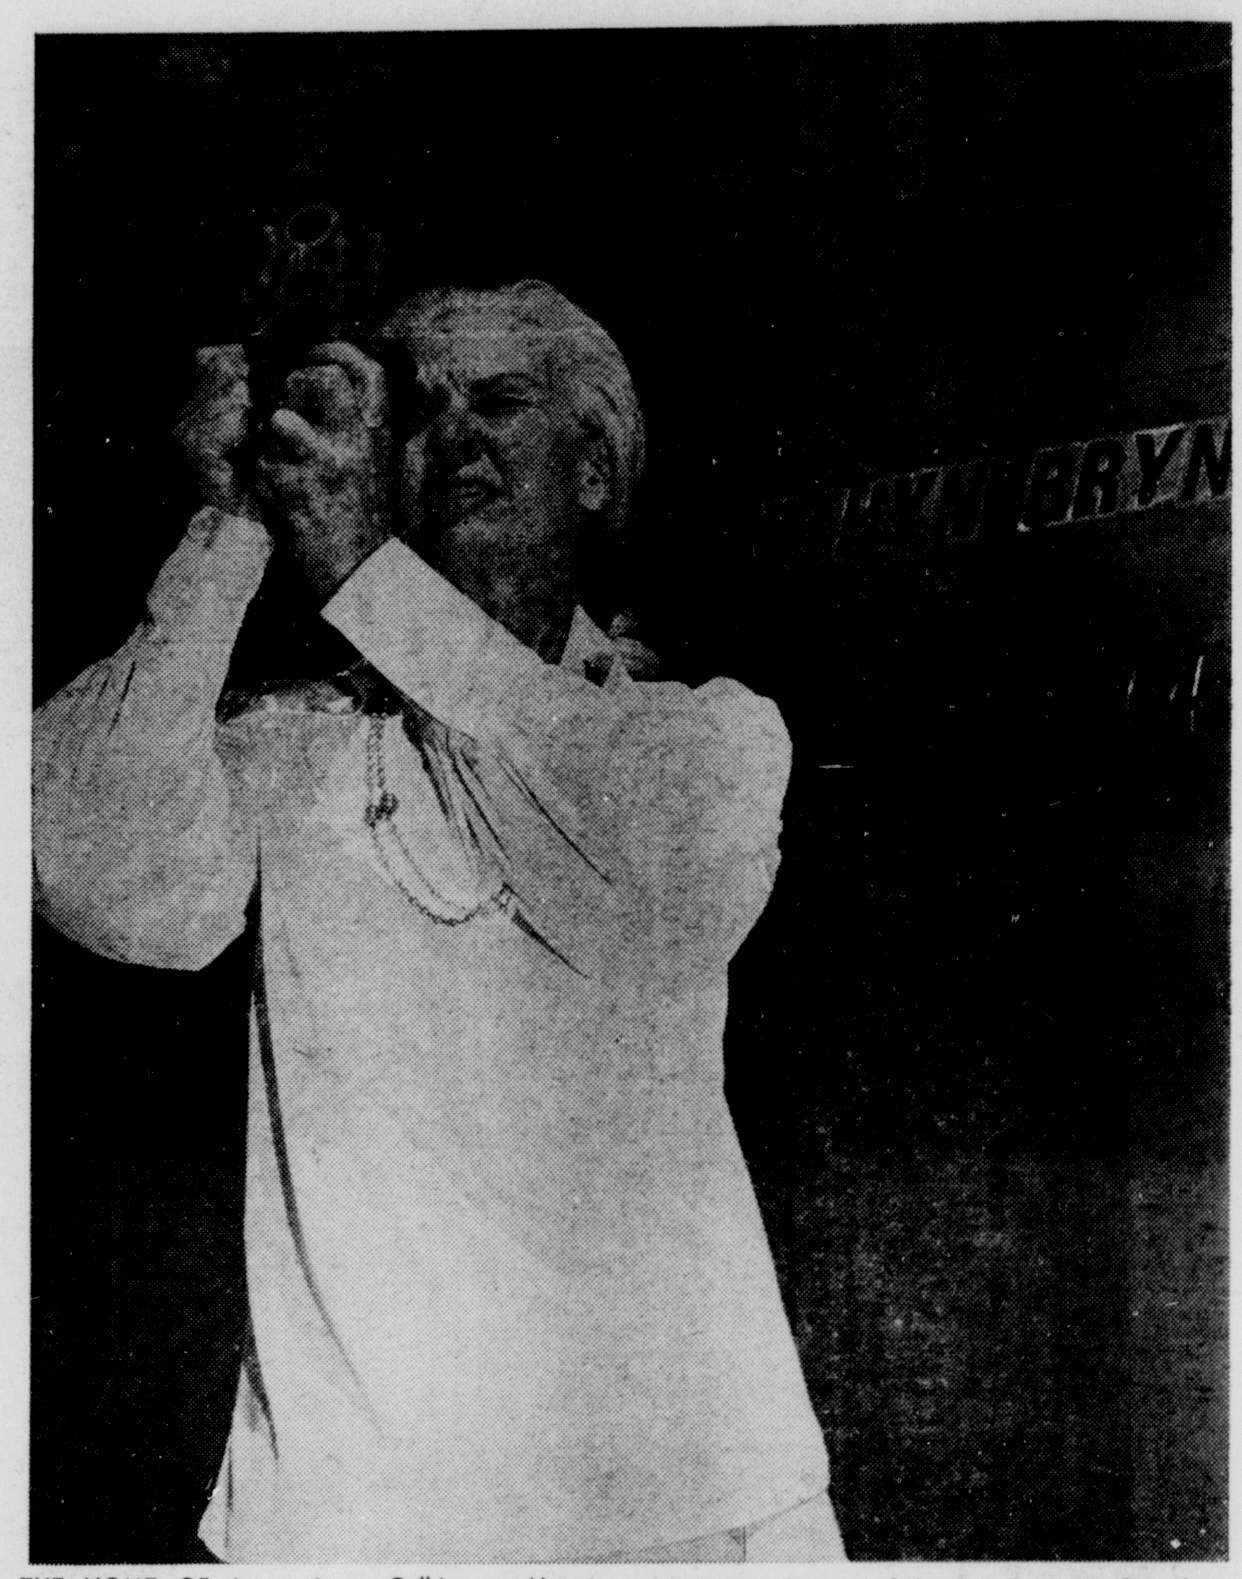
THUS, SHE says, groups like the Welsh-American Society, and the Northern California Cambrian Association, to which she also belongs, are always on the alert for opportunities to preserve the Welsh language and to encourage its use, both in the mother land, and overseas among persons of Welsh descent.

The movement, she adds, is meeting with considerable success.

"In Wales, it has become very, very fashionable these days to speak Welsh," she says. "The young people are our best hope, and not just the nationalists. All the youth seem to have become more aware of their heritage."

And in this country, where Welsh once seemed a dying language spoken only by a few reared in Welsh-speaking families, the language is now being studied by more and more young people attracted by its melodious quality.

SHE TELLS of the instructor at the University of California at Los Angeles who teaches classes in Welsh "even though he, himself, is of Irish ancestry."



THE HOME OF Jayne Jones Calkins on Mount Tamalpais above Mill Valley bears the name plate — "Bwthyn Bryn" — meaning Hill Cottage in Welsh. Here, in front of the house, Mrs. Calkins, Marin's most active member of the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area, sights through a sextant that belonged to Capt. Idwal Lewis, her uncle and the last surviving officers of the Lusitania.

Jayne Jones was actually American-born, at Utica, N.Y., but as a baby she was taken by her parents to the small North Wales town of Barmouth and spent her first years there. When she was 5, she was brought back to Utica, "speaking Welsh only."

At 6 she began her training for a career as a concert pianist, and she graduated from the Utica Conservatory of Music before an injury to her arm forced her to abandon those ambitions.

SHE THEN took a position with Doubleday and Co., book publishers.

Along with Wales and books, sailing is a subject that commands a special affection from her. For a time she and her late husband ran one of the country's most unusual bookstores, the Barkenstine Book Shop of Marina Dal Rey, Calif., specializing in nautical works.

Wrote Patrick M. Royce of Royce Publications: "Jayne Calkins probably knows more about the boating book field on the West Coast than anyone I know."

JAYNE CALKINS still enjoys a session at the piano, and also sings, having been for 15 years a member of Utica's Bach Choir. She has been active, too, in the theater, as an actress, musical director, costume coordinator, lighting director and singer.

At present her only such affiliation is with Theater Flamenco, a company headed by Adele Clara and Miguel Santos. Her connection there is the outgrowth of an earlier association with Chinin de Triana as his lighting designer. And she finds the link between herself, so staunchly Welsh, and the distinctive Spanish Gypsy music and dance not at all extraordinary, recalling that De Triano once told her that the Welsh and the Gypsies were related. "He read it in Federico Lorca."

Today, a widow, Mrs. Calkins works as a secretary for Bauman Brothers and Dick Miller Associates, yacht brokers and marine supply dealers, at Clipper Yacht Harbor, Sausalito, "and I love it because it keeps me near the boats."

SHE LIVES in a small house on Mount Tamalpais above Mill Valley which she describes as "resembling a ship's cabin that might have been cast, intact, from some old coastal schooner offshore during a violent storm and landed here safely, high and dry, among the trees where the raccoons come now to spend the evenings out on deck."

Then she smiles: "Unless we Welsh watch ourselves, we find ourselves talking like that."

Inside, amid momentoes of her beloved Wales and sailing, she edits the Welsh-American Society's Bay Area newsletter — the Pathau Cymraeg — which is issued every month and sent to some 600 addresses.

"I PUT A lot of time into it," she admits. "It sometimes seems as though I am working on it constantly."

But, she adds, its contributions toward the effort to keep alive Welsh culture and traditions makes the many hours of research, writing and production all worthwhile. The newsletter is mimeographed in Sausalito.

The Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area was founded in 1963 with Donna Davies of San Francisco taking the lead in its organization, aided by Jayne Calkins and two other Bay Area residents, Colin Edwards and Mary Cooper.

"WE WANTED to maintain our cultural background," says Mrs. Calkins, simply.

The organization has no chairman or president. Miss Davies is the executive secretary, Miss Cooper of San Francisco the treasurer, and Joan

Determined Welsh Keep Alive Their Heritage, Language

Marinites Join In Movement To Preserve People's Ways

Howell, yet another San Franciscan, the recording secretary.

The society, according to Jayne Calkins, often works in cooperation with the older Cambrian Association, although, she says, the younger group is the more active of the two organizations now.

THE CHOIR, 90 voices strong, hails from Rhymney Valley in South Wales, and will be flying from Cardiff to Oakland on Oct. 7. A performance Oct. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in San Francisco's Masonic Auditorium will be one of the highlights of that city's British Week observance.

In addition there will be appearances at Sacramento and Angwin.

Accompanying the choir will be Aeron Thomas, daughter of poet Dylan Thomas, who will read from the works of her famous father.

The appearance of Miss Thomas provides a special thrill for Jayne Calkins who says: "I met Dylan Thomas on several occasions and always found him a very, very warm person, with a great love for his country."

THE PENDYRUS Choir was formed in 1924 by out-of-work coal miners, and has since grown to virtuoso status, with vocalists from many vocations and backgrounds.

Under the direction of Glynne Jones, one of the foremost experts on Welsh music, the choir is recognized as their country's leading exponents of Cymric or Welsh-language choral music. Their program, however, will be varied, and include early classic, romantic and modern compositions from several countries and cultures, along with the favorite and most stirring of Wales' traditional songs.

While the Welsh singers are in the area they will be the guests of Bay Area Welsh-Americans.

SOME, SAYS Jayne Calkins, will be staying in Marin. "And most certainly we will be showing them the sights of Marin County."

Another project in the planning stage is a "nosen lawen" or "happy evening" to be conducted Sept. 19 starting at 4 p.m. in the Trinity Methodist Church in San Francisco, with "everyone of Welsh background, or interested in Welsh culture, invited to attend."

The event will be staged in the traditional style of Wales in the time before radio and television when neighbors would gather in the farmhouses to provide their own entertainment — by singing, by reading poetry, by playing the harp or some other instrument."

OFTEN AT these happy evenings the talent was found for the national Eisteddfod, which alternates annually between North and South Wales, and the international Eiseteddfod, held always at Llangollen.

The two great music festivals and competitions are still Wales' major event of the year. And Welsh-Americans are proud that a choir from Detroit won a recent international Eiseteddfod title.

On the West Coast, the only true Welsh choir is sponsored by the Pacific Coast's lone Welsh-language church in Los Angeles.

BUT MEMBERS of the Northern California Cambrian Association have banded together to sing in Welsh as they did in 1969 at San Francisco ceremonies in conjunction with the investiture of Prince Charles.

The Cambrians, whose membership overlaps with the Welsh-American Society, have an impressive history of musical activities that include a national song festival of "gymanfa ganu" in San Francisco in 1960. The national event was held in Los Angeles in 1966.

Mrs. Calkins says the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area currently has an active membership of about 200, of whom "easily between 60 and 75 live in Marin County."

BUT THIS, she adds, is only a small fraction of the Bay Area's population that can claim Welsh descent.

"So well integrated is most of the Welsh population that it has lost its identity," she says with some sadness. "They have melted into the pot, and have disappeared."

What is it about Northern California that has attracted so many people of Welsh, Scottish, Irish and English descent to its cities, towns and countryside?

"I THINK we are lured here by the fact that the climate and the topology of the Northern California coast is so similar to that of our mother countries," Mrs. Calkins answers.

Marin County, in particular, impresses her with its similarities to Wales, and she often refers to this country as "Little Wales Beyond the Golden Gate" in her more poetic writings in Pethau Cymraeg.

There is, she says, a stretch of shoreline "just before you come into Stinson Beach" that she finds almost identical to the coastal contours around historic Harlech Castle in North Wales to which she returns frequently.

JAYNE CALKINS would like to see more of the Bay Area's Welsh-Americans enlist in the society's effort to preserve the language and traditions of Wales.

The organization meets once a month, usually in San Francisco, sometimes in a restaurant, but most often in the colorful and roomy Edinburgh Tavern of San Francisco's Geary Street.

She finds it not at all strange that a Welsh organization should gather in a Scottish tavern among the tartans and the pipes.

"THE WELSH and the Scottish have always had a strong affinity for one another," she says. "They have shared so much in their histories. The same holds true of the Scottish and the Irish."

Edinburgh Tavern gives the society's membership access to a piano in the upstairs dining and meeting room — "the Welsh just cannot get together without some singing" — plus tasty fish and chips served up in rolled newspapers in true British style.

A prime attraction of the society is its "discount rate" tour program made possible by an affiliation with the British Commonwealth Association of San Francisco and the British-American Club of Northern California Inc.

WELSH-AMERICAN Society members are frequent travelers to Wales, either with the charter groups or on their own.

"Sometimes," says Jayne Calkins, "in the summers, there are so many of us in Wales that we have a difficult time attracting a good turnout for our functions at home."

Other Welsh-Americans prefer to time their trips back to the homeland for the Christmas season to enjoy the traditional, less commercialized holiday observance so unforgettable described by Dylan Thomas.

How do today's Welsh-Americans feel about the nationalists and the separatists working and agitating for full or a greater degree of independnece for Wales?

AT FIRST, Jayne Calkins admits, there was a tendency to regard them with misgivings, possibly as dangerous radicals.

But now, she says, the responsible nationalists have the moral support of their American kinsmen. "We have come to recognize that they are patriots. They are going quietly and wisely about their work. And we are strongly behind them."

Separation, she admits, is most unlikely. But an achievement that might well be realized, she feels, is a fairer, larger representation for Wales in the British Parliament.

AND, OF course, the all-im-

MARIN COUNTY, says Jayne Jones Calkins, bears a distinct resemblance to Wales, probably one reason for its large Welsh population. For instance, she says, there is a stretch of coastline at and near Stinson Beach that is almost identical with the shoreline near Harlech Castle. At top is an Independent-Journal photograph of Stinson Beach. And at left is a picture of the panorama that unfolds when one looks down upon the seas from the high ground upon which stands formidable Harlech Castle. In the background can be seen the mountains of Snowdon. It is one of the most spectacular views in a country famous for its vistas. The photo is reproduced from the book "North Wales in Pictures," published by Oldhams Press Ltd. and filled with memorable Welsh scenery. There is an introduction by Lady Megan Lloyd George.

portant "recognition of our language."

Another question: "How do Welsh-Americans — particularly older Welsh-Americans — feel about rock-and-roll singer Tom Jones, probably actor Richard Burton's only rival as the best-known living Welshman?

There was, Mrs. Calkins says, at first some indifference on the part of older Welsh-Americans towards Jones, primarily because of a dislike for his "gyrations."

BUT AS Jones progressed up the music ladder, he began to win over such critics, "especially the older women who responded to his personality."

"There is no doubt about his voice," says Jayne Calkins. "There is a great voice behind all the gimmickry."

And, she says, the tireless young entertainer with the heavy head of hair has "now entered a more productive period where he is providing a better and better quality of entertainment."

"But, of course," she admits, "we are especially impressed by his genuine love of his country. We respect and admire him for that."

MARY HOPKIN, a very pretty young, sweet-voiced singer, is another entertainer cited by Mrs. Calkins for her contributions toward reviving interest in the folk music and langauge of Wales.

In her issues of Pethau Cymraeg for which she writes and edits as Jayne Pruddarch ("a Welsh family name"), she covers a wide range of subjects.

There are news items on upcoming meetings and special events and upon the tour program. There are reports on events that have taken place during the past month. There are items about members who have traveled abroad, usually to Wales, or who have entertained guests from overseas, along with other newsy tidbits. There are reviews of books about Wales or by Welsh writers. There are updatings on the current doings of Welsh celebrities. There are tidings from the homeland.

THERE ARE descriptive passages about Welsh cities, villages and countryside.

Jayne Calkins is especially disturbed by the erroneous picture some Americans have of Wales — of a region devastated by coal mining.

"The mining scars are restricted to South Wales and to the area around Cardiff," she says. "There is no more beautiful and unspoiled countryside to be found anywhere than in Wales, and particularly in North Wales."

Visitors, once exposed to Snowdonia National Park, or to any of Wales' other many scenic areas, return singing the praises of the country and anxious to return, she notes.

Writing in a recent issue, she declared:

"As many of you well know, I have never had any doubt that it was in fact Prince Madoc who discovered America in 1170 — that's more than three centuries before Columbus. Just a year ago I devoted considerable space to this topic, and proclaimed that we would one day be observing Prince Madoc Day.

"NOW THERE is a new book which bears out all I have found myself and a great deal more to substantiate what should now be accepted as perfectly logical.

"As previously stated, there were 72 works listed in a 'Bibliography of Pre-Columbian Discoveries' on Madoc's discovery, the earliest of which appeared in 1584. More recent, in 1876, Bowen's book, 'America Discovered by the Welsh,' was published in Philadelphia, followed by Deacon's book, 'Madoc and the Discovery of America,' in 1967."

IN MISS Pugh's new book, tremendous research establishes the existence of the Welsh Indians. And when you take into consideration that Welshmen have been sailors since 55 B.C., and the theory of the currents in the Atlantic Ocean between Wales and the Gulf of Mexico, it is quite conceivable that he did land in Mobile, Ala.

"Furthermore, he could have done it in a rowboat; it's being done today. So that rules out the idea that they didn't have the proper craft for such a voyage.

"Moreover, the Welsh-speaking Indians were using coracles when they were discovered by later explorers. These they could have learned to make, only from the Welsh. There is no end to the fascination of this subject."

JAYNE CALKINS challenges: "Read this book yourself and you will become a believer and join the crowd that does."

Earlier she had reported proudly that the Virginia Cavalier Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution had erected a memorial tablet on Mobile Bay commemorating the Welsh prince's landing.

Another article dealt with Dr.

THE PENDYRUS CHOIR of 90 male voices, recognized as Wales' leading exponents of choral music in the Welsh language, will present an international program Oct. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in San Francisco's Masonic Auditorium as part of the British Week observance. The Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area will help entertain the singers during their California stay, and a number of the choir members will be the guests of Marinites of Welsh descent.

THE CORACLE, editor Jayne Calkins informed the readers of her Welsh-American Society newsletter, is the distinctive circular boat that the Welsh have used for centuries, and which the fishermen of Wales continue to employ today. Light in weight, they require a special skill in paddling, and they have long fascinated historians.

Wales: A Friendly And Proud Land

R. Elfyn Hughes of Ffestiniog, director of the Nature Conservancy in Wales and a pioneer teacher of ecology at the University of Wales more than two decades ago.

A STORY detailing his achievements preceded a visit by Dr. Hughes to California and his attendance as guest of honor at a Welsh-American Society function. Proudly Mrs. Calkins wrote later: "Professor Hughes (in a visit to Bwthyn Bryn) inspected my Welsh library and stated it was the best private collection he had seen."

And from the newsletter readers pick up such bits as:

"Then there was the captain of the Mayflower, who was a fellow named Jones, and among the Puritans who left England with him were many Welshmen."

"THE LAST surviving officer of the Lusitania is Capt. Idwal Lewis, of Stockton, who happens to be my uncle."

"Coracles... have always been a source of historical interest to mariners through the centuries, and are still in use today in some parts of Wales by fishermen, especially by salmon fishers on the River Severn and the Wye. Coracles were circular in form and made of skins stretched across a wicker framework."

"ONE OF the best contributors to California history was Welshman Idwal Jones, best known for his book 'Vermilion.' However, he wrote more than 200 stories and vignettes of California history, literature and folklore."

And: "Some of the best gymanfa ganus on the West Coast are held at a little church in Beaver Creek near Portland in Oregon."

Mrs. Calkins is proud of a letter she received from Dr. Islyn Thomas, president of the St. David's Society of the State of New York, in which he wrote:

"At our quarterly meeting I was presented with a copy of Pethau Cymraeg. This indeed was very interesting and you should be congratulated on an excellent Welsh newspaper.

"I WONDER if I could also become a member of the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area? The reason, of course, is to know what is going on in your area in Welsh affairs so that I can then advise Welsh Americans on the East Coast as to what is happening out there."

Jayne Calkins, however, is quick to point out that she is not the only Marinite active in Welsh affairs.

Byron Joes, for instance, and now daughter Rebecca, have played leading roles in popularizing Welsh music along with their contributions to Bay Area music generally.

BUT THAT, says Jayne Calkins, is only the beginning of the roll call of Marinites who are taking part in the campaign to keep alive their language and other associations with the bonnie — to borrow an adjective from the friendly Scots — land from whence came their forefathers.

Jayne Jones Calkins acknowledges, however, that they still have a very, very long way to go before her dream of a Prince Madoc's Day observance in America comes trues.

Until then she must settle for St. David's Day observance in March, annually marked by Northern California's Welsh with a banquet under Cambrian Association sponsorship, and with the wearing of the leek and the daffodil.

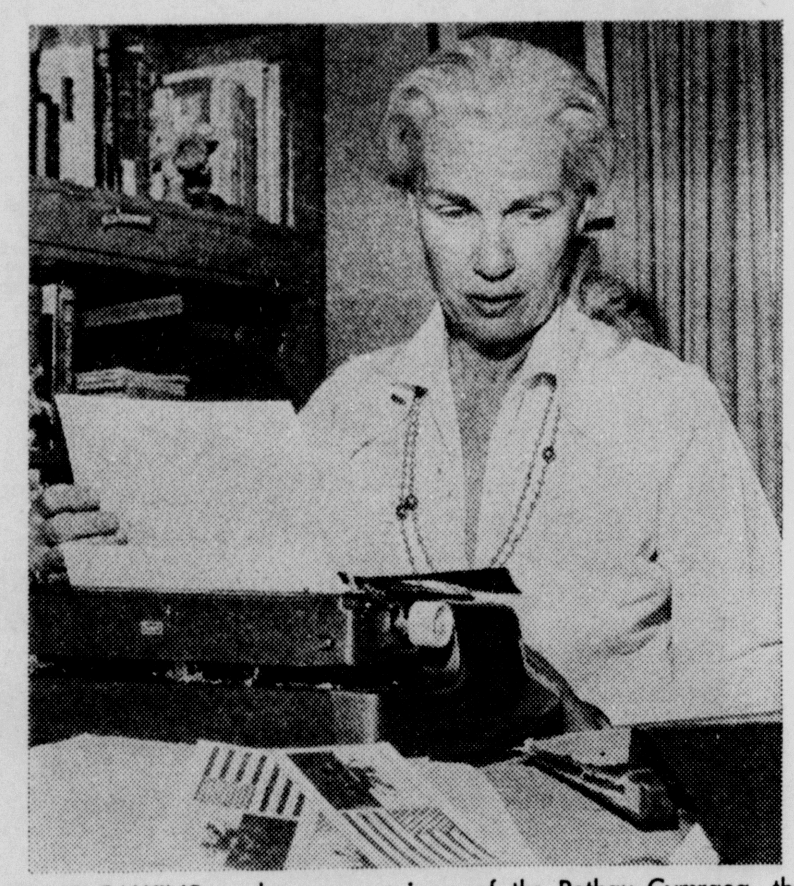
And annually the singing Welsh, the people from the land of the Joneses, the Hugheses and the Evanses, lift their voices in the singing of the national anthem, "Hen Wlad Fy Nhadau."

Chance listeners may not understand the words. But there is no mistaking the patriotic fervor behind the voices, nor the determination of the singers that it shall indeed be "Cymru nam byth — Wales forever!"



JAYNE CALKINS works upon an issue of the Pethau Cymraeg, the monthly newsletter of the Welsh-American Society of the San Francisco Bay Area, which she edits. She signs the newsletter Jayne Pruddcarch — "one of my Welsh family names." And intense research precedes the writing of each issue.

Marin Has Nation's Most Honored Chow In Champion Lin Fa

Sausalito-Owned Dog Has Won Trophies And Degrees Galore

By JEFF GREER

The best-educated Chow Chow dog in the United States lives in Sausalito. She is Champion Hung Jai Lin Fa, CD, CDX, UD.

That's about the equivalent of a human beauty queen winning the Miss America title, a bachelor of arts, a master's degree and a doctorate of philosophy.

Lin Fa's owner, Prudence Baxter, has one wall of her Cloudview Drive home adorned with Lin Fa's diplomas and trophies earned in official American Kennel Club competition.

ACCORDING TO the AKC, the Sausalito Chow Chow was only the seventh of her breed in the nation to win the CSX — Companion Dog, Excellent degree — three years ago. When she passed the trials for UD — Utility Dog — this summer, she became the first and only example of her breed to win that honor in this country, the AKC reported.

Mrs. Mrs. Baxter bought Lin Fa as a fuzzy, red puppy a little more than five years ago, she held little thought of ever showing her pet or training it in obedience, she said. Her main interest was sports car driving, a hobby in which she began collecting trophies before becoming involved in the dog show ring.

"I don't ever let Lin Fa hear this, but I bought her just as a pet," her proud owner said. "Then we got interested in obedience classes."

LIN FA DID a lot to dispel the public's image of Chow Chows as aloof, sometimes cross creatures that are hard to train. After a few months of training, she won her first title — Companion Dog — in three straight competitions, scoring 195 of a possible 200 points in one of the trials.

The young obedience ring star was one-year-old then. A year later she had learned the complexities of the exercises for the Companion Dog Excellent degree.

In obedience competition, the dog and handler are scored by the judge on how well they perform the required routine, including walking, halting, turns, fast and slow gaits, broad jump and high jump tests.

THE DOG MUST retrieve gloves deliberately dropped during the walks around the ring, and then choose and retrieve one little dumbbell from among several tossed onto the ground. The correct dumbbell is different from the others only in that it has been rubbed in the trainer's hands to leave a scent.

Lin Fa, at the same time she was mastering all these lessons, was competing for her "bench" championship. There, she was judged for her "beauty" among Chow Chows, as defined in a breed standard set by the AKC and compared with other Chows in competition.

She earned her championship in 1970.

About the only peak left to climb for Lin Fa and her owner is the UDT — Utility Dog, Tracking — obedience degree. Mrs. Baxter plans to start that difficult training this fall. At the moment she is busy with preparations for the Sir Francis Drake Kennel Club's annual show, which will bring more than 2,000 dogs of all breeds to the Peacock Gap Country Club on Sept. 19.

EXPERIENCED dog show enthusiasts usually don't think of a Chow Chow as being able to sniff out trails like a Bloodhound or a Bird Dog, but the history books say Chinese emperors used Chows for hunting centuries ago.

The official AKC Handbook said that "perhaps the most unusual and lavish kennel in all history was the one maintained by a T'ang emperor of about the Seventh Century AD . . . it housed 2,500 couples of 'hounds' of the Chow type."

The Chow dog's massive head, heavy coat and tail carried tightly over his back identify it as an Arctic breed, and

IT WAS HER ABILITY to select the right dumbbell — the one carrying the faint scent of her trainer's hands — from among several dropped in a show ring that earned Champion Hung Jai Lin Fa her Utility Degree and made the Chow Chow's owner, Prudence Baxter of Sausalito, a proud woman. Just a few of the trophies can be seen in the background. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE CHOW CHOW, according to some sources, is supposed to be an aloof or even hostile dog. But these friendly Chow puppies romping with their mistress, Prudence Baxter, are obviously unaware of any such reputation, and undeserving of it.

his traditional black tongue and black mouth make experts think he may have been one of the original breeds from which sprang the Samoyed, the Pomeranian and other Arctic breeds. The distinctive mouth pigmentation is required by the standard.

ENGLISH TRADERS and explorers knew about the Chow more than 200 years ago; a trader for the East India Company brought a pair — then known as Cantonese Dogs — to England in the 1780s.

Chinese breeders did not call the dog Chow Chow, the books relate. In their home nation, they were known as Cantonese, "black tongued dogs" or "Wonk," which was also a generic term for dog.

Some historians maintain that the Chinese also bred the dog for meat, and that Chow Chow was pidgin English for "food."

English breeders began showing them extensively before World War I. The first major show specimen brought to the United States was Brilliantine, a male Chow sold to a Chicago breeder, Mrs. Earl Hoover, for $10,000 in 1918.

SINCE THEN, the breed has spread across the country, though never in large numbers — partly because of public trepidation about the manners of the lion-like dogs.

"After all, the breed had been trained for centuries to be aloof," Mrs. Baxter explained. Her little group of Chows belied their fierce looks while they sniffed a visitor — their tails wagged. And suddenly, Lin Fa poked out a paw, offering to shake hands.

Marin County's annual dog show, the Sir Francis Drake Kennel Club competition at Peacock Gap, always attracts a relatively large Chow entry. Last year there were 16 in competition; this year's judge, Miss Iris de la Torre Bueno of New Rochelle, N.Y., is expected to have an even larger entry to look over on Sept. 19.

Twenty other judges will be handing out the ribbons for more than 100 other breeds at the day-long event.

NOT ONLY DOES Prudence Baxter have a champion Chow Chow at her home on Cloudview Drive in Sausalito, but she feels she also has some future champions in her puppies such as appealing Cricket.

EDWINA CODONI, principal of San Rafael's Coleman School, is looking forward to her 39th year of school work with the same zest that has marked all her previous 38 years as a teacher and an administrator. Thirty-five of those years have been spent in the San Rafael system.

Edwina Codoni Eager For 39th Year In Education

By MARY LEYDECKER

Even after 38 years in education, San Rafael's Edwina Codoni said the "thrill and challenge" is still there for her as school opens this fall.

"I'm ready — I've had enough vacation," she said in an interview at her San Rafael home.

"Every year is different. This year, for example, there's the new rug for the kindergarten that took us seven years to get."

MISS CODONI, her bright eyes sparkling, described the long road that led to her present position as principal of Coleman School, a job she has had for seven years.

"Anyone is lucky who gets to do what he wants to do," she explained. "I can't remember when I didn't want to be a teacher. I try to understand young people who say they don't know what they want to do — but I don't really understand them, because I always knew I wanted to be a teacher."

Miss Codoni was born 60 years ago this month in Point Reyes Station, where her father was working as a store clerk. Her parents had lived briefly in Turlock before she was born but her mother became homesick for "The Hills of Home," as she referred to her native Marin, and the family returned.

HER FATHER later was a car dealer in San Rafael and Miss Codoni attended B Street and E Street schools and then San Rafael High School.

After graduating from the teachers college that is now San Francisco State, Miss Codoni started looking for a job in 1933 when "there just were no openings for teachers."

She went on to say that teachers who had not had at least three years of experience could not even apply for jobs in San Rafael.

SO SHE WENT to the rural areas of the state in search for a job and finally found one in the Natividad District in the Salinas Valley where she spent a year in a one-room school.

"If I had my way, I would put all beginning teachers in one-room schools where they'd have to solve all their own problems," the principal declared.

She also compared the non-graded classes popular today with the old one-room schools, saying "We've gone back to what we used to do."

AFTER TWO MORE years at rural schools in West Marin, Miss Codoni landed a job with the San Rafael School District where she has since taught in almost every school in town.

Reflecting over her many years in education, the principal said, "Today we know — tomorrow we know better," referring to changes in school methods.

Many of the changes she praised.

"We don't sit children in rows any more," she said. And the greater flexibility and freedom in classrooms means that "we don't have to have nearly so many recesses."

NEW MATH AND new science are also welcome changes to Miss Codoni, who said, "When we were young, we were taught there was only one way to do a thing. Now we learn there are many."

The volunteer parents who help at her school were also praised by the principal. These parents offer help with such subjects as French, sewing, typing and drama, she said.

The principal also explained some of her own views about education.

"Teachers talk too much," she said. "We don't listen enough to children."

To young teachers, she said, she gives this advice: "Get out (of the field) right now if you don't like children."

Her eyes lighted up when she said, "We hold our breath and make a wish when we go through the tunnel," describing a bit of children's folklore long popular in connection with the Waldo Tunnel.

"Now they have that beautiful rainbow — it's the most beautiful thing the highway department could have done for children," she added.

On a more serious note, she said that the word "accountability" currently popular in education circles, is "not a bad word."

The Pipe Organ Comes Back

By DON KEOWN

In this age of the amplified guitar and rousing big beat vocals, 20-year-old Robert George (Buddy) Kurz' favorite instrument is the pipe organ and his favorite music the mellow dance and swing tunes of the 1930s.

Young Kurz not only listens to and plays pipe organs — preferably the huge theater organs that are the survivors of another era — but he is also making a professional of installing the mammoth music-makers.

He has just completed the installation of his third such pipe organ, this one for the Marin Pizza Pub at 526 Third Street, San Rafael, across the street from the Montecito Shopping Center.

"Well," corrects Buddy, "you can't really say that I have completed it yet, even though it is in use. There will be some finishing touches that I will be taking care of for some time yet. There is always something to be adjusted, hooked up, fixed or tuned. It's a long, drawn-out process, before you have an organ just right."

YOUNG KURZ says he plans to remain a professional pipe organ installer "just as long as there is a call for this kind of work."

And right now the pipe organ is riding a wave of revived interest that is causing it to be rescued from dusty storerooms and returned to use in pizza palaces, restaurants, cocktail lounges and even private homes.

And although handbells, guitars and jazz and rock ensembles are all being heard these days inside the churches, the church pipe organ, a smaller sister of the theater organ, is still the standard provider of the music that many religions regard as conducive and even essential to their worship.

BUDDY KURZ' own affection for the pipe organ originated when as an 11-year-old in Vallejo, where he was born and reared, he began taking organ lessons.

It wasn't long before he was playing in churches for worship services and Sunday school classes.

The organ lessons continued for three years and in the third year were combined with piano instruction. "And I really got to be pretty good," says Buddy.

"Then I just dropped it completely," he says. "I really only intended to take a short vacation from the organ. But I became involved in other interests, and I was a long time getting back to it."

ONE OF THOSE interests was a job for two and a half years with a television repair shop. "A little side trip away from the pipe organ," is how he describes it today.

But he adds that the experience in television repairs — in the use of his hands — has served him in good stead in his work with the much larger but in some ways no less delicate and finicky pipe organ.

"I was always mechanically inclined and liked to fool around, doing or repairing things, with my hands," he says.

BUT EVEN during those years when he was not around pipe organs, his interest in the instruments and the music they produce remained deeply ingrained.

"While I was working at the TV shop I bought myself a tape recorder," he recalls, "and pipe organ music was the very first thing I recorded."

The hiatus ended with the purchase of a player piano. "That transaction put me into contact with people who were interested in pipe organs, and got me to thinking about them again."

Sharing Buddy's keen interest was his mother, Mrs. Robert Kurz, who also plays the organ and who already had a Hammond electronic organ in her home for her pleasure.

BOTH MOTHER and son, however, preferred the sound of the pipe organ to that of the electronic organ. So when they heard that a pipe organ owner in Cupertino was interested in selling his instrument because he was moving into a smaller home, they decided to investigate.

"We learned about the organ through a friend," Buddy says. "The fellow had purchased it from a church that in turn had acquired it from the manufacturer in the 1920s. He had then installed it in his home and had been using it."

The Kurzes tested the organ with Mrs. Kurz at the keyboard "and it sounded good." So, in July of 1969, they made the acquisition for $800, and Buddy set about his first pipe organ installation job in his own home.

LATER THE Kurzes sighted a newspaper advertisement that offered a larger pipe organ for $1,500.

This instrument had originally been acquired by the Leatherby Organ Co. of San Francisco, now the Rogers Organ Co., in about 1925 and used for demonstration purposes in its place of business.

Then, in 1943, a parish in Salinas had bought the organ and installed it in the Roman Catholic church there.

"We knew that once a pipe organ is advertised for sale, it is likely to be sold within hours," recalls Buddy. "So we took off for Salinas immediately."

AGAIN THE Kurzes bought themselves a pipe organ. As Buddy installed this larger organ in the Kurz home, he cannibalized parts from the smaller organ the family already owned — "we sold the rest of it" — and the result was that "we wound up with a better instrument than either of the two organs we had bought."

Buddy smiles: "At that time we had in our home one pipe organ, one electronic organ and two pianos."

A younger brother, 10, began learning to play the organ so that he, too, could enjoy the new possession along with his mother and Buddy. The father, Robert Kurz, confines his music to the harmonica.

ISN'T A PIPE organ overpowering in a private home?

"Not," says Buddy, "if you are talking about a studio or small church organ. They are fine in a home. But with a full-sized theater organ, well, then you do have a problem with the volume."

Buddy explains that pipe organs fall into two general categories — the theater organ, and the church organ.

"The church organ, of course, is still being manufactured and very much in demand," he says. "But the last of the theater organs was built in the very early 1930s."

THEIR PURPOSE, he explains, was to provide an accompaniment to and intermission music for the silent movies. And when the silent pictures gave way to "talkies," the theater organs fell into disuse.

Many of these great instruments were stored away in basements and warehouses, and allowed to collect dust and to rust.

The manufacturing companies closed their doors. "I know of only one that managed to survived because it also manufactured church organs," says Kurz, a student of their histories. "Now it produces church organs exclusively."

WITH THE installation of the second pipe organ in the Kurz home, Buddy Kurz had hit upon what was to be, for a time at least, his career. With interest in pipe organs soaring, he would, he decided, become a professional installer.

His first "outside" job also brought him into his first contact with a theater organ.

Charles Davis of Concord had acquired a Robert Morton Theater Organ for his home. It had been installed. Not surprisingly, it was too loud. Buddy Kurz accepted the assignment of cutting its volume and doing other finishing work.

This job was to lead him to Marin County and to his first full-scale installation of a theater organ.

DINO SANTRIZOS and John Wallace were making plans for their new Marin Pizza Pub in San Rafael. Spurred by the example of a Hayward restaurateur who had installed a theater organ in his place of business and boosted his trade tremendously, the partners decided that their pizza palace should also feature one of the big organs.

The organ that they eventually obtained was, like the one upon which Buddy Kurz had worked in Concord, a Robert Morton-built instrument.

It had begun its service in the Peninsula Theater, now the Fox Theater, in Burlingame. Then, for years, it had gone unused and ignored.

"IN ABOUT 1955," says Buddy Kurz, "it was removed by a man who is now a friend of mine. He stored it for a time, then sold it to a fellow in Southern California who installed it in part in his home. Eventually he sold it to a man in San Francisco, and it was that buyer who sold it to the Pizza Pub."

Charles Davis, pleased with the work done on his own organ by Buddy Kurz, suggested to the San Francisco seller that he recommend to the newest owners of the huge organ the employment of the young Vallejo installer.

Santrizos and Wallace acted on the recommendation, and Buddy Kurz has been living with Santrizos at his home at 4 Elaine Way, San Rafael, while making the installation.

"WE HAD AN opening day deadline to meet, and that meant I had a full-time job on my hands and more," says Buddy. "I was working 14 hours a day, seven days a week."

"You size them by the number of sets of pipes," he explains. "This one has 13 such sets. But that means 1,045 individual pipes."

The pipes have been set in a chamber with a glass window so that pub patrons can see them.

"ORDINARILY, installed in a theater, you wouldn't see the pipes and other works," Buddy says. "You would see only the ornamental grill."

The console is a decorated white and gold, "a handsome piece of furniture," and the instrument itself "was very good as it was built by the factory," but through time and neglect had deteriorated seriously until it fell into the expert and loving hands of Buddy Kurz.

Along with the pipes, the Pizza Pub organ has all the usual extra instrument hook-ups — a calliope, a piano, a set of drums, xylophone, glockenspiel, tamborine, castinets, marimba, etc.

BUDDY SAYS he would like to remain in Marin — "it's a wonderful area" — but that in his new profession "I will have to go where the work is."

Already he has a new assignment in Martinez and is commuting between here and there, dividing his time between two jobs as he puts the finishing touches on the Marin Pizza Pub organ. "That work will go on yet for some time," he says. "There is still a lot to be done."

"I'M REALLY having to start all over, from the beginning," he says. "It is amazing how much I have forgotten."

He particularly admires the talent of Bill McCoy who is heard Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays, "and who is a pipe organ virtuoso of concert stature."

MOST OF Buddy's favorite tunes are pieces from the 1920s and 1930s, the heydays of the theater organ and the swing band. "But I also like some of the newer music," providing, of course it is adaptable to the pipe organ.

"Most people think of the pipe organ only in terms of the church organ and the slow measure of religious music," Buddy Kurz says. "But the theater organ was used to play all kinds of music, much of it quite lively and spirited."

A really talented organist can play either the church organ or the theater organ, and either religious or popular music, with equal ability, says Buddy, "although the theater organ is the more difficult of the two."

WHAT IS there about the pipe organ that makes it so irresistible to Buddy Kurz and to a growing number of other buffs?

"It is the most versatile single instrument in existence," he answers. "Upon a single organ an entire orchestral arrangement can be played — complete. In fact they were called unit orchestras in their early years because they replaced entire orchestras in the theater. Instead of an entire ensemble, the theater manager needed to hire only one musician — the organist."

For the silent movies there was another major advantage. "The organist could follow the action and the mood of the pictures much more closely and so coordinate his music with the story. He could improvise, play it cold, whereas the orchestra had to stay with its score."

ON THE OTHER hand, the theater organ offered much more volume and a far greater emotional impact than did the piano played in many motion picture palaces, especially the smaller theaters.

Yet another attraction of the pipe organ for Buddy Kurz is the fact that it is an instrument that is largely handmade. "Very little of it can be mass produced, and even today, in this age of the assembly line, a lot of handwork goes into the building of an organ."

"JUST HOW carefully the manufacturers went about the construction of their organs is demonstrated by the fact that so many of these instruments have also survived this long span of time, even though most of them were subjected to years of disuse, neglect and even abuse," says Buddy.

George Wright, he adds, was the single artist most responsible for the renaissance of the theater organ.

Shall we ask pipe organ expert Buddy Kurz still one more question about his favorite subject?

All right. Then, what is the difference between the pipe organ and the calliope of circus fame?

"THE CALLIOPE," replies Buddy, "is a one-manual pipe organ with brass pipes."

He digs calliopes, too, does Buddy Kurz, young pipe organ authority, aficionado, performer and installer.

He insists he will stay with the profession of pipe organ installing "just as long as there is a call for that kind of work. I love it."

And right now his prospects are bright. A whole new generation has re-discovered a sound that once thrilled their grandparents. And even the amplified rock or jazz guitar seems a bit less impressive, one one has tuned in to the theater organ.

GETTING A DEMONSTRATION of the versatility of the Robert Morton theater organ installed in the Marin Pizza Pub in San Rafael from the installer, Buddy Kurz, is John Wallace, pizza chef and co-owner with Dino Santrizos of the eating place. A single pipe organ can play an entire orchestral score, Kurz points out.

There's More To Luau Than Just The Poi

The Travel Pages

The one dish most generally associated with Hawaii is poi, a thick, purplish-brown and gooey paste, mostly starch, that is traditionally eaten by scooping it out of a wooden bowl with the fingers.

It is made by pounding taro roots into a pulp and letting it ferment. The Hawaiians love poi but, truthfully, the average tourists can't stomach the stuff. The taste has to be acquired.

"The same isn't true about Hawaiian eating in general," report the travel experts at Continental Airlines. "There is a great culinary tradition in the islands, which teem with fresh fruit and fresh fish from the sea. There are many native Hawaiian foods and drinks and ethnic-type restaurants of every variety.

"Wherever you eat, you never have to worry. Hawaii is one of the healthiest places in the United States. The water is extremely pure and green vegetables, tomatoes, uncooked fruit, skin and all, may be eaten as you please."

PIG, ONCE A sacrificial symbol in Hawaii, is the main luau course. Having been cleaned, dressed, salted and bathed in shoyu sauce the entire carcass is stuffed with hot stones. Then the front and back legs are tied together and wrapped in chicken wire, to keep things from falling apart.

For the cooking itself there is a deep pit, where the fire has burned itself down to glowing embers. Before placing the hot-rock-filled pig on the embers, the hole is lined with sweet potatoes, cooking bananas, and often a collection of pork, butterfish and tender, spinach-like taro shoots, all wrapped in ti leaves.

The pig then goes in on top, with ti leaves and banana leaves covering everything to keep the steam from escaping. The pit is next sheeted with wet burlap and earth added to keep the heat inside.

THIS STEAM cooking takes four hours, at least, and at a native luau this time is usually well and wetly spent. By the time the pit is opened up and the pig and other goodies removed appetites are sharply honed, and things move swiftly so that the pig doesn't get cold. It's a tasty dish, indeed, with the tender meat falling off the bones.

Traditionally, it's eaten with poi, and fingers are used instead of knives and forks.

At many luaus there will be side dishes such as opihi, a salty black mollusk something like a small clam, and lomi lomi salmon, which is salmon heavily rubbed in chopped onions and tomatoes. On the other hand, poi — while you may not like the taste of the paste — is loaded with vitamin B, and is sometimes prescribed by island doctors for babies, delicate stomachs, ulcers and nervous disorders.

THERE ARE many Japanese restaurants, and even more good Chinese eating places. For something different, though, Continental Airlines suggests one of the island's many Korean cafes.

Like Mexican food, Korean dishes tend to be spicy and hot. Take kimchee, for instance, which is a merger of such vegetables as cabbage, turnips, onions and celery, pickled in garlic and red hot peppers.

If you want to give your friends a different-type souvenir you can buy kimchee in jars in Hawaiian supermarkets.

Another ethnic dish found in Hawaii is the Philippine bud bud, a concoction of rice, coconut milk and sugar steamed in a banana leaf and eaten with generous helpings of frothy hot chocolate. It's served for breakfast.

AN HAWAIIAN BOY has the help of his chums as he forages in a Honolulu seaside park for some breadfruit, a favorite on the Polynesian menu. The mealy fruit, which must be cooked before eating, is one of the exotic fruits enjoyed at the island luaus.

Canberra — Charming Capital

If today's real globetrotter were asked to rate the world's most charming capitals, Australia's Canberra might be within a rung or two of the No. 1 spot.

It is a thoroughly Australian city of about 125,000, but it has close American ties, for its original plan was drawn by an American architect, Walter Burley Griffin. Geographically, it is only a short jet hop from Sydney, Australia's largest city.

Canberra's central feature is seven-mile-long Lake Burley Griffin, which weaves through a carpet of rolling hills, airy shopping centers, government buildings, lovely parks and gardens and attractive residential areas. One of the best ways to get to know the city is via a 90-minute lake cruise.

There also are, of course, organized motor tours.

THE HEART OF downtown Canberra centers around Civic Square and the Theater Center. Here, the modernistic, large statue of Ethos sets the mood of open airiness to be found in the surrounding government buildings, theaters, art galleries, shops, restaurants and offices.

Among the cultural centers is the National Library of Australia. It is best for delving into the nation's background, but is also a place to view papers and diaries of famous statesmen and explorers. Included is the handwritten diary kept by Capt. James Cook on his discovery of Australia's eastern coast two centuries ago.

A Canberra landmark is the huge Australian War Memorial on Trelear Circle. Not far away, the eagle-topped shaft of the Australian American Memorial reflects the country's appreciation of United States aid in World War II.

STILL OTHER places of interest for the tourist include Parliament House and its landscaped grounds, the Royal Australian Mint and the foreign embassies, some of which reflect the architecture of their respective countries.

Canberra is noted, too, for its friendly people, its good hotels with modern amenities and its increasing number of first-class restaurants, but these inducements should not discourage the traveler from seeking out some of the attractions in the immediate vicinity.

These include visits to working sheep stations and a 12,000-acre fauna reserve with its koala bears, kangaroos and ostrich-like emus; folk-song sessions at an "outback" barbecue, and demonstrations of some typical aboriginal "sports" (e.g. boomerang throwing).

In winter, a popular vaction area is the Snowy Mountains region around Mount Kesciuske. This section also is the home of the so-called Snowy Mountains Scheme, one of Australia's greatest hydro-electric and irrigation projects.

Indonesian Shadow Plays Are Treats For Tourists

Every nation has its cultural specialists.

But nowhere in the world are there specialists quite so special as the dalangs of Indonesia, masters of what is probably the oldest show business art form in history, the wayang kulit or shadow play, which is seen in some version somewhere every night in the island republic.

Suparman (many Indonesians have only one name) is a dalang, a tall, slim, saturnine inheritor of an ancient profession who lives in a narrow, children-choked dirt road in the center of Jogjakarat, Java's great university city. His grandfather was a dalang. His 58-year-old father is a dalang, and Suparman, today 30, knows that his 7-year-old son will be a dalang when his education is complete.

TO ADD A note of femininity to the long line of male professionalism, Suparman's grandmother still plays in the four-piece xylophone orchestra which traditionally provides music for the wayang kulit.

Musician he is. But he is basically a story-teller in the great minstrel tradition.

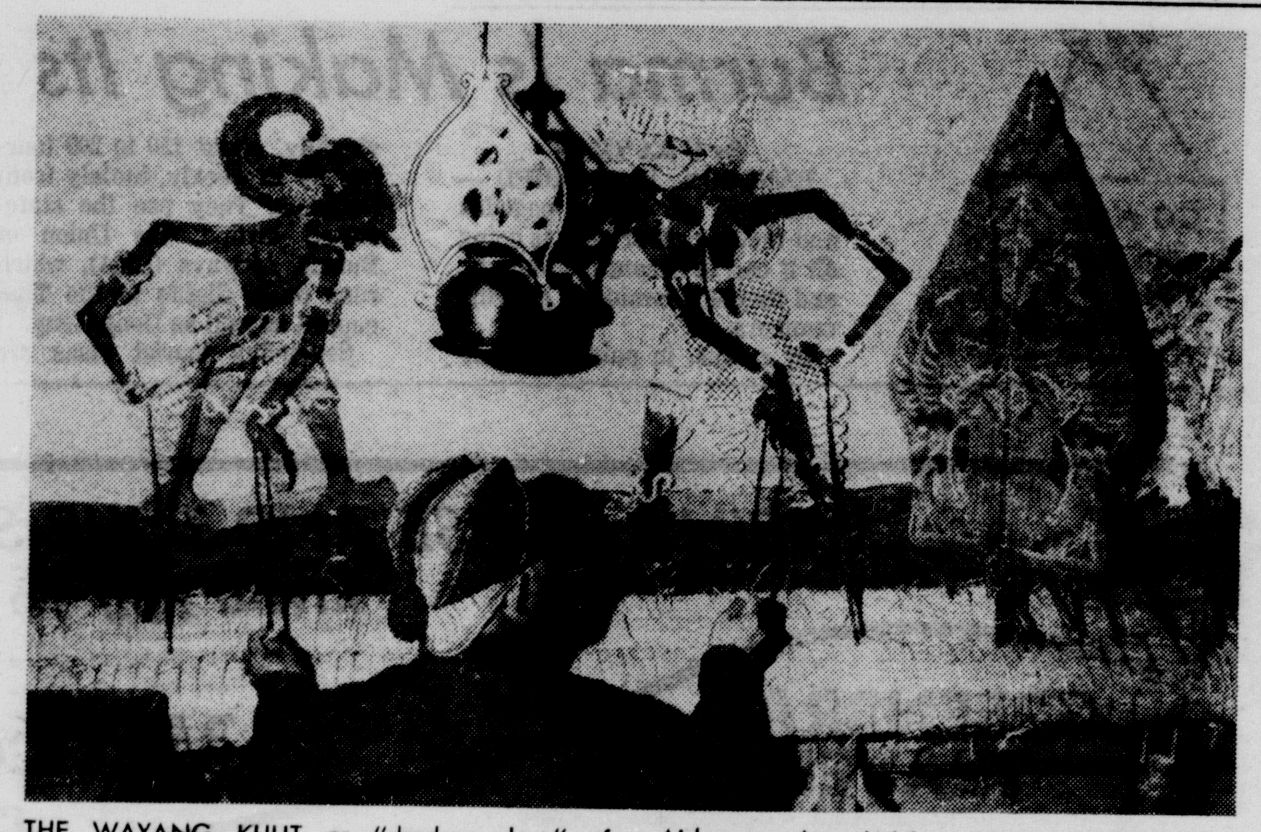
He is also a superb puppeteer, handling the puppet characters whose shadows appear on a lamp-lighted screen carrying the action to his audience with ease. And he may be an adept ventriloquist, for his voice takes many roles in many octaves as the play unfolds. He could be called a set creator, as well, for he personally makes many of the ritually decorated puppets cut from leather which are his actors.

AND, ALTHOUGH Suparman moves with languor, he could qualify as an athlete of sorts. A full dress wayang kulit play is no small-evening entertainment, for many of them begin around 9 at night and end at 6 the following morning.

It is unlikely that the Indonesian visitor swinging about the cities of Solo and Jogjakarta will have to sit for that long. Most present day performances, and Suparman makes some 15 of them each month, last about four hours, although his local audiences still insist on the 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. showtime.

Ostensibly, Suparman makes about 15,000 rupiahs a night when he works, or quite a bundle as Indonesian pay schedules go. He is vague when pressed on the rewards of the dalang buiness.

But there is no mistaking the pride he takes in simply being a dalang for as such he is quite literally a folk hero.



THE WAYANG KULIT or "shadow plays" of Indonesia began in the East Java court of King Airlangga who ruled from 1016 to 1045. Dalangs or story masters still guide their puppets through such epics as "The Ramayana."

Burma Is Making Its Bid For Tourist Trade

By U RA THAN

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — This land of golden pagodas and tinkling silver bells is doing all it can to encourage tourists, and they are coming in growing numbers.

In groups, in pairs and individually, about 150 to 200 tourists fly in weekly, mainly from Bangkok. They use the state-owned airline, the Union of Burma Airways (UBA), which runs daily flights to the Thai capital as well as Hong Kong.

Seven-day tourist visas are being issued freely by Burmese embassies abroad. This country, which was closed for nearly eight years, is now going all out to attract not only tourists but the influx of foreign currency which accompanies them.

THE COST FOR a seven-day visit here is probably the lowest in the world. Apart from airline fares, living expenses at international class hotels in Rangoon and guest houses elsewhere in Burma average about $14 per day, including room, full board, tips, guides and interpreters. There are no taxes such as a landing tax.

In an interview with UPI, Lt. Col. Maung Maung Nyunt, chairman of the board of UBA, spoke optimistically about the future of the tourist industry in Burma.

"Year by year we will improve our services," Maung Maung Nyunt said. "We have started the tourist service industry on a scale within our capabilities. Instead of waiting for all elaborate arrangements to be ready, we decided to go ahead and start now.

"In our favor is our innate sense of hsopitality and courtesy to guests. We do not have the commercial mentality that tends to mar the tourist service industry elsewhere."

Mandalay, immortalized by Kipling, is of course, a big attraction. So is Pagan, a city of ruins dating back from the time of the Norman conquest of England, and rivaling Cambodia's Angkor Wat in splendor of the 1,000-day-old edifices.

Mandalay is two hours flight from Rangoon. Pagan lies 120 miles south of Mandalay, on the banks of the Irrawaddy River. Known locally as the City of Four Million Pagodas, some 5,000 of which still survive, Pagan dates back to 107 A.D.

THE PINDAYA Caves, near Taunggyi, capital of the Shan States in eastern Burma, are another attraction. Thousands of Buddha images and shrines were carved into the rock by ancient craftsmen hundreds of years ago. Many have not been systematically explored, promising adventure to the adventurous-minded.

Then there's the Inle Lake, 5,000 feet above sea level surrounded by lofty mountain ranges. Villagers live on floating islands on the surface of the lake and even cultivate crops on their islands.

THE BOOK PAGES

A Giant Still Stands Tall, In Spite Of His Biographer

By DON KEOWN

Biographers of history's greatest personages undertake a most delicate assignment, for invariably their work requires them to judge the actions, motives and ethics of men and women who were, or are, their superiors.

When the subject is only recently dead or still living, the task becomes doubly difficult.

One outcome might be for the awe-struck biographer to shrink back from a complete chronicling and true evaluation of his subject, lapsing into a kind of idolatry or sychophancy that causes him to portray the man or woman even larger and more perfect than he or she was in real life — as a super being.

But another result might be the reverse, with the author so determined to demonstrate his professionalism and freedom from bias that he presents his subject in the very harshest and most unfair glare possible.

The book is admirable from the standpoint of its thoroughness. We are told that "Mr. Bishop spent more time on the research for this book than on any other project he has undertaken." And the reader, impressed with the immensity of the information packed into the book, cannot doubt this for a moment.

What dims — but does not destroy — the reader's enjoyment of all this effort is the decided anti-King tone that is struck repeatedly throughout the book.

Snide insinuations and innuendoes pop up with annoying frequency. And given a choice in prescribing a motive for a Martin Luther King Jr. action or decision, Bishop almost always selects the baser of the alternatives.

Yet enough of the author's personal opinion slips into his book to convince the reader that at heart Bishop is a King admirer. It is, one suspects, his determination not to let this esteem color his biography that has caused him to lean over backwards into nitpicking, second-guessing and fault-finding.

We are handed an early example of this on the book's very first page when Bishop writes of King: "He was shrewd; he was naive. He was courageous; he was cowardly. He was a leader, but not a strategist. . ."

Now Martin Luther King Jr. was not a man without fault. But those flaws most certainly did not encompass cowardice. No doubt he felt fear. And he could at times conduct himself with caution. But had he been a coward in any sense of that despised word, he would not have continued along the perilous path he followed, especially while burdened by the terrible presentiment of death by violence that he carried with him throughout his dangerous years.

Thus does Bishop give us advance notice that he intends to maintain a balance in his story and analysis of a man whose greatness far over shadowed his shortcomings.

It would be unfair to Bishop, however, to indicate that in his eagerness to avoid partiality he has created a biography too artificial to aid us in our understanding and appreciation of Martin Luther King Jr. and his passions for social justice and non-violence. All the details of King's life are there. One can easily soften Bishop's unsupported judgments and disregard the occasional irrelevancies that demean or belittle his subject.

It has become fashionable to excuse the violence and indignity to which the black has been subjected in Dixie in light of the neglect and hardships he has suffered also in the North, and to conclude that just, perhaps, the Negro in the South wasn't so bad off after all.

But it is no consolation to the patient, lying in bed in a hospital and rotting in agony with gangrene, to know that the man in the next room is dying from cancer.

And Bishop's book is replete with vicious and ignorant rednecks, brutal sheriffs, hypocritical preachers and politicians, insensitive business men and faint-hearted liberals who made life in the South a hell on earth for the misery-stricken blacks. It was these men whom Martin Luther King Jr. had to face almost daily while maintaining his stance of and faith in Christian non-violence. And it was these men who finally brought about his murder.

Jim Bishop gives no stock whatsoever to the theory that James Earl Ray acted alone and out of sheer race hatred when he fired the bullet that brought "The Days of Martin Luther King Jr." to an end in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

Bishop states with certainty that Ray was a hired killer, coached and prepared for the assassination by a "middle man" acting for the employer or employers.

While the dastardly killing dealt a stunning blow to Martin Luther King's thesis of nonviolence, already in serious trouble with restless young blacks, it in no way erased the contributions the black evangelist and his philosophy had made toward a better, more just America before he was struck down.

Whereas Bishop's book sometimes seems one long recitation of King's failure, stalemates and token victories, his summarization of the status of the civil rights movement nearing the time of its greatest leader's death speaks more accurately of his impact upon the American scene:

"More had been accomplished in 11 years than in the previous 100."

It is, then, unfair to label Marin Luther King Jr. a failure, just because he did not attain in full his dream of a utopian America. The record of his accomplishments confounds and contradicts his detractors. And even the competent and experienced Jim Bishop is thwarted in his attempt to reduce King's stature to less awesome dimensions.

King was one of those giants who walk among us only a few to a century. And he remains so after a reading of "The Days of Martin Luther King."

Sleuths & Suspense

A. C. Marin, we are told on the jacket of this novel, is a pseudonym of a writer who has published eight novels under his true name, plus two earlier suspense books as A. C. Marin.

Out of pride of place, we appeal to him that if he has any more novels in the works like "A Storm of Spears," he signs them A. C. Contra Costa, or A. C. Stanislaus, or any other name except Marin.

It is a cheap and shallow attempt to make capital of the controversy that erupted on Northern California college campuses a few years back. One instructor, Frank Charles, has an affair with an activist coed that leads to his entrapment and use by militants — controlled, naturally, from Peking. There are demonstrations, riots, drug-taking, secret paper stealing, undercover agents, sadistic beatings and a great deal of sexuality, none of it convincing or particularly interesting.

"HANDWRITING is an action that is habitual. Whatever trait a person shows in one type of action that is habitual, he tends to show in every other type of habitual action. Therefore, whatever trait a person shows in his handwriting he tends to show in every other action that is habitual."

That, says Hal Falcon, graphologist, is the logical principle of his book, "How to Analyze Handwriting" (Trident, $4.95). And in its pages he offers innumerable samples of handwriting, plus his analyses of the writers' characteristics, both conscious and subconscious. And in the process he makes known the basic techniques he has developed in his 30 years of practice.

Even those who regard graphology as only another parlor game might find the book fun. Those who take it more seriously will find Falcon's illustrations and explanations intriguing and perhaps even of real practical value.

WHEN THE 1972 "Vermont Life Engagement Book" arrives from Stephen Greene Press, the Brattleboro, Vt., publisher of books and Vermont Life Magazine, then the current year must be further along than we realized.

We find this regional art endlessly fascinating, but we must confess we miss the color that embellishes the illustrations on the same publisher's beautiful "Vermont Life Calendar." On the engagement book, only the cover pictures are in color — just enough to whet the appetite for more.

The Dialogue Is Heated

Conservationist Confronts His Foes At The Scenes Of Their Disputes

Those who missed John McPhee's entertaining and provocative profiles in recent issues of The New Yorker will be delighted to find them all in one book.

Here David Brower, former head of the Sierra Club, the archdruid of conservation, is pitted against three advisaries on three separate trips into the wilderness.

In the Cascades, he hikes with Charles Park, the mineral engineer who advocates mining the copper within the Glacier Park Wilderness. To Park privation of copper would be greater than privation of pristine wilderness in the modern scheme of things. Brower disagrees.

On Cumberland Island off the Georgia Coast, Brower and Charles Fraser, who plans a resort development on Cumberland, provide another pair of divergent views. Fraser call the conservationists druids, convinced they love trees more than people.

Sharpest clash comes on a boat trip down the Colorado with Floyd Dominy, U.S. commissioner of reclamation, stopped from construction of the Grand Canyon Dam after a bitter battle with Brower. Dominy thinks conservationists are hypocrites and he makes his feelings plain, none of which helps bridge the gap between him and Brower.

Brower's adversaries seem more real in this book. Brower himself, seems to hid his personality. He is the aloof and humorless one.

If the book has a hero it is McPhee himself. How did he persuade these adversaries to meet on the scenes of battle?

JOHN McPHEE
The real hero of his book

How, too, does he maintain his own fine objectivity?

The man has magic of persuasion and restraint. In addition, he writes superbly, providing marvelous descriptive passages as background for the heated dialogue.

Wright Morris Bids Again For National Book Award

This is a witty, bittersweet, hard-to-put-down story about Kermit, 11, and his great-uncle Floyd, 82, and their life together in a California trailer camp.

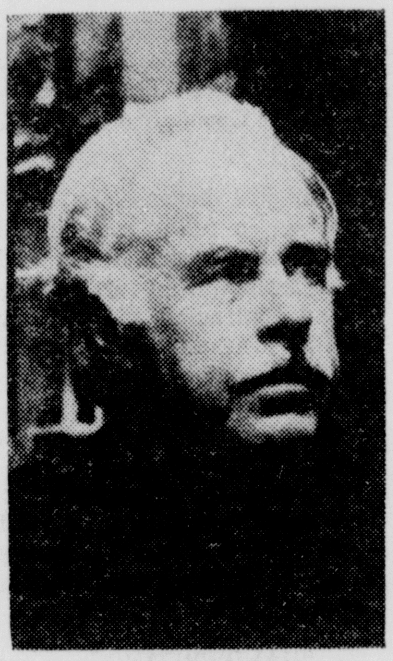
It is also a carefully-crafted, meticulously-structured novel about youth, old age, and the human condition.

For author Wright Morris (Mill Valley resident, San Francisco State College professor) has produced a rarity — a fast-paced modern novel about two sympathetic, believable characters.

Kermit, recently orphaned and consigned to his dismayed "next-of-kin" uncle, "has been nowhere, knows very little" and isn't really unhappy, though he chokes up and can't answer when his teacher (who thinks he's a nice, clean, polite boy) asks, "Are you happy?"

Uncle Floyd (who is school crossing guard and sometime caretaker for the trailer court) doesn't especially like kids, since "they all grow up to be hippies, criminals, drug addicts, sex maniacs, or basketball players."

But he is salt-of-the-earth Nebraskan — in spite of a lifetime spent denying his Bible-belt upbringing — and he accepts Kermit as his responsibility.



WRIGHT MORRIS
Convincing characters

They adapt to and tolerate each other.

Kermit helps him trim the hedge, shop for groceries, and learns to "reduce to eight the number of briquets necessary to broil four chuckburgers, leaving enough to percolate the coffee."

Kermit assuages his growing-boy hunger, and his loneliness, with Fig Newtons; covertly watches the few local hippies and is pleased when they call him "Man", (his uncle calls most people, including Kermit, "Boy"); plays with his yo-yo and says "Yes, ma'am" to the old ladies in the trailer court.

High point of the week for Kermit and Floyd is the Tuesday letter from Aunt Viola, Floyd's 87-year-old sister, who still lives in the family home in Nebraska.

Her sincere, Sunday-schoolish letters are addressed to Kermit. But Floyd, who confuses Kermit by describing Viola as a "silly child and a saintly women," reads them aloud — sometimes cursing, sometimes taking off his glasses "to rub his eyes with his knuckles."

A crisis in their lives — and in the plot — arrives with the telegram announcing Viola's death. Floyd decides to take his Maxwell (it still has the original paint) off the blocks, hook it to the trailer, and head for home.

One reason for going is his discovery that Kermit doesn't "look forward" to anything — not to "the whiteness of winter" or even to spring.

This confirms Floyd's suspicions that "California was a place to grow old and die in, but not grow up," and that "no man on whom the snow did not fall was worth a hill of beans."

The trip home is a journey, for Floyd, from old age to whatever is beyond, and, for Kermit, from boyhood to the beginning of manhood.

They encounter and are absorbed by a couple of one-dimensional hippies who bring about a flaming denouement — the cleansing "fire sermon" of the title.

The novel — especially the latter half — has enough symbols to satisfy most English Lit instructors, but Kermit and Floyd triumph and remain convincing characters to the end.

Wright Morris has an artist's eye for detail and a finely-tuned ear for Midwestern phrasing.

In 1957 Wright Morris won the National Book Award for "The Field of Vision"; now "Fire Sermon" should put him in the running for this year's prize.

Gothic Novel Of Suspense With Touch of Supernatural

FOOL'S APPLE by Sara Cardiff; Random House, 216 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This is one of those Gothic novels of suspense and romance that some detest and others revel in. And there is an added touch of the supernatural that is currently the "in" thing in fiction.

But the best thing "Fool's Apple" has going for it is an author who uses language adeptly and effectively. Although it seems this is a first novel, Sara Carfiff writes with extreme competence and considerable creativity.

The setting is the coast of New England. To Sedgewick, the family home, and to past tragedy, Elizabeth Frame returns with her husband Raoul. Against her will, Elizabeth begins to learn the causes for the tragedies of the past. But events she is seemingly powerless to control move her inevitably toward new catastrophes — the ruin of her marriage, the default of her reason, even the possible loss of her life.

All this melodrama is made quite palatable by Miss Cardiff's pleasing writing style.

THE MAGICIAN by Sol Stein; Delacorte Press, 258 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James Meldrum.

Sixteen-year-old Ed Japhet, the magician of this story, is the victim of social injustice and misunderstanding.

His father is a science teacher at the school Ed attends. This leads to complications within the plot because a normal father-son relationship is almost impossible. The novel, with its many digressions, still manages to proceed quite rapidly from sleight-of-hand on stage to sleight-of-justice in the courtroom. We have for a change not a story of racial prejudice, but one of private hate and jealousy.

The villain of the story is a young man named Urek, who can be said to be a product of his environment which of course includes his sterile home life. Urek, who leads a gang and runs a school extortion racket, is thwarted by Ed Japhet, who instead of giving in to the hoodlums' threats, defies them. Retaliation by Urek and his cohorts is swift and almost deadly, but the administration of justice is slow and unsure.

The adults in the story, including the boys' fathers, are a little unreal. Urek's father, however, does react to some events in a manner that is all too real.

Urek's defense lawyer is a sharp but shifty adversary for the state prosecution. Much of the story revolves around this attorney and his dreams of how to get the guilty off.

There are a few side stories which concern the love affairs of the young men in the story, but they do little to advance the plot except to show the differences in each boy's way of looking at life.

The story holds attention well, but each turn of events is almost predictable. Even so, each page is turned in hurried anticipation of what is to come next. The reader is allowed to see the whole picture as are most of the characters, but the big frustration is that the jury is kept in the dark.

There is a surprising ending with jungle justice being meted out. It comes upon the reader quite suddenly and could be said to be the beginning of another story.

Here's Happy Travel Book

Generally speaking, there is little more deadly reading than the travel book. But Kent Ruth's "Touring the Old West" is a happy exception.

Ruth, travel editor of the Daily Oklahoman, takes the reader vicariously to gold camps and old short-line railroads, to out-of-the-way villages and historic spots, to pioneer trails, to frontier military posts — a wide variety of places of interest in the West.

They really become places of interest with his enthusiastic and original handling. The reader soon finds himself wanting to visit them in person. And that is the mark of a first-rate travel book.

A Sewing Cabinet For The Gal Handy With Needle

The most rewarding thing about sewing is the quick results a girl can get for very little money.

Ten dollars worth of red wool can become an eye-catching coat worth all of $65. That extra yard of fabric can give you skirts, maybe three — skirts being what they are today. A husband or beau can be terribly impressed when the lady of his life appears for an evening out in a beguiling dress that she has made that very day.

It contains, in an orderly way, all of the 101 notions and tools every seamstress owns. The roomy drawers are ideal for fabrics, trim and dozens of miscellaneous items. On the inside of each door you have places for scissors, thread, patterns and other sewing tools, all plainly visible and within easy reach.

The top folds out to give you a large cutting and work surface, yet when the top is folded down the entire unit requires but little floor space.

Invisible casters make it mobile so it can be easily glided to any part of your home where you wish to work.

The entire cabinet is made of birch plywood. Or you may use any one of the other fancy plywoods now on the market.

The building is no trick at all when you use the easy-to-follow pattern. Easy-to-understand, step-by-step directions are included along with photos showing the various stages of construction.

THE COST? Very little when you build it yourself.

Some other patterns that are also worthy of your interest: No. 377, wall magazine rack, 50 cents; No. 349, ironing center, $1; No. 272, another sewing machine cabinet, $1, and No. 434, magazine end table, $1.

A BOOKFUL OF PROJECTS

Steve Ellingson, whose build-it-yourself patterns are featured weekly on the handyman's pages of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine, is now offering a new booklet picturing more than 450 do-it-yourself projects, available for 75 cents from Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409.

ACTRESS KAREN HUSTON smiles her approval of this sewing cabinet loaded with helpful aids for the needle-and-thread artist, and readily built with the help of a pattern by a home handyman.

Legs Great On Girls, But A Nuisance On Furniture

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

In my book, legs are for people not furniture.

Frequently, when looking through magazines, I find myself counting the number of legs in a room setting. It's a strange sport, I admit, but a fun one, even when you are sitting around talking design with professionals and architects.

ONE ARCHITECT I know spent many years with Frank Lloyd Wright, the great American architect. Wright disliked chairs that sat too high for comfort and often ordered an assistant to saw four inches from each chair leg!

While clients were usually startled, they eventually found that Wright was right. Which naturally gave him impetus to correct such an error when the occasion demanded.

This aversion to too many legs in a room forces one to be on the lookout for other supportive solutions. Happily, the 1970s provide nice alternatives.

Pedestal bases are pleasing sculptural forms that do their supporting job very well. Pedestals and recessed block supports make sense because they allow the person seated to have toe and heel room and, most important at a dining table, knee room!

Then there are curved tubular chrome bases, fiberglass molded shapes, wood wrapped in leather, steel rods formed into square frames and a variety of solutions in see-through plexiglass.

Pedestal concepts offer a great deal of versatility. The flowing flower-shaped pedestal is a familiar one. But there are ways to use rectangular forms as pedestals, and the two pieces shown at right prove that point.

The pieces are made by Metropolitan, a San Francisco-based company.

THE CHAIR shell is fabricated out of a polyester resin. But instead of hard edges at the corners, designer Jules Heumann gave the form softer rounder edges. This outer shell of polyester resin comes in colors (that's one of the advantages of molded resins), and the seating area rests upon a recessed pedestal or plinth of polished aluminum or wood.

Sofas and settees have been incorporated in the line, as well as five sizes in tables. Dacron seat cushions are planned so they are completely reversible, giving the seating areas a double life.

And what I especially like about the line is the absence of tricky sticky legs.

LEGS WERE ONCE considered a necessity for furniture. But no longer — not with creative designers around like Jules Heumann who came up with this solution to the too-many-legs problem for Metropolitan of San Francisco.

Hemlock Prized

The Flower That Inspires The Poets

Garden Page

Since the days of Homer and Sophocles, daffodils have been a favorite flower of writers and singers of literature and poetry.

But if those ancients, or the less distant William Shakespeare, William Wordsworth or Edmund Spenser, each of whom also helped immortalize the daffodil with his pen, could see these bulb flowers today, they would have to admit that their modern versions are even more spectacular than their poetic souls could foresee.

The familiar golden, trumpet-shape flowers have been joined by many other classes of daffodils. The shades of colors and differing flower forms are a sight to behold.

It comes as no surprise that daffodils are easy to grow; they provide a maximum of beauty with a minimum of attention. Best yet, by carefully selecting varieties, you can enjoy a succession of color from daffodils — in the garden and in indoor arrangements. The blooms are excellent cut flowers.

BASICALLY, THE blooming season for daffodils covers the period from February to April. By choosing some very early-flowering daffodils, planting early blooming varieties, some mid-season ones and late-season performers, weeks and weeks of beauty can be enjoyed.

Among the earliest daffodils to bloom are William the Silent, a mammoth yellow trumpet; and Matador, which produces up to seven flowers per stem. The larger flowers have soft yellow petals and a fiery-red cup.

Early-blooming varieties are numerous.

KING ALFRED, the popular yellow trumpet, is a best-seller, though others are gaining rapidly in stature. February Gold has star shaped petals, a long fluted orange trumpet with a ruffled orange lip. Fortune is a large-cupped yellow with a golden orange trumpet.

Ice Follies has broad white petals with a large, flat ivory cup. Actaea is the largest Poet Daffodil — white petals with a gold-edged red eye; and Pink Punch, a newer trumpet-type, sports white petals and a pink trumpet. All-white Thalia produces clusters of flowers on each stem and Texas is a double, whose soft yellow petals are marked by a clear scarlet center.

FOLLOWING the mid-season daffodils is a host of lovely, late-blooming choices: Mabel Taylor has white petals with a pink band on the frilled cup; Spencer Tracy, also white, has a multi-colored yellow flushed apricot edge.

Mount Hood is a huge pure white, with ruffled cup.

The planting season for daffodil bulbs is here, and nurseries will have a large supply available for Marin gardens. Each variety will be identified by a color reproduction of the bloom, so that you can see the colors and flower forms.

Your nurseryman can provide simple planting advice. Two important things to remember:

Plant several bulbs of each variety and mass them together in garden locations. A dozen bulbs planted at random appear lost in the garden when they bloom — grouped together in a few clusters will give a cheery effect.

Also, get quality bulbs. There are so-called bargain bulbs available, but they are only a bargain if a value is received in return.

THE BINKIE is a newcomer to the daffodil family, but a precocious youngster that produces a spectacular bloom highlighted by yellow petals and a white, ruffled trumpet. Nurseries have many varieties of daffodil bulbs now for planting this month. Your reward will be a soul-stirring show of garden color in the spring.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✔Tuberous begonias and fuchsias will appreciate a feeding this month. Check with your nurseryman for the recommended plant food.

✔Plant Calla Lillies this month. Replant any spring-blooming bulbs which you lifted and stored this summer.

✔Certain azaleas will begin to bloom this month and next. By planting these early varieties you can extend the flowering season for several months.

✔Plant such perennials as English primrose, African daisies, white candytuft, carnations, delphiniums, chrysanthemums and helianthemums now for color next spring and summer.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

Some recent releases from RCA:

BIZET-SHCHEDRIN "The Carmen Ballet" — Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops — RCA LSC-3129: Imagine a ballet score constructed from all the familiar tunes of Bizet's "Carmen," and played without woodwinds, brass or harp — just the string section and a total of 47 percussion instruments. Such is the scintillating score arranged by the Soviet composer Rodion Shchedrin and first released on the Melodiya-Angel label.

Who could be more appropriate to conduct the first U.S. recording, in improved stereo sound, than Arthur Fiedler?

This LP has been probably the most exciting listening experience with the classics I have had in the past year. Even if you can't stand "Carmen," give this sonic trip a chance on a good stereo system.

"HOT TUNA" — RCA LPS-4353: two members of the Jefferson Airplane, Jorma Kaukonen and Jack Casady, have joined with harmonica man Will Scarlett to form a delightful little acoustic rock group. The tapes were made at the New Orleans House in Berkeley and delve into old-timey favorites like "Hesitation Blues" and "How Long Blues," as well as several originals.

Very nice, relaxed, non-freaked-out music.

"THE BEST OF the Youngbloods" — RCA LPS-4399: The Youngbloods have been around the rock world since the early days of mid-60s, and have turned out a number of fine singles, five of which are featured here. Their sound is always tastefully balanced and much richer than the trio situation would seem to allow.

CARL ORFF: "Carmina Burana" — Boston Symphony conduced by Seiji Ozawa with soloists and New England Conservatory Chorus — RCA LSC-3161: "Rhythmic ostinato figures stretching over long, harmonically immobile spans" — that doesn't sound like the structure of one of the most popular 20th Century works of concert music, does it? But it is.

It is next to impossible to describe the sensational effect on audiences of the super-simplified, repetitional music of Orff, but it does work.

Orff's music using songs of the goliards — students who wandered Europe in the Middle Ages wining, wenching and creating poetry — finds its most sympathetic interpretation in choruses made up of today's students. The New England group fits the bill, and Ozawa strikes the last measure of fire into this already roaring choral — orchestral piece.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Otto Preminger, that movie director-producer noted for steely control of his projects and employes, is just about the last person one would think of as going into television, but he's made his first such commitment. He will produce, direct and — yes! — star in a two-hour film-for-television for the ABC network. He was a stage and screen actor years ago. The work is "Open Question," a courtroom drama written by none other than Louis Nizer of New York, one of the country's most famous barristers. Deals with a controversial spy trial. Production early in 1972.

Milburn Stone is due to go back to work in Hollywood in his Doc Adams role on "Gunsmoke." Open-heart surgery took him out of circulation last April. The first six episodes of the new season on CBS will feature Pat Hingle as a Dr. John Chapman, filling in for Doc Adams, supposedly on a trip back East to brush up on medical matters.

Dean Martin has joined other top entertainers as a golf impreario. The NBC star has become host of a new major pro golf tourney, the Dean Martin Tucson Open, which NBC will telecast from the Arizona city next Jan. 22-23.

Charles Nelson Reilly, who has logged a lot of television time on "The Dean Martin Show" and the vanished "Ghost and Mrs. Muir" series, has a new assignment in a recurring role for the second season of the CBS "Arnie" program. He will play a television personality known as the Giddyap Gourmet, neighbor of Arnie Herschel Bernardi.

Vince Edwards will be surrounded by veteran actresses Helen Hayes, Sylvia Sidney and Myrna Loy in his new movie, "Do Not Fold, Spindle or Mutilate."

Robert Reed — Rare TV Actor With Two Series

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tall Robert Reed is that rare actor who stars concurrently in two prime-time television series, "Mannix" and "The Brady Bunch."

While he plays Lieutenant Tobias on a recurring basis in "Mannix," the dapper performer is Papa Mike Brady in the situation comedy.

Working two shows at once isn't all that sets Reed apart from most television actors. He also doesn't take to other performers. That's why he lives in unfashionable Pasadena, "to get away from Hollywood."

EVEN SO, Reed lives in a luxurious 20-room home that beggars most of the palaces of Bel Air and Beverly Hills.

Though he looks impeccable on the air, off-screen Reed slops around in sneakers, blue jeans and T-shirt. His appearance strikes a discordant note against the setting of his home, formal gardens and reflecting pool, the latter complete with an imposing fountain.

REED WAS divorced several years ago but is visited frequently by his 15-year-old daughter, Karen, who lives in Chicago, where her father was born.

Also helping to fill the spacious home are Reed's parents who visit him regularly from a sprawling cattle ranch in Oklahoma.

A German shepherd named Sissy and a mutt who answers to Stubby are his favorite companions around the house — that is, when Reed hasn't brought a date home and pointed her in the direction of the kitchen.

WHILE HE employs full-time help, Reed doesn't have a cook. When his mother visits she fills the bill. Otherwise unsuspecting pretty girls who accept dates from the actor often find themselves fixing meals.

"I don't myself cook for two reasons," Reed says. "I don't know how, and I have no intention of learning."

Reed is possessed of an offbeat, quiet sense of humor. At parties he is most often alone in a corner talking to one or two close friends.

From time to time he hosts small dinner parties at home. The guest list is restricted to old friends (E. G. Marshall, for instance) and working acquaintances.

BECAUSE HIS schedule is crowded with two series, Reed is well organized. He reports to Paramount studios — where both shows are filmed — at 7 a.m. and generally is through for the day 12 hours later.

He says he enjoys working with the swarm of children on "The Brady Bunch" and playing an ideal father. But remarriage is not among his calendar of events in the near future.

"Any actor who changes wardrobes all day long as part of his job is on an ego trip if he enjoys getting dressed up on his own time," Reed says. "That's why you find me in jeans and sneakers."

THIS IS THE SEASON,

Turn, Turn, Turn.
From one channel to the next. After awhile it gets to be a little back breaking, wouldn't you say?

Like Please Don't Eat the Daisies. Gilligan's Island. Mayberry R.F.D. I Dream of Jeannie. I Love Lucy. Dragnet. And The 8 O'Clock Movie. Back to back. One after another. Beginning at 5 pm every weekday night.

So if watching TV starts to give you a pain in the back, turn to a friend. And relax!
